The Petes tried hard to get another goal and tie up the round, but could not find the nets again, although they made things decidedly interesting. Lindsay tied it up five minutes before the finish, when Norton scooped one from an almost impossible angle, the puck going into the nets off Flowers' skates.

Teams For To-day's Games.

LONDON, March 14.—The teams for to-day's international Rugby game at Belfast are:

Ireland—F. P. Montgomery, (Belfast), A. R. Foster (Derry), R. V. Jackson (Wanderers), M. A. Abrahem (Bective), J. P. Quinn (Dublin), V. MacNamara (Cork), R. A. Lloyd (Wanderers), W. S. Collopy (Bective), P. O. Connell (Bective), S. Parr (Wanderers), G. V. Killeen (Garryowen), W. Tyrell (Belfast), J. Taylor (Collegians), J. C. Dowse (Monkstown), J. J. Clune (Blackrock).

Wales—R. F. Williams (Cardiff), Ivor T. Davies (Llanelly), W. H. Evans (Llwynpia), J. Wetter (Newport), G. L. Hirst (Newport), R. Lloyd (Pontypool), J. McLewis (ardiff), Rev. Alban Davis (Llanelly), Percy Jones (Newport), H. Uzzell (Newport), D. Watts (Maesteg), Tom Williams (Swansea), T. C. Lloyd (Neath), Edgar Morgan (Swansea), J. B. Jones (Abertillery).

The following are a few paragraphs culled from the Athletic News, dealing with latest transfers and legislative points:

Chelsea to Watford.

It has been stated that negotiations for the transfer of Andrew Ormiston, the Chelsea reserve centre half-back, to Watford, were approaching completion, and by this time Ormiston will probably be a Watford player. He is a native of Peebles, and was one of the players David Calderhead took with him from Lincoln City to Chelsea. Except for the brief career of English, M'Connell, and the short-lived billiance of Calderhead the younger, Ormiston was Chelsea's regular centre half from September, 1909, to February of the present year, when he was succeeded by Hunter. He is not a brilliant footballer, but there are few sounder defensive half-backs.

Extraordinary Price Demanded For Harry Low's Transfer.

I told you last week about Harry Low, of Sunderland, being placed on the transfer list. I told , also that it was at his own request. What else I said, to tell you the truth, I don't remember, but this much I do know, it was the truth.

I may tell you this, however, that Sunderland are not very anxious to part with Harry and just to give you a little bit more information I don't think Harry is very anxious to get away.

A stiff price has been put upon his head. How could anybody expect it to be otherwise?

Middlesbrough "chipped" the Roker management, but the Aberdonian had no particular desire to make Ayresome park his headquarters.

A Colonial "Villain."

The Aston Villa Football Club have recently been taking active steps to secure new players. Last week the announcement was made that a forward named Suddes, from Spen Black and White, had been secured, and the ranks of the players will shortly be recruited by a New Zealander. He is already on his way here.

The Association game is making considerable headway in the colony, and some months ago an old Villa player who is resident here wrote to the directors informing them that he had seen a colonial centre-forward, who in his judgment was quite class enough for First League football in this country. Referring to the player in this quest ion who has been following the trade of a carpenter, the writer says:

"He is absolutely the outstanding figure in New Zealand football. The player, whose name is Boyer, is 27 years old, and of splendid physique, being six feet in height and weighing 13 stone."

Everton's Capture.

Negotiations have been satisfactorily concluded between Glasgow Rangers and Everton for an exchaneg of players. Everton secured the transfer from the Rangers of Robert Parker, the centre forward who has been so much sought after, and Glasgow Rangers received John Fulton, a back, whom Everton obtained from Greenock Morton. It is understood that Everton in addition, paid a sum of money to Glasgow Rangers.

PETERBORO GETS A GOOD BREAK IN THE LEAGUE SCHEDULE

Well looked after in Saturday Sunday and Holiday Games. Opens at Home on March 14th, with the London Cockney's as the Attraction.

The Peterborough Ball Club is satisfied with the schedule as passed by the Canadian League meeting the other day. The Petes are well looked after in the matter of holiday, Saturday and Sunday games, and have nothing to complain of. They open in Erie on May 7th and have a Saturday and Sunday game in the town across the line. London will open the local season on May 14. The Petes play in Brantford on July 1st, in Erie on July 4th, in London on London's Civic Holiday and in Ottawa on Labour Day, while Erie will be here on May 24th and Ottawa on Peterborough's Civic Holiday. FOOTBALL

On Monday, March 16th a general meeting will be held at the Y.M.C.A. at 8 o'clock. Every football player and all those interested in this sport kindly attend. This meeting is not called for any special club, but it is for every club in Peterborough, to discuss an important matter regarding football for the coming season.

Every footballer in the city is asked to attend a meeting in the Y.M.C.A. on Monday night at 8 o'clock. The Peterborough Athletic Club will run a city soccer league if enough players come out to this meeting and show themselves willing to help.—H. Smith, Secretary.

ATHLETIC CLUB WILL MEET WEDNESDAY

There will be a general meeting of the Peterborough Athletic Club in the Y.M.C.A. on Wednesday evening, next, March 18th, when every member is expected to be present, as most important business is to come up. All those interested in the club and who wish to join should be on hand at this meeting, which will commence at 8 o'clock, sharp.

OFFICERS APPOINTED FOR CRICKET CLUB

Prospects For Coming Year Are Especially Bright

The Peterborough Cricket Club held a very successful meeting last evening in the Y.M.C.A. There was a large and representative body present and the prospects for the coming season are very bright, indeed. The officers were all re-elected and some more added. The following is a list of proposed officers:

Honorary President—Judge Hurcke.
Vice Presidents — Mr. Burnham, Major Cooper, Mr. C. E. Pennefather, Mr. J. H. Stratton, E. G. Patterson, Richard Hall, E. A. Peck, Miles Hall, G. Hatton, W. R. Travers, Mayor Buller, J. Crane, G. N. Gordon, W. H. Hill, F. M. Dela Fosse.

Mr. Frank Whitehouse was re-elected Captain, Mr. G. V. Boon, Vice Captain, and Mr. J. H. Thompson, 300 Rubidge Street, was re-elected Secretary Treasurer.

The regular committee appointed consists of the following gentlemen: Messrs. Rose, Lawrence, Parkins, Foster, Hall and Bevan.

The report of last year's work was discussed.

It is an assured fact that the Peterborough Cricket Club will have a very strong eleven this year, as many talented players have been added to the list.

It was decided to hold a progressive euchre party on April 15th. The question of getting water on to the Nicholls Oval was discussed, and if this could be arranged it would keep the ground in a good state of preservation during the dry months, as a well watered pitch is an absolute necessity.

The suggestion was made that grounds be bought by the Club, but owing to the financial and other conditions of the Club, which has made remarkable progress, and which has only been re-inaugurated during the past year, the matter was allowed to stand until another time.

Another general meeting of the Club will be held in two weeks' time.

Two Montreal Policemen Murdered by Four Burglars — Constables Bourdon and Guyon were despatched to discover burglars who were supposed to be hurrying to that City, and in the attempt to beat them off were both fatally shot. The above map shows Laurent where the constables were shot by the burglars. Constables returning in a patrol from the C. N. R. tunnel discovered the bodies of Guyon and Bourdon.

MANY MICROBES FOUND ON MUCH USED CURRENCY

The soiled bank note or Dominion note, as a medium of infection, is to be eliminated. A method for destroying bacteria without injury to the notes has been discovered as a result of a series of tests carried on by Mr. J. E. Rourke, comptroller of currency, under the direction of Hon. W. T. White, minister of finance. Mr. Rourke was assisted by Dr. C. H. Higgins, pathologist to the department of agriculture.

When the Bank Act was under consideration last year, Dr. Steele, member for South Perth, brought prominently to the attention of the banking and commerce committee the question of the sterilization of paper currency with the object of avoiding the transmission of disease through soiled and filthy bank and Dominion notes. The matter was fully discussed in the committee, and as the Bank Act left the House of Commons it contained a clause making it mandatory upon the banks to adopt measures for the sterilization of all paper currency coming into their possession before re-issue to the public. The Senate changed this clause so as to make it permissive to the treasury board to make regulations respecting the manner of sterilization, and the minister of finance promised to take the matter up during recess.

Conduct Experiments.

For many months past experiments have been conducted with a view to ascertaining a method which would be efficient for the sterilization of, and at the same time would not have an injurious effect upon, the paper currency. After prolonged investigation the department has now reached what it believes to be a solution of the question.

In his report to the minister of finance, Mr. Rourke states that a bacteriological examination of a number of Dominion notes, withdrawn from circulation, which was conducted by Dr. Higgins, revealed the presence of an average of twenty thousand living bacteria on each note. It was also found that the notes contained a fatty extract which would tend to retain, for an indefinite period, any infection coming in contact with it.

Test of Sterilization.

A test was made of sterilization with formaldehyde gas. The notes were placed in the centre of packages containing one hundred each, tightly gas in an iron box for a period of seventeen hours. The result was complete sterilization but ther were toxic, injurious and unpleasant effects from them as which could only be controlled by the installation of an expensive vacuum apparatus.

A heat test was then tried, the notes being subjected to a uniform temperature of eighty degrees centigrade (176 degrees Fahrenheit) for a period of four hours. The result of this was successful, Dr. Higgins reported.

Paper Not Deteriorated.

The tests of paper after an exposure to a temperature of 176 degrees Fahrenheit for 120 hours showed little or no deterioration.

It is understood that the Treasury Board will act upon this report at an early date. It is stated in the report that a special automatic electric sterilization apparatus with thermostat attachment sufficiently large to hold six thousand notes can be supplied at a cost approximately $35 and can be operated at about one cent per hour. Dr. Higgins also recommends that all sponges used in the handling of paper money be moistened with a disinfectant.

The Finance Department has already completed arrangements whereby after April 1st next, banks at places where there is no assistant receiver-general's office, may transmit, at the bank's risk and expense, mutilated or unclean Dominion notes of denominations up to $5 to the nearest receiver-general, receiving in exchange therefor, without expense to the bank, an equal amount of new Dominion notes in such denominations up to $5 as the banks may desire.

COAL TRUST BROKEN

Special to The Examiner.

COLUMBUS, O., March 14—Special United States District Court, composed of three Federal Judges, has handed down a formal decree ordering a dissolution of the soft coal trust—Hocking Valley, Cheasepeake, and Ohio and Lakeshore Railways were given sixty days in which to dispose of their holdings in the Sunday Creek Coal Co.

TO APPEAL DECISION

Mr. D. O'Connell told an Examiner reporter this morning that he is going to appeal the decision of Magistrate Dumble, who, it will be remembered, imposed a fine of $100 on Mr. H. Clayton, proprietor of the Royal Theatre, for allowing a child under the age of fifteen, unaccompanied by an adult, to witness a performance of the 'movies.'

The appeal will be heard before His Honour Judge Haycke.

ANNIVERSARY OF SAMOAN DISASTER

Special to the Examiner.

WASHINGTON, D.C., March 16—Among the many veteran officers of the navy who reside in this City today was recalled as the twenty-fifth anniversary of the great Samoan hurricane, which resulted in one of the most lamentable disasters that ever befell the United States navy in time of peace. The hurricane struck Apia in the Samoan Islands, on March 16, 1889, and raged with great fury for two days. In the harbour of Apia at the time were warships of the United States, German and British navies. The United States warships Nipsic, Vandalia and Trenton were blown ashore and wrecked, as were also the ships Olga, Adler and Eber, of the German navy. The British warship Calliope put to sea and escaped the disaster. Fifty officers and men of the United States ships were lost, among them Captain Schoonmaker of the Vandalia.

A DRY SHAMPOO.

Mix together one cup unsifted cornmeal, one-half cup magnesia and one tablespoonful of salt. Stir until thoroughly blended, and heat. When quite warm rub through the hair and over the scalp until it is thoroughly covered. Brush out the mixture with a hair brush and make a second application. Brush out again and toss the hair in the wind and sun to free it from every particle. This is said to be excellent for oily hair.

HIT BY TIDAL WAVE

Province of Kuban Devastated by a Terrific Storm

MORE THAN 250 ARE DEAD

EKATERINODAR, Russia, March 16.—More than 100 persons perished yesterday in the inundation of the towns of Stanitza and Achtyrskaja by a tidal wave from the Sea of Azov. The wave struck the towns during a violent hurricane which swept the Province of Kuban.

Over 150 persons also were drowned in floods in Yasenkaja.

A dam collapsed in the town of Temryuk, situated on the Taman Peninsula, 98 miles northwest of this city, flooding the greater part of the city and drowning many persons.

Temryuk is a historic town with a population of 16,000. It once was the seat of the Turkish fortress, Adasa.

The towns of Stanitza, Achtyrskaja and Yasenkaja do not appear on most of the maps but are small communities bordering on the Sea of Azov.

The Province of Kuban, in which the stricken towns are located, is in Southern Russia, and has coast lines on both the Black Sea and the Sea of Azov. The population of the province aggregates about 2,000,000 persons, of whom two-fifths are Cossacks. The country is extremely fertile and extensively used in the culture of grain. Cattle breedings also is carried on on a large scale.

Storm Break Communication.

ST. PETERSBURG, March 16.—The hurricane which swept the Province of Kuban, Southern Russia, on Saturday, was so violent that all the telegraph lines were badly damaged, making communication almost impossible. Meagre despatches received yesterday reported that 1,500 lives had been lost as the result of the tidal wave from the Sea of Azov, but no reliable details of the disaster came through.

Dust In Snowstorm.

TIFLIS, Russia, March 16. — An unusual phenomenon occurred here and in adjacent towns yesterday. The sky was covered early in the morning with dark yellow clouds and fog. Later there was a heavy snowfall mixed with dust, which covered the ground in a thick layer of pasty mud. The phenomenon is attributed to storms in the Baku district, where the wind raised such tremendous clouds of dust.

INVENTION A SUCCESS.

Marconi's Wireless Telephone Spoke From Sicily to Canada.

ROME, March 16. — Marconi has achieved notable successes with long-distance wireless telephonic communication. The inventor has been conducting a series of experiments from Italian warships on the high seas. During these experiments he used his newly-devised high sounding receivers and connection with his phonographic registers and repeaters. On the first day while on warship off the Sicilian coast Marconi received very clear messages from Clifden, 1,750 miles away. Next evening the fleet received signals from Canada, 4,062 miles distant, by means of wireless telephony. On the last day radio telephonic conversation between warships in motion succeeded perfectly with a minimum expenditure of energy.

Communication under these conditions was kept up between vessels 45 miles apart and up to 15 miles where land interposed between communicating vessels. Conversation kept up without a break, and was a great success for a spell of twelve hours.

TO RAISE $2,000,000.

Premier Morris of Newfoundland Plans Railroad Development.

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld., March 16.—Much interest was expressed yesterday in the efforts of the colonial Government to negotiate a loan of $2,000,000 for railroad development to which the administration is pledged. Sir Edward Morris, the Premier, left for London Saturday by way of New York, and Governor W. E. Davidson will leave direct for Liverpool on Wednesday for the purpose of trying to raise the money.

Before Sir Edward left the appointment was announced of Richard Anderson Squires as Minister of Justice, succeeding Donald Morrison, who declined reappointment. Sydney Darius Blandford was also reappointed Minister of Agriculture. Both filled empty places in the Legislative Council, and took portfolios that have been vacant since Morrison and Blandford were defeated in the general election last November.

Lashes For Wife-Beater.

GUELPH, March 16.—Peter Driscoll, who lives on Bay street, it is alleged, went home drunk a few nights ago and beat his wife into insensibility, so badly that she was unable to appear against him in court until Saturday. She pleaded hard for her husband's release, but Magistrate Watt gave him ten days in jail and 10 cat-o'-nine-tails, and if he appears before him again on a similar charge the term will be doubled. The Driscolls have nine children, the youngest an infant of four months.

There are twenty-three musical numbers in John C. Fisher's sensational musical comedy "The Red Rose," which comes to the Grand Opera House next Thursday, March 19. Some are of the catchy type, including "Come Along Ma Cherie," "The Queen of Vanity Fair"; 'Men! Men! Men!" 'I'd Like to to go on a Honeymoon With You," "Bohemia," "The Land of the Free," 'The Students' Glide" and many others. The seat sale opens to-morrow (Tuesday) morning.

McClay Taken To The Central

Prisoner Left on the 4.33 Train on Saturday

John McClay, who was sentenced to serve one year in the Ontario Reformatory by His Honour Judge Huycke, was taken to that institution on Saturday afternoon.

He was taken to the C.P.R. station by Turnkey Ray, to whom he was handcuffed, and placed aboard hte 4.33 for Toronto, on the first coach, under the charge of a Warden of the Central, who had several other prisoners under his charge.

REVIVAL MEETINGS IN MARK STREET CHURCH

Very successful revival services have been conducted at the Mark Street Methodist Church during the past two weeks. The services have been largely attended, with excellent results.

The Rev. R. G. Peever, Rev. R. Pogue, Rev. J. Rollins, Rev. J. Clarry and Adjutant McElhiney have assisted at the services and Mr. Mulligan has rendered several solos.

The services will be continued for three more nights this week.

WORLD GATHERING OF DENTISTS

Special to The Examiner.

CHICAGO, Ill., March 16.—Chicago is preparing for the entertainment, next week, of one of the largest and most representative gatherings of leaders of the dental profession ever held in this or any other country. The occasion will be an international conference in connetion with the celebration of the 50th anniversary of the founding of the Illinois State Dental Society. More than 2,000 dentists and instructors in dentistry are expected here from all parts of the United States, from Canada and from Europe. A leading feature of the gathering will be a series of clinics in which the latest will demonstrate the recent progress in dentistry in his State or country. Another feature will be an elaborate exhibition of dental appliances and materials.

SEEKS $250,000 AS HEART BALM

Special Wire to The Examiner:

BOSTON, Mass., March 16 — The $150,000 breach of promise suit brought by Miss Mary I. Sullivan of Needham, Mass., against John Bross Lloyd, a young Chicago millionaire, was called in Court here today, but owing to the fact that the defendant is travelling abroad it is expected the trial of the case will go over until summer. Lloyd is a grandson of a former lieutenant governor of Illinois. It is said he made the acquaintance of Miss Sullivan while he was a student at Harvard.

MILITIA OFFICER FORCES TRIAL

Special Wire to The Examiner:

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., March 16—Much interest is manifested in militia circles in the case of Sergeant Edwin Ball, of the Indian National Guard, who was arraigned in the criminal court here to-day to stand trial on a charge of having shot and killed Walter Dowell, a private in the guard. The killing occurred last July, while the militia was in camp at Fort Benjamin Harrison, near the City. Dowell was suspected of smuggling liquor into the camp, and Sergeant Ball was sent to hunt for him in the city and place him under arrest. He arrested Dowell and started for the camp with him. On the way Dowell leaped from the car and attempted to escape. Ball fired and fatally wounded him. The killing gave rise to a controversy as to whether the accused officer should be tried by the criminal court or by a military courtmartial. Judge Markey decided that the trial should take place in the criminal court.

MRS. W. W. LAKE

Tells Others How to Get Strong and Well.

Mrs. W. W. Lake of the Aberdeen, Miss., says: "The grippe had left me in a weak, run-down condition from which I suffered for some time. I tried different remedies but nothing seemed to do me any good until I took Vinol, from which I received great benefit. My cough is almost well again, and I am glad to recommend Vinol to others who suffer as I did."

Mrs. Lake's recovery was due to the combined action of the medicinal elements extracted from cods' livers—combined with the blood making and strength creating properties of Vinol, and her cough disappeared as a natural result.

We guarantee that Vinol will do all we claim and will pay back your money if Vinol does not satisfy you. McDermid & Jury, druggists, corner George and Charlotte Streets; also Payne's drug store, corner George and Simcoe Streets.

REGIONS WITH MAJORITY.

Premier Giolitti Has No Special Policy So Quits Office.

ROME, March 16.—Giolitti, the most powerful Italian statesman since Cavour and Crispi, has fallen from power after exactly three years, since by the raising of his mayor he had a majority in the Chamber to overthrow the Cabinet of Limasol. In these three years the Piedmontese Premier brought to a conclusion two great events, the conquest of Libya (Tripoli) and the granting of universal suffrage, including illiterates.

The peculiarity of Giolitti always has been that of leaving power without losing his majority, and even now he had just received a vote of over 200 majority on appropriations for the occupation of Libya. He himself suggested to the Radical groups belonging to his supporters to take such action as would justify his resignation from the Cabinet, as he thinks the program which he has undertaken and accomplished, and the longer presence in a Government of the same men with the same political situation, would be sterile of fruitful results.

Italy will therefore have a repetition of what has already happened twice before when he left power. A Cabinet will be formed, but Giolitti, although not at the helm, will be real master of the majority, so that those in power will retain such only as long as suits him. When the occasion seems to him favorable for a new Administration under his leadership he will come forward and the supporters of the then Cabinet will vanish. Baron Sonnino, the cleverest and most obstinate head of the Opposition against Giolitti, has experienced this twice. Giolitti himself suggested his rival to the King as the only man fitted to form a Cabinet, and one hundred days after he overturned him he made use of the same manoeuvre when Sonnino was again in power, and again defeated him after one hundred days.

New King's Printer.

OTTAWA, March 16.—J. B. Taché, of St. Hyacinthe, Que., has been appointed King's printer, in succession to the late W. C. Parmelee.

SCREAMED WITH THE TERRIBLE PAIN

ST. THOMAS, ONT., April 1st, 1913.

"In 1911, I was laid up with Kidney Trouble and not able to get out of my chair. Had tried many kidney remedies without satisfactory results. The pain was excruciating and my screams could be heard on the street. One day a friend from Ottawa came to see me, and when he found me in such poor health, said he would send me a sample of "Fruit-a-tives", which he did and I commenced taking them. The results were so apparent with the first few doses that I continued to take "Fruit-a-tives" and was completely restored to my normal state of health. I would strongly advise anyone suffering with Kidney Trouble to take "Fruit-a-tives" and cure themselves" CHARLES CALVERT.

By ANNA KATHARINE GREEN

A light wall, painted to match the house, extended without break to the adjoining building, a structure equal to the other in age and dimensions, but differing in all other respects as much as neglect and misuse could make it. Grey and forbidding, it towered in its place, a perfect foil to the attractive dwelling whose single step I now mounted with cheerful composure.

What should I have thought if at that moment I had been told that appearances were deceitful, and that there were many persons then living who, if left to their choice, would prefer life in the dismal walls from which I had instinctively turned, to a single night spent in the promising house I was so eager to enter.

An old serving-man, with a countenance which struck me pleasantly enough at the time, opened the door in response to my ring, only to make instant way for Mayor Packard, who advanced from some nearby room to greet me. By this thoughtful attention I was spared the embarrassment from which I might otherwise have suffered.

His few words of greeting set me entirely at ease, and I was quite ready to follow him when a moment later he invited me to meet Mrs. Packard.

"I can promise you that the reception you naturally look for," said he, as he led me around the stair toward an opening at their rear, "but she's a kind woman and can not but be struck with your kind spirit and quiet manner."

Happily I was not called upon to answer, for at that moment the door swung open and he ushered me into a room flooded brilliantly with the last rays of the setting sun. The woman who sat in its glow made an instant and permanent impression upon me. No one could look intently upon her without feeling that here was a woman of individuality and power, overshadowed at present by the deepest melancholy. As she rose and faced us I noticed instantly that her husband had not exaggerated her state of mind. Emotion of no ordinary nature disturbed the lines of her countenance and rubbed her naturally fine figure of a goodly portion of its dignity and grace; and though she immediately controlled herself and assumed the imposing aspect of a highly trained woman, ready, if not eager, to welcome an intruding guest, I could not easily forget the drawn look about mouth and eyes which, in the first instant of our meeting, had distorted features naturally harmonious and beautifully serene.

I am sure her husband had observed it also, for his voice trembled slightly as he addressed her.

"I have brought you a companion, Olympia,—one whose business and pleasure it will be to remain with you while I am making speeches a hundred miles away. Do you not see reason for thanking me?" This last question he pointed with a glance in my direction, which drew her attention and caused her to give me a kindly look.

I met her eyes fairly. They were large and grey, and meant for smiling; eyes that, with a happy heart behind them, would illume her own beauty and create joy in those upon whom they fell. But to-day, nothing but question lived in their dark and uneasy depths, and it was for me to face that question and give no sign of what the moment was to me.

"I think—I am sure, that my thanks are due you," she courteously replied, with a quick turn toward her husband, expressive of confidence, and, as I thought, of love. "I dreaded being left alone."

He drew a deep breath of relief; we both did; then we talked a little, after which Mayor Packard found some excuse for taking me from the room.

"Now for the few words you requested," said he; and, preceding me down the hall, he led me into what he called his study.

I noted one thing, and only one thing, on entering this place. That was the presence of a young man who sat at a distant table reading and making notes. But as Mayor Packard took no notice of him, knowing and expecting him to be there, no doubt, I, with a pardonable confusion, withdrew my eyes from the handsomest face I had ever seen, and, noting that my employer had stopped before a type-writer's table, I took my place at his side, without knowing very well what this move meant or what he expected me to do there.

I was not long left in doubt. With a gesture toward the type-writer, he asked me if I was accustomed to its use; and when I acknowledged some sort of acquaintance with it, he drew an unanswered letter from a pile on the table and requested me to copy it as a sample.

I immediately sat down before the type-writer. It was in something of a maze, but felt that I must follow his lead. As I proceed to insert the paper and lay out the copy to hand, he crossed over to the young man at the other end of the room and began a short conversation which ended in some trivial demand that sent the young man from the room. As the door closed behind him Mayor Packard returned to my side.

"Keep on with your work and never mind mistakes," said he. "What I want is to hear the questions you told me to expect from you if you stayed."

Seemingly Mayor Packard did not wish this young man to know my position in the house. Was it possible he did not wholly trust him? My hands trembled from the machine and I was about to turn and give my full thought to what I had to say. But pride checked the impulse. "No," I muttered in quick dissuasion, to myself. "He must see that I can do two things at once and do both well." And so I went on with the letter.

"When," I asked, "did you first see the change in Mrs. Packard?"

"On Tuesday afternoon about this time."

"What happened on that day? Had she been out?"

"Yes, I think she told me later that she had been out."

"Do you know where?"

"To some concert, I believe. I did not press her with questions, Miss Saunders; I am a poor inquisitor."

Click, click; the machine was working admirably.

"Have you reason to think," I now demanded, "that she brought her unhappiness in with her when she returned from that concert?"

"No, for when I returned home myself, as I did earlier than usual that night, I heard her laughing with the child in the nursery. It was afterward, some few minutes afterward, that I came upon her sitting in such a daze of misery that she did not recognise me when I spoke to her. I thought it was a passing mood at the time; she is a sensitive woman and she had been reading—I saw the book lying on the floor at her side; but when, having recovered from her dejection—a dejection, mind you, which she would neither acknowledge nor explain—she accompanied me out to dinner, she showed even more feeling on our return, shrinking unaccountably from leaving the carriage and showing, not only in this way but in others, a very evident distaste to re-enter her own house. Now, whatever hold I still retain upon her is of so slight a nature that I am afraid every day she will leave me."

"Leave you!"

My fingers paused; my astonishment had got the better of me.

"Yes; it is as bad as that. I don't know what day you will send me a telegram of three words, 'She has gone.' Yet she loves me, really and truly loves me. That is the mystery of it. More than this, her very heart-strings are knit up with those of our child."

"Mayor Packard,"—I had resumed work,—"was any letter delivered to her that day?"

"That I can not say."

Fact one for me to establish.

"The wives of men like you—men much before the world, men in the thick of strife, social and political—often receive letters of a very threatening character."

"She would have shown me any such, if only to put me on my guard. She is physically a very brave woman and not at all nervous."

"Those letters sometimes assume the shape of calumny. Your character may have been attacked."

"She believes in my character and would have given me an opportunity to vindicate myself. I have every confidence in my wife's sense of justice."

I experienced a thrill of admiration for the appreciation he evinced in those words. Yet I pursued the subject resolutely.

"Have you an enemy, Mayor Packard? Any real and downright enemy capable of a deep and serious attempt at destroying your happiness?"

"None that know of, Miss Saunders. I have political enemies, of course—men who, influenced by party feeling, are not above attacking methods and possibly my official reputation; but personal ones—wretches willing to stab in my homelife and affections, that I cannot believe. My life has been an open book. I have harmed no man knowingly and, as far as I know, no man has ever cherished a wish to injure me."

"Who constitute your household? How many servants do you keep and how long have they been with you?"

"Now you exact details with which only Mrs. Packard is conversant. I don't know anything about the servants. I do not interest myself much in matters purely domestic, and Mrs. Packard spares me. You will have to observe the servants yourself."

I made another note in my mind while inquiring:

"Who is the young men who was here just now? He has an uncommon face."

"A handsome one, do you mean?"

"Yes, and—well, what I should call distinctly clever."

"He is clever. My secretary, Miss Saunders. He helps me in my increased duties; has, in a way, charge of my campaign; reads, sorts and sometimes answers my letters. Just now he is arranging my speeches—fitting them to the local requirements of the several audiences I shall be called upon to address. He knows mankind like a book. I shall never give the wrong speech to the wrong people while he is with me."

"Well, yes. He is very good company, or would have been if, in the week he has been in the house, I had been in better mood to enjoy him. He is a capital story-teller."

"He has been here a week?"

"Yes, or almost."

"Came here last Tuesday, didn't he?"

"Yes, I believe that was the day."

"Toward afternoon?"

"No, he came early; soon after breakfast, in fact."

"Does your wife like him?"

His Honor gave a start, flushed (I can sometimes see a great deal even while very busily occupied) and answered without anger, but with a good deal of pride:

"I doubt if Mrs. Packard more than knows of his presence. She does not come to this room."

"And he does not sit at your table?"

"No; I must have some few minutes in the day free from the suggestion of politics. Mr. Steele can safely be left out of our discussion. He does not even sleep in the house."

The note I made at this was very emphatic.

"You should know," said I; then quickly: "Tuesday was the day Mrs. Packard first showed the change you observed in her?"

"Yes, I think so; but that is a coincidence only. She takes no interest in this young man; scarcely noticed him when I introduced him; just bowed to him over her shoulder; she was fastening on our little one's cap. Usually she is extremely courteous to strangers, but she was abstracted, positively abstracted at that moment. I wondered at it, for he usually makes a stir wherever he goes. But my wife cares little for beauty in a man; I doubt if she noticed his looks at all. She did not catch his name, I remember."

"Pardon me—what is that you say?"

"She did not catch his name, for later she asked me what it was."

"Tell me about that, Mr. Packard."

"It is immaterial; but I am ready to answer all your questions. It was while we were out dining. Chance threw us together, and to fill up the moment she asked me the name of the young man I had brought into the library that morning. I told her and explained his position and the long training he had had in local politics. She listened, but not as closely as she did to the music. Oh! she takes no interest in him. I wish she did; his stories might amuse her."

I did not pursue the subject. Taking out the letter I had been writing, I held it out for his inspection, with the remark:

"More copy, please, Mayor Packard."

CHAPTER III.
IN THE GABLE WINDOW.

A few minutes later I was tripping upstairs in the wake of a smart young maid whom Mayor Packard had addressed as Elken. I liked this girl at first sight and, as I followed her up one flight, then another, to the room which had been chosen for me, the hurried glimpses I had of her bright and candid face suggested that in this especial member of the household I might hope to find a friend and helper in case friendship and help were needed in the blind task to which I stood committed. But I soon saw cause—or thought I did—to change this opinion. When she turned on me at the door of my room, a small one at the extreme end of the third floor, I had an opportunity of meeting her eyes. The interest in her look was not the simple one to be expected. In another person in other circumstances I should have characterized her glance as one of inquiry and wonder. But neither inquiry nor wonder described the present situation, and I put myself upon guard.

Seeing me look her way, she flushed, and, throwing wide the door, remarked in the pleasantest of tones:

"This is your room. Mrs. Packard says that if it is not large enough or does not seem pleasant to you, she will will find you another one to-morrow."

"It's very pleasant and quite large enough," I confidently replied, after a hasty look about me. "I could not be more comfortable."

She smiled, a trifle broadly for the occasion, I thought, and patted a pillow here and twitched a curtain there, as she remarked with a certain emphasis:

"I'm sure you will be comfortable. There's nobody using this floor but Lotty and the baby, but you don't look as if you would be easily frightened."

Astonished, not so much by her words as by the furtive look she gave me, I laughed as I repeated:

"Frightened! What should frighten me?"

"Oh, nothing." Her back was to me now, but I felt that I knew her very look. "Nothing, of course. If you're not timid you won't mind sleeping so far away from every one. Then, we are always within call. The attic door is just a few steps off. We'll have it unlocked and you can come up—if you feel like it at any time. We'll understand."

Understand! I eyed her as she again looked my way, with some of my curiosity if not wonder.

A WONDERFUL CURE OF AN ABSCESS BY Burdock Blood Bitters.

Mr. A. W. Dryden, Amherst, N.S., writes:—"I am going to tell you what Burdock Blood Bitters has done for us. My son "Vance," when only nine months old, got an abscess on his cheek bone. I took him to a doctor in St. John, N.B., and he lanced it, and told me it would get well in a few days, and wanted me to keep it squeezed out. It did not seem to get any better, so my wife took him back. The Doctor told her to take him home and it would soon get better. It would gather and break, and it went on that way until he was over four years old.

"He lost four pieces of bone out of where it was lanced, and two pieces came from his mouth; he has lost all of his cheek bone, and his eye was drawn down. I took him to doctors in St. John, Moncton, and Amherst, and all wanted me to let him go under an operation. He was so small I told them that if he was going to die he might as well die as he was to go there and be all cut to pieces, so I declined to have the operation done. I told them I was going to try Burdock Blood Bitters, as I had heard my mother talk so much about it. I got a bottle, and when it was about half gone noticed it was doing good, and before many days the sore stopped running, and healed up, and the abscess has never broken out again. This happened nearly six years ago, so you can see I have great faith in Burdock Blood Bitters, and I can say with all my heart that it is the best blood medicine in the world."

EARTH TO BECOME MAN'S PARADISE

How This Will Be Done Is the Gospel Message.

THE WORLD'S REGENERATIO

The Earthly Paradise—Lost Through Disobedience—Redeemed at Calvary —Messiah's Great Work— The Restoration of Paradise— "The Story of the Cross"—Importance of Character-Development—Its Effect on the Future Life—The Heavenly Paradise— Who May Attain It—How—The Alternative of Paradise, the Second Death, Everlasting Destruction.

[The matter under this heading is supplied by the Pastor Russell Lecture Bureau, who conduct the Brooklyn Tabernacle (unsectarian) Bible Studies, and who have arranged for its insertion.]

March 15. — Pastor Russell today depicted the beauties of Paradise, as well presented in his free Photo-Drama. His text was, "I will make the place of My feet glorious." (Isaiah 60:13.) He said:

Paradise is another name for the Garden of Eden, the abode of bliss. It was lost through the sin of our first parents, but the gracious promise of our great Creator is that this condition of earthly bliss shall be re-established—not merely in a little corner of the earth, but that the whole earth shall become the Paradise of God. Heaven is God's Throne and the earth is His footstool, and He assures us, "I will make the place of My feet glorious"—"in due time." How this will be done is the Gospel Message.

The Divine Promise to Father Abraham, that all the families of the earth shall be blessed through his Seed, includes the thought of man's full restoration to Divine favor—as before he sinned and fell, before Paradise was lost, before man came under the curse, or sentence, of death. The Jews hoped that Messiah would come and constitute their nation the earthly Kingdom of God and re-establish Paradise with Palestine as its centre. They expected that under His wise ministration, using their nation as His instruments, the Divine Law would extend to all and, by bringing all people into harmony with God, would gradually bring all back to the Paradise state.

It was in full harmony with this that the dying thief asked the Lord to remember him when He should come into His Kingdom—the Kingdom whose dominion would establish righteousness in the earth, and thus convert the world, under Divine favor, into the Paradise of God. Our Lord's answer was that verily, truly, his request should be granted —the thief would yet be with Him in Paradise. Paradise has not yet been established; for God's Kingdom has not yet come to earth; it delays until a certain work for the Church shall be accomplished.

It is not the Divine purpose to make of the nation of Israel God's Kingdom in the highest sense of the word, though it will be actively identified with the Heavenly Kingdom as its earthly representative. God is selecting during this Gospel Age a new nation, Spiritual Israel, from every nation, people, kindred, tongue. At our Lord's First Advent and subsequently, He gathered from Israel such as were saintly and ready for the Kingdom; since then He has been taking out from other nations enough to complete the foreordained number of the elect Church. These will constitute the Kingdom per se, and it cannot be set up or established in power until this election, or selection, shall have been completed and the Elect "changed" or glorified on the spiritual plane, by the power of the First Resurrection.

Paradise, or the Garden of the Lord, not only represents that earthly condition which will be restored for the benefit and blessing of the natural man—as the reward for his obedience to the rules of Immanuel's Kingdom during the Millennial Age —but it also applies to the glorious and Heavenly position which God has in restoration for the Church. Thus we read in the Book of Revelation that God has promised to the overcomers of the Church, "To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the Tree of Life, which is in the midst of the Paradise of God."

This is a grandly beautiful and symbolic message and promise, assuring us of the happiness and Heavenly bliss in eternal-life conditions of all who are faithful followers of Christ in the present Age—walking in His footsteps in the Narrow Way. The Book of Revelation pictures the history of this Gospel Age down into the Millennial Age and shows us Paradise re-established, with the Heavenly City, the glorified Church, as its centre, or capital. The River of Life is pictured as flowing from under the Throne. On either bank of its crystal waters of Truth and Grace grew the Trees of Life, after the manner of Eden of old.

The future state will all be Paradise. The completeness of blessedness will first be manifested in the Church on the spiritual plane; and secondly, it will be manifested in the Ancient Worthies on the earthly plane—Abraham, Isaac, Jacob and all the holy Prophets perfected, the earthly representatives of the Heavenly Kingdom. Gradually the Paradisiacal condition shall fill the whole earth. The wilderness shall blossom as the rose, the solitary places shall be glad, and streams shall break forth in the deserts, as we read in Isaiah 35.

The morally lame shall learn to walk in the paths of righteousness. Yea, they shall leap for joy as they come to a knowledge of the grace and goodness of God. The world's eyes of understanding shall be opened and their deaf ears shall be unstopped, that they may see and hear the Goodness, the Mercy, the Justice and the Love of our God. "The willing and obedient shall eat the good of the land," but evil doers shall be cut off in the Second Death. Gradually the boundaries will be spread abroad until they will include the whole earth. Gradually the number enjoying Paradise will increase until, in the end of the Millennium, the entire race of Adam shall experience the privilege of God's Love and Mercy through Christ.

St. Paul, like St. John the Revelator, was caught up to Paradise in a vision, and saw the glorious things of the future Age, which he was not permitted to explain to us, because the due time had not yet come. Neither was St. John the Revelator permitted to reveal fully the particulars of the Paradise condition. He could merely give us a few symbolical hints or suggestions respecting the glories of Paradise restored.

We have already noticed that Paradise was lost through disobedience to the Heavenly command. Life, Eden bliss, Divine favor and fellowship, were all lost to Adam and so to us, his children, under the death sentence. There was no hope for any of us more than for the brute beast; for while the latter was born to die, man, created with possibilities of life eternal, was sentenced to the loss of all. Indeed, under the demoralizing influences of sin and death, we find many of the human family more degraded than the brute creation, and apparently less worthy of Divine favor. But God, rich in mercy in the great Love wherewith He loves us, has provided for mankind a recovery from sin and death, while He has made no provision for the future life of the brute creation.

God's provision for man's recovery from the sentence of death is the story of the "Cross of Christ." Because a man had sinned, the Redeemer must be a Man. Because the penalty was human death, a Perfect Man must die for the sinner's release from the death sentence, to uplift the willing out of sin and death conditions—up, up, up to fellowship with God and eternal life. Because the race of Adam inherited naturally his mental, moral, and physical defects, therefore none of his posterity was worthy of eternal life. But in the Divine arrangement, as Adam involved all of his children and their Paradise home in the wreck of sin and death, so a redemption has been effected through Christ.

The great work of Messiah will, therefore, be the restoration of the world to all that was lost in Eden and redeemed at Calvary. The work of Restitution, St. Peter tells us, has been spoken of "by the mouth of all God's holy Prophets since the world began" and will be accomplished by Messiah at His Second Coming. (Acts 3:21.) But the Divine Plan changes not. Sin is still abhorrent to God and will always be so, and the Divine sentence is that no sinner shall have eternal life. Neither the favor of Divine grace is merely to all who may have a heart-desire for Divine assistance, resurrection, restoration, uplifting out of sin and death conditions to perfect conditions. These things will be accomplished only in those who are willing and obedient. Only such "shall eat the good of the land"—the fruits of Paradise.—Isaiah 1:18-20; Acts 3:23.

Furthermore, it is the Divine arrangement for mankind, and a just one, that every good and noble deed in the present life works a measure of character-development which will be assistful in the future life, enabling the faithful the sooner to mount up to full perfection of earthly life. Correspondingly, every willful sin, every violation of conscience and principle, works a defilement and impairment of manhood, which likewise will have its effect upon the future life in the difficulty of rising out of degradation to the heights of human perfection. Divine approval and everlasting life. If all mankind could appreciate these facts, what an influence it would have in restraining and governing self and in developing self control and true manhood!—Galatians 5:1.

Does some one inquire why He who redeemed Adam, his Eden home, and all his race, and who proposes a restoration of all, has not begun this Restitution work during the eighteen hundred years since the sacrifice of Himself? The Scriptures answer that during the interim another feature of the Divine Program is being carried out. The Lord is gathering the elect Church from Israel and all the nations to be Messiah's assistants in His Kingdom and in the gracious work of uplift—resurrection—restitution. This elect Church-class, first selected, is in the Scriptures called "a First-fruits unto God of His creatures." (James 1:18; Revelation 14:4.) The world of restored humanity will be the after-fruits.

The Scriptures exhort such as in the present time are blessed with the hearing ear, to give heed to the special invitation to the Elect. They exhort such as have the eye of faith to aspire to the crown of glory and joint-heirship with Christ that is now being tendered to a very select class. "He that hath an ear, let him hear." He that hath an eye, let him see. So many of us as have been blessed of the Lord with the ear of faith, the eye of faith, let us rejoice in the blessed opportunity. Let us seek indeed to make our calling and election sure to this Heavenly estate of glory, honor, immortality and joint-heirship with our Lord, the King of kings and Lord of lords!

Both the thieves crucified with our Lord lost their right to the original Eden, or Paradise, of God through Father Adam's disobedience, as did we all. Both these thieves were born in sin, shapen in iniquity and in sin did their mothers conceive them, as with us all. Both thieves were redeemed by the precious blood of Christ, as were we all; for Jesus "by the grace of God tasted death for every man"; "He is the Propitiation for our sins (the Church's sins); and not for ours only, but also for the sins of the whole world."—Hebrews 2:9; 1 John 2:2.

Thus, as we have seen, the Redeemer has made provision for both of these thieves, as well as for all of us—all of Adam's race—to be recovered from the sin and death conditions of the fall, and restored to Paradise. The Church, called during this Gospel Age, may reach the spiritual Paradise, or highest condition of holiness and happiness. The two thieves and the remainder of mankind will have their opportunity during the Millennium. Their opportunity will be for a return to earthly life, perfection and happiness, and to an earthly Eden—world-wide. How much grander a work will thus result from our Lord's death than we had previously supposed!

Let none suppose, however, that those two thieves will enter Paradise on the same footing. While both were guilty of robbery, they were evidently dissimilar in the condition of their hearts. The one was hardened, as evidenced by the fact that he could speak so rudely to the Redeemer, whose face bespoke gentleness, purity and innocence of crime. "If Thou be the Christ, save Thyself and us!" (Luke 23:39.) Such cruelty implied a deep degradation of mind—implied that he was sin-hardened.

And yet we must remember that others of the multitude standing by used similarly cruel language. We must remember, too, that there are many thieves who are not caught; and that there are many, perhaps as morally wrong, as evilly intentioned, who, for fear of the consequences, never committed the wrongs. We can even suppose that some of the Scribes and Pharisees and Doctors of Divinity of those days were in God's sight much worse than the impenitent thief—murderers at heart and in deed. Yet of the latter St. Peter declared, "I wot, brethren, that through ignorance ye did it, as did also your rulers," when you crucified the Lord of Glory. "Repent ye therefore and be converted."—Acts 3:15-19.

Ignorance, superstition and inherited depravity all bore down upon the impenitent thief to a degree which we are not capable of properly estimating. The Lord will judge him—both thieves—all mankind. The penitent thief will unquestionably have a twofold blessing; first, he will be blessed for his penitent attitude of mind; second, he will be blessed for his faithfulness in expressing that penitence and in showing mercy to our Lord in His distress. Our Lord declared that even a cup of cold water given to the least of His disciples shall have its reward. Surely it will be in harmony, then, that the penitent thief will have a reward for his defense of the Master.

That reward will consist, first of all, in the blessing of his own heart through the action therein of the manful sentiment. A reward will come to him in proportion to the exigencies of the occasion and the greatness of the One whom he loved. If the one who favors a righteous man will receive a righteous man's reward, and the one who favors a prophet will receive a prophet's reward, surely the one who favored the Redeemer will receive a special reward, such as the Redeemer might be expected to grant.

The penitent thief manifested not only sympathy, but honesty. He said to the other, who railed at the Lord, "Dost thou not fear God, seeing thou art in the same condemnation? And we indeed justly; for we receive the due reward for our deeds; but this man hath done nothing amiss." (Luke 23:40, 41.) It is entirely in keeping with the general teachings of the Lord's Word that the honest-hearted and the merciful shall have special blessings. Those blessings cannot reach them in the grave, and is not always that just returns reach the deserving in the present life. Virtue is not always its own reward.

Our Lord declares the truth on the subject, assuring us that such shall be "recompensed at the resurrection of the just." That is to say, when the just, the justified, the Church, shall have been awakened in the First Resurrection, and when the Heavenly Kingdom shall have been established amongst men, and the general awakening of the world from the sleep of death shall gradually follow, then every good and every evil word, every good and every evil act, will be recompensed—in Paradise.

Let us be glad and rejoice that the Divine arrangement is a Paradise—an earthly Paradise, possible to every member of the race; and a Heavenly Paradise, possible to every member of the Spirit-begotten Church; and that the alternative of Paradise is not eternal torment, but everlasting destruction—the Second Death. Finally, every creature in Heaven and earth shall be heard saying, Blessing, honor, glory and power be unto Him that sitteth upon the Throne, and to the Lamb forever and ever.

Estimating Distance.

It is even more difficult to estimate height than distance, and when one reads how once again the height record has been broken by some daring aviator, one is puzzled how to realise what the figures of his record really mean. Well, at any rate, we have the birds as a standard of comparison. Compared with Mr. Raynham's recent 15,000 feet, the common birds of England are mere groundlings, for generally they fly at no greater height than 300 feet. When migrating, however, they mount higher, though even the wild geese (the loftiest of them) seldom reaches 2,000 feet. The highest flier in the world is the great condor, who sometimes reaches five miles.—London Chronicle.

WHEN BLOOD IS POISON

The blood must be filtered, otherwise you are poisoned. If the kidneys fail the liver is overworked, and becomes torpid. By using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills you get both these filtering organs working right, and also ensure healthful action of the bowels. For this reason these pills are an ideal family medicine. They cure biliousness, constipation, chronic indigestion and kidney disease.

Suffered Intense Agony With His Back.

Kidneys Were The Cause.

Weak back is caused by weak kidneys, and on the first approach or evidence of kidney trouble Doan's Kidney Pills should be used, and serious trouble avoided.

Mr. John Briggs, Whitewood, Sask., writes:—"I am sending you this testimonial out of pure gratitude, as I am not a believer in patent medicines, but I got so run down, that I became quite willing to give anything a trial. I paid a visit to our local druggist, and told him I was suffering intense agony with my back. He told me I had kidney trouble, and handed me a box of Doan's Kidney Pills, saying it was the best thing he could possibly give me. I tried them, and the effect was certainly marvelous. They are worth $10.00 a box of anybody's money, and I would not be without a box by me. I certainly owe my present condition to Doan's Kidney Pills."

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50 cents per box, or 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Demos and the War God

LITTLE shepherd had guarded his sheep on a long plain which lay to the southwest of Constantinople. He shaded his eyes with his hands the better to see the long line of horsemen growing every instant more distinct against the skyline, and presently there came to him the horror-stricken cry of the shepherds thereabouts, who fled in a mob from the neighborhood.

"Save us! Save us!" rang their cry, "from the wrath of Atilla the Hun, the Scourge of God."

For a moment the shepherd had looked serious, but he made no move to flee away as did the rest. Instead, he went and stood over a dagger thrust into the earth just under a tree. Vaguely he wondered whether this was a sign which the War God had sent. He crouched behind the bushes when the army of the invader had come very near and watched them put up their tents. One he noticed was larger than the rest and made of cloth of gold. This, he knew instinctively, belonged to Atilla, the commander. Quite content, he watched the busy camp from the bushes until the quiet stars came out in the skies and a wisp of moonshine glimmered and glowed on the hilt of the dagger.

Fascinated, he watched until presently the dagger moved and, gliding over in his direction, touched his naked hand.

At once the boy lost all doubt.

He had received an order direct from the War God—he would obey.

Quietly he stole back to his tiny ramshackle shelter, gathered together his few personal belongings and, taking the dagger almost reverently in his hand, started stealthily toward the cloth-of-gold tent that gleamed and glowed in the moonlight.

Presently he had attained the doorway and, eluding the guard, had slipped inside. Here amid the strangeness of the queer eastern habits and furnishings he could not see very well for a time, but at the end of a few moments his eyes accustomed themselves to the light, and he gazed about him in amazement. Embroidered curtains, low, luxurious couches, silken drapings of all sorts held him speechless with admiration, until he started back in horror at sight of a twisted figure which suddenly rose up before him as from thin air. Misshapen in every part, with a huge head and spindling feet, a dwarf stood before the shepherd boy.

"What do you here?" asked the dwarf, and the lad, looking into his eyes, saw that they at least were clear and straightforward, even friendly.

"I come with a sign from the war god," said the shepherd simply.

The dwarf uttered an exclamation that was like a sibilant hissing between one's teeth, and yet must have been a word.

"Come hither," he said, beckoning, and the lad followed on.

In an inner room of the tent they came upon Atilla, lying huge, fierce, awe-inspiring, upon a mound of fresh-cut boughs, which contrasted oddly with the otherwise gorgeous appointments of the place. The quick eyes of the shepherd lad saw that he had thrown aside all war gear and was lying loosely clad, resting.

To the boy's amazement, the dwarf stood upon no terms of ceremony with the mighty and awful being upon the boughs. He gave a flying leap from the door and landed directly at Atilla's shoulder, from which position he spoke, finding the lad. Atilla's huge hand caressed the dwarf the while he spoke. He sat up when the dwarf had told him the shepherd boy's errand.

In a few short sentences the shepherd lad told of his finding the dagger and the message it conveyed.

Atilla seized it from his hand and, holding it aloft, swore roundly to sweep Europe. The lad, frightened, would have slipped away, but Atilla would not allow it, attaching him personally to his suite and commanding the dwarf to fit him out at once with proper court clothes. Within an hour Demos had returned to the Ravager's presence clad in a silken robe and with his senses bewildered by the change in his condition. But it did not drive away healthy slumber from the lad who slept soundly all night long.

Early next day messengers rode up to the camp from Galseric the Vandal, ruler of Africa, asking Atilla to invade Europe for the purpose of punishing Actius, emperor of the west.

Now, Demos and Jovan, the dwarf, put not their trust in the messengers, and so in disguise they spied and found out that Theodosius, emperor of the east, had sent a large army against Galseric the Vandal.

As soon as Atilla heard this he dispatched his counselor Edecon to Constantinople, while he with his Huns moved northward, laying waste the cities and towns and villages through which they passed.

At last seventy blooming towns were swept from the face of the earth, and Edecon appeared for Atilla before Theodosius and demanded the instant recall of the troops sent to Africa against Galseric. The emperor, fearing the awful power of the Scourge of God, was forced to submit to his request.

Atilla meantime was camped in a pleasant valley, upon which looked down the bold dark faces of high surrounding mountains. He was more than comfortable, for he had seized for his own use one of the palaces of Theodosius, built throughout of teak-wood and bamboo.

At length came the day for Edecon's return from the court.

"What makes you so restless, Jovan?" asked Demos.

"I know not exactly," replied the dwarf, "but I fear all is not well with Edecon," and he would say no more. But as the shadows lengthened out and still no sign of the returning emissary was visible, Demos and the dwarf sought out Atilla.

The two were privileged, and so, although the guards knew that the king slept, they were allowed to pass. They found the huge Hun lying in unconscious slumber upon the floor of his room. Very quietly they concealed themselves and waited.

It was a long and weary wait before the guard peered in and then admitted a man. In appearance he was Edecon, but the two concealed were suspicious. He smiled slowly as he slipped his hand close to his side and edged toward the sleeping Hun. Swiftly he bent over, but not so swiftly as Demos flew from behind the curtain and knocked the dagger from his hand, or the dwarf shrilled for help. On the instant Atilla was up and in action. To the surprise of all, he saved the impostor from execution, and when the real Edecon came back to camp unharmed, he sent the impostor back to his king with a scornful message.

For weeks and weeks the army camped in the mountains, guarding the passes and planned to take Constantinople.

The Emperor Theodosius died and Marcian ruled in his stead, but still the Huns lingered, and every day found Demos improved in his knowledge of war and fighting under the skilful tuition of the dwarf, who, although in no wise able to take upon himself any burden, knew the science of war to a nicety.

Inaction palled upon Atilla after a time, and he accepted Galseric's invitation to invade western Europe. Once more the air rang to Atilla's battle cry as he and his horde pressed down through the dark forest-clad north into Gaul.

Not long after he had crossed the Rhine, the Scourge of God surrounded Chalons, and his fierce heart was full of joy at the prospect of subduing the city and laying it low, when a sudden alarm swept through the ranks. Emperor Aetius, with the support of the arms of Europe, had arrived to the attack.

In the mighty battle which followed, Demos was never absent from Atilla's side. Through the thickest of the fight he rode like a whirlwind gone mad, with all his fierce love for the master who had befriended him directing his blows.

But the shock was too much for Atilla's army, and a retreat was begun, despite all he could do.

The followers of the Scourge of God everywhere snatched off their saddles and built a great pile, upon the top of which stood Jovan, motionless and sorrowful. Demos stood at the foot, in his hand a lighted torch, ready at a moment's warning to set the pile ablaze.

He gave a glance to where Jovan stood, a solitary, pathetic figure, with misshapen, beckoning arm held out, and with one leap he stood beside the little figure, while all the army of the enemy stood gazing at the strange sight, and Demos stood ready at the first sign of hostility to fire the heap rather than let his king fall into their hands.

It is small wonder that Atilla was allowed to escape unharmed into Germany.

A year later, when Atilla lay dead beside the Danube, Jovan lay at his feet, in his faithful heart the wound of the dagger which had been found by Demos plunged by his own misshapen hand.

I glance upward not at all
For I know as well as maybe
That it's glowing yellow gleams
Just would light a grinning elf man
Hugging close his bag o' dreams,
And I'd rather meet an elf man
When I'm snuggled safe in bed,
Than when I am scared and lonely
In the hall as I have said.

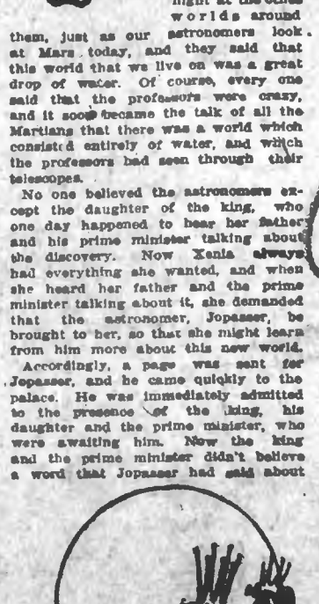
HOW THE CANALS WERE DUG ON MARS

NCE upon a time there lived a king in Mars, who had a beautiful daughter named Xenia. She was an only child and was called the Beautiful Princess. Now, this story happened long, long ago, when the world which we now live on was covered with water and there was not a speck of land anywhere, while Mars was all land with not a drop of water on it.

The inhabitants of Mars were smart people, and some of their men of science used to look through long telescopes every night at the other worlds around them, just as our astronomers look at Mars today, and they said that this world that we live on was a great drop of water. Of course, every one said that the professors were crazy, and it soon became the talk of all the Martians that there was a world which consisted entirely of water, and which the professors had seen through their telescopes.

No one believed the astronomers except the daughter of the king, who one day happened to hear her father and his prime minister talking about the discovery. Now Xenia always had everything she wanted, and when she heard her father and the prime minister talking about it, she demanded that the astronomer, Jopasser, be brought to her, so that she might learn from him more about this new world.

Accordingly, a page was sent for Jopasser, and he came quickly to the palace. He was immediately admitted to the presence of the king, his daughter and the prime minister, who were awaiting him. Now the king and the prime minister didn't believe a word that Jopasser had said about the world of water, and they had hunted up a great many books with which they were going to prove that they knew more than Jopasser.



When Jopasser came in he was commanded to tell all he had found out in his nocturnal glimpsings through his instruments, and as fast as Jopasser told of his discoveries the king and the prime minister hunted up some reason in their books with which to prove that it did not know what he was talking about. But Xenia believed all that Jopasser claimed, and she said that he was a great "stronomer." As the king and Jopasser kept arguing back and forth, little Xeni grew very sleepy and went to sleep, and while she slept she had a wonderful dream. She dreamed that there were many canals on Mars and that they were filled with the water from Jopasser's world. With the canals full of water, she dreamed that she had a beautiful gondola in which she was rowed about on the wonderful waterways.

When she awoke, the king, the prime minister and Jopasser were still arguing, and Jopasser was getting the best of it. The king, who saw he was beaten, was losing his temper and was just waiting for a chance to be revenged on Jopasser. To stop the discussion and to make peace, Xenia told them of her dream about the canals filled with water and the lovely gondola in which she was rowed around; and when she finished she said she wished that she had a gondola and canals just like her dream.

Xenia always had what she wanted, and when the king heard that she wanted canals and a boat to sail them with, he said that she should have them. Here was a good chance to be revenged on Jopasser, so he told him that if he didn't furnish canals with water in them for his daughter by the next day he would have his head chopped off. When Xenia heard this she was very sorry she had wished for her dream to come true, and told her father that she did not want the canals, anyhow, for she knew that Jopasser could not have them in time for her birthday and would surely lose his head. But the king was not going to let slip such a fine chance to be revenged on the astronomer, and told Jopasser that he must either have the canals on time or lose his head.

Poor Jopasser knew that his head was as good as gone, for Xenia's birthday was only a month away, and he knew that it would be impossible to dig the canals in that time, let alone fill them with water, for even the nearest to be had was on the other world, millions of miles away.

Two weeks passed, and Jopasser saw his head becoming of less and less value every day. He was walking along the road one day when he saw a poor little bird with a broken wing fluttering in the heat of the dusty roadway, in danger of being run over by an oncoming automobile. Did they have autos in Mars then? Oh, yes, they had autos up there before we ever had a two-wheeled cart on earth.

At first he was going to pass by and leave the poor thing in the road to die, but he had only gone a little way, when he returned, picked up the tiny bird and placed it carefully on a low limb of a tree. He had no sooner done this than the little bird turned into a beautiful fairy. Jumping down from the limb, the fairy said, "You have saved my life and I will do anything you want me to do." "Then," [illegible] Jopasser, "tell me how I can dig the canals and fill them with water for the king's birthday, which is only two weeks off?"

Now, Jopasser only said this in fun, as he did not expect even fairies to do such a thing, so he was very much surprised and elated at the fairy's answer.

"Well," [illegible] the fairy, "I have a big brother; he is so big that there has never been another bird one-half as large. His name is Jehosaphat, and he will do anything for me. He is so big that he can carry a thousand buckets of dirt or thousands of gallons of water in his bill, which is a big bag-shaped thing like a pelican's. If I ask him, he will do it for you, as he can easily dig a couple of thousands of buckets of dirt and bring back that much water. I am sure that he will be here tomorrow morning to start."

Before Jopasser could thank the kind fairy she quickly changed into a bird again and flew away.

Sure enough, the next day an enormous bird flew to Mars and commenced to dig a great hole with his beak, and before the Martians had recovered from their amazement he flew away. It only took him a little while to reach the world that was all water, for he could fly a million miles in no time, and as soon as he got there he emptied his bill of the dirt. It made a small mountain where he dumped it, and he took in a thousand gallons of water at a gulp and flew back to Mars. When he reached Mars again he filled up the hole he had made with the water, and it made a nice little lake, in which the astounded Martians began to bathe at once. Just think, it was the first bath they had ever had in all their life; and, in fact, it was the first bath they had ever seen in all its thousands of years!

Jehosaphat repeated this operation until he had an enormous and perfect network of canals spreading all over Mars, and on this world he had range after range of mountains made by the dirt he had brought from Mars, and one of the largest is our own Rocky mountains.

Jack of All Trades

"JACK of all trades and master of none," is a saying which originated in England many years ago from the practice of certain obscelted individuals who advertised themselves as versed in a multitude of arts and professions, and offered their services and advice on a great variety of subjects, when in reality they knew very little, and were oftimes sadly wanting in education, as the following specimen demonstrates clearly enough:

"Roger Giles, Impenetrable Penetrator, Surgin, Clerk, etc., Romford, Essex, informs ladis and gentlemen that he cuts their teeth and draws cerns without waiting a moment. Blisters on the lowest terms and fygle at a penny a peace. Sells cordials and strap-oil, and undertakes to keep any ladis nails by the year, and so on. Young Ladis and Gentlemen tort the art of ridding and the grammar language in the neatest manner; also great kare taken to improve there morals, and spelling, sam-singing and whisseling. Teaches the jewsarp and instructs young Ladis on the gartar and plays the he-bby. Shotish, poker and all other rules tort at home and abroad. Perfumery in all its branches. Sells all sorts of stashionary, soap and all other sorts of sweetmeats, including beeswax, postage stamps and lusifar matches; likewise potatoes, reebard, sossages and other garden stuff; also fruits, such as cabbage, selery, toothpicks, oil and tinware, and other eatables. Salve, molasses, winegar and all other hardware. Furthermore, he has laid in a stock of tripe, chins, opoon suits, lollipops, and other picnels, such as oysters, apples and table beer; also satin, silk and hearthstones, and all kinds of chemicals, including wax dolls, razors, dutch clocks and gridirons, and now laid eggs every day by me. The Adventure of Silvertips COME have your face washed, dear," meowed Mother Kitty.

Silvertips shied to the other side of the step as though something had been thrown at him.

"I don't want my face washed," he literally howled.

"But you must. You have to be clean, you know," reasoned Mother Kitty, gently.

"I don't and I won't!" cried Silvertips, in his naughtiest and most rebellious tone. In a flash he had clipped Mother Kitty's outstretched paw, had scurried out of the house and was making tracks as fast as he could fly down the back garden path.

"Where are you going?" asked old Dobbin, in amazement. Dobbin was cunning himself in the fence corner. "Wherever are you going so fast?"

"Away where I'll never have to be washed—not ever, ever!" shouted the naughty kitty. "Mother'll be sorry when she hears—" and he was out of sight. Old Dobbin, in the fence corner, shook his head solemnly and watched him go.

On and on rushed Silvertips. Presently he came to the meadow, and there stood Bossy, the cow, who mooed softly and also asked him where he was going at such a pace.

"Far away—just as far as possible," cried Silvertips. "So far away that my mother'll never, never see me any more!" and he whisked out of sight.

Bossy threw back her head and laughed.

"He'll last until the moon comes out," she said wisely.

But kitty rushed on and on until his tiny feet hurt from contact with the sharp stones and he had left the pleasant country far behind and was in the streets of a city.

By this time it had grown quite late and a queer gone feeling was creeping over kitty. He had not eaten since early morning. He looked about to find food.

Nearby a cottage gate stood open, and kitty walked up very quietly and looked within. To his joy the door stood open, and he ventured up the narrow path. All was silence, and he crept up the steps that led to the open door. He stood stiffly for a moment, quivering with fear and curiosity before putting in one velvet paw and then another, and finally his whole sinuous body.

Within all was deathly still, with the exception of the clock which ticked steadily upon the kitchen mantel, and kitty sniffed the air hungrily. An odor more or less tempting came from the table, and Silvertips climbed upon a chair to investigate. He could see steam from hot food, and his eyes distended. He gave a quick jump, but no sooner had he landed on the table than he caught, too late, the sound of an open door.

"Well, of all things!" cried an angry voice, and Silvertips had just time to glimpse a woman in a checked gingham apron rushing toward him like a whirlwind when he found himself landed sprawling and kicking on the garden path.

The gingham whirlwind looked as though it might decide to descend upon him again, and so Silvertips, springing to his feet, flashed down the garden path like a streak of fire. On and on he tore, his thumping heart hammering his ribs until his breath gave out, and he sank exhausted by the wayside.

"I wish I were home," he thought forlornly. "But I'll never go back—no, never!"

"Bow-wow-wow!" sounded a hated voice, and Silvertips turned, his tail puffed out and stiff. There stood a dog, showing his teeth and waving the very tip-top of his tail nervously.

Silvertips made a wild effort to escape, but the dog had cornered him, seized him playfully by the scruff of the neck and thrown him into the road. And now to get home, and that as quickly as possible, was the only idea in Silvertips' mind. On and on he raced blindly. Suddenly he knocked headforemost into something, and then all was spluttering, sticky darkness. He struggled wildly to free himself of the all-enveloping hard thing about his head, and at last he succeeded, but this time he had no strength left to make his escape. There he lay, gasping, on the pavement.

He knew that people had gathered about, and he heard the jeering voices of the street boys. But presently a softer, prettier voice broke in, and he was gathered into the arms of a girl and carried up some steps and into a house.

"Poor little fellow," he heard the sweet voice say. "See, mother, the painter let a pot of paint fall on him, and he's covered with the stuff." The kitty heard another voice very like the first give an order, and presently, to his horror, he felt himself gently lowered into warm, sudsy water.

He struggled madly, but he was held firmly and scrubbed. Finally he was dried in a big towel and left beside the fire to rest.

Silvertips was thoroughly exhausted by this time, and presently he fell off into a doze.

When he awoke the moon was shining. He crawled out of the towel and padded across the floor. Presently he made out that one of the windows was open a little from the bottom to give air, and he squeezed himself through the opening. Standing on the outside sill, he looked down. The jump was a long one, but not impossible.

Next moment he had landed softly on the open road for home.

The sun was almost up next morning when a bedraggled little kitty walked up the garden path. How glad Silvertips was to get back! He could hear Bossy mooing in the stable, and he could hear Dobbin, too, in his stall in the barn, and he remembered with shame the words he had said to both of them. He slunk up the steps, and there, with her gleaming eyes searching the dusky shadows anxiously, sat Mother Kitty. She gave a happy little meow when she saw her naughty son, and soon Silvertips was pouring out his woeful tale into her kind ears. She had no words but comforting ones for the woeful little jumble of apology and paint at her side, and made him lie quiet and rest.

And when Silvertips felt her gentle comforting tongue licking over his silken coat from one end to the other, he had no thoughts but grateful ones for the mother who was so kind to him. He was too glad to be alive to grumble at being washed—then or ever again.

God's Other Children

NATURE is in two minds just now, for Jack Frost and the Snow Fairies are so impatient to come down from the North Pole and play with the winter birds that the brown fields are often powdered with flurries of big white flakes, and the air is so chill in the long hours when the sun is asleep that winter prepares to come in earnest, and then—the next day—nature recalls her tender summer babies and weeps a few soft warm rain tears, that melt the snowflakes, and the sun comes out warm and bright and kisses their sleeping faces, and summer comes back again for a few hours.

The Indians knew and loved so well these changeful moods of nature in November that we call the brief hours of warmth "Indian summer," and the wild things of the fields and woods come out and frisk and bask and make the most of them, just as they did when the redmen lived in nature's garden and enjoyed the "smiles of the Great Spirit" with them.

If we go through the fields with our eyes closed (and most of us do), it seems a sleeping world, with perhaps the sharp "creek" of crickets in the grasses, or a scurrying squirrel or busy woodpecker in the bare trees, as the only sign of life; but go with your eyes open and you will see a myriad host of insects laying by their queer babies in the best hiding places they can find, away from the birds. The snowy cricket, a cousin of the black fellows we know so well, lays her yellowish eggs in the soft pith of fruit canes, like the raspberry or grapevines and fruit-tree twigs. The tiny green mites that are such a nuisance to the rose bushes after a damp spell in summer cannot bore into the wood, so they have to leave the eggs in patches on the bark of shrubs and trees, where the Chickadee will fetch them out later on and devour them by the thousand, and everywhere what seems to our blind eyes the death of a myriad of troublesome pests is really just one little glimpse of one little phase of nature's marvelous balance, wherein everything has its place to fill and its work to do.

There is plenty to eat, and the air is warm and the sun shines brightly, but nature's children are wise, and, though they revel in the warmth and brightness, they are busy getting ready for the cold, bleak days to come. The Chickadee is not merely amusing himself when he climbs like an acrobat, upside down, and all around the trees; he is looking for a snug winter home, from which he can peep in comfort at the sleet and snow. The saucy Blue Jay is not only scolding the squirrels; he is stealing as many of their nuts as he can for himself later on, and the Woodpecker is making a mental note of the bark where the [illegible] grubs can be [illegible] out. When the colder days are established, The woods and the fields spread their tables for the birds, and they come in hosts to the feast, but they will come just as readily to our doors if we provide for them, and next week we will see how easy it is to have company to dinner every day through the winter.

LUCKY BASEBALL FLUKE.

"In all the years I have been attending baseball games—and they are more than I would care to number—there is one play which stands out in my mind as the greatest I have ever seen," says a contributor to the American Magazine.

"There was no wonderful skill embodied in the play, it was, I suppose, pure luck. But the fact remains that I have never seen it duplicated nor approached, and it is, so far as I know, unique in the annals of baseball.

"The game was one between Washington and Cincinnati back in the days when Washington was in the National league. The score was 1 to 0 in Cincinnati's favor in the last half of the ninth. Two men were out, and Washington had a runner on second, with Wilmot at the bat. On the first ball pitched Wilmot swung hard and knocked an infield fly, the highest I have ever seen. The ball went up and up until it was visible only as a tiny speck.

"With the crack of the bat the runner on second had started for home, and he crossed the plate before the ball began to fall. Buck Ewing, Cincinnati's first baseman; McPhee, who played second, and 'Germany' Smith, the shortstop, all gathered between first and second awaiting for the ball to drop. Wilmot sped around the bases at top speed and passed third as the ball fell just inside the triangle of waiting infielders.

"The ball struck the hard earth of the base line and bounded high in the air. Ewing having to wait for it to descend a second time before he could make the throw home. Wilmot slid around the plate and was safe, having won the game with a home run on an infield fly, a feat which has never been duplicated in professional baseball."

Any lawyer will tell you that some people won't take advice even when they pay for it.

The price of golf balls has been reduced, but the penalty for losing one remains the same.

England will try for the south pole again. She doesn't believe that Amundsen got away with it.

It's up to you either to take things as they come or turn your back and let them meander by.

A CAPITAL IDEA

Upon calling at the house of a neighbor shortly after the noon hour I found the lady of the house engaged in washing the dinner dishes. I noticed that she did not stand at her work but sat on a high stool such as you will see in stores for the use of customers, on which was a soft cushion. This lady is not strong, and I thought what a capital idea to encourage strength.

The tired house-keeper may thus have many a rest by the road of life by occasionally sitting, while engaged in certain work such as washing and wiping dishes, peeling potatoes, and so forth, or even ironing or cooking. As long as the work can be done as well while sitting as standing why not take the rest even though it may be brief. The one who is wise will not be prodigal of strength any more than of time.

Ladies! Secret To Darken Grey Hair

Bring Back Its Colour and Lustre With Grandma's Sage Tea Recipe

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea, with sulphur ad alcohol added, will turn grey, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant; remove every bit of dandruff, stop scalp itching and falling hair. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get the ready-to-use tonic, costing about 50 cents a large bottle, at drug stores, known as "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," thus avoiding a lot of muss.

Thin wispy, grey faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all grey hairs have disappeared. After another application or two your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant and you appear years younger.

KEPHALDOL

BIDS PAIN DEFIANCE

This remedy, new to Canada, though well known in Great Britain and on the Continent, brings to all who are "lost on the thorny bed of pain" a means of speedy and grateful relief.

Kephaldol offers the sufferer from Lumbago, Sciatica, or Rheumatism quick and certain cure, even where the case is of long standing.

No more is it necessary to endure the agony, enforced immobility, back-wrecking and exhaustion of Lumbago attacks, the torture of Sciatica-ridden limbs, the cramping grip of Rheumatism. Kephaldol is not only a sure, safe and natural remedy, but an exceptionally prompt-acting cure.

Kephaldol may be taken without fear. There is nothing in it to give rise to bad after-effects—nothing to injure the heart or other organs.

Thousands of letters from medical men testify to the wonderful power of Kephaldol to dispel pain and banish agonising disease. Get a 50c. package of Kephaldol tablets yourself and experience these benefits. Kephaldol Limited, 31 Latour Street, Montreal.

Man Burned In Raid.

SAN DIEGO, Cal., March 16.—One man was burned to death and another was seriously wounded when a band of raiders, believed to be Mexicans, attacked a general store at Tecate, 45 miles from this city, Saturday night, and escaped.

Tecate is just over the border on the American side. A woman who saw the attack reported to the commander at Fort Rosecrans that troops were needed, and the population were terrorized.

Government Vessels Would Pay.

WASHINGTON, March 16.—Statements that Government vessels would be compelled to pay tolls if the Simms bill repealing the exemption clause of the Panama Canal Act were contested were characterized yesterday as "monstrous perversions of the truth and most foolish folly ever entertained since fools were discovered" by Representative Adamson, chairman of the House Interstate Commerce Commission.

Laid Down Their Tools.

NEW YORK, March 16.—A hundred thousand men and women dropped their tools Saturday as a tribute to George Westinghouse, whose genius gave them the means of livelihood. The great inventor of the air brake was buried here on Saturday, while machinery stood idle in a dozen factories in America and Europe. Twenty-five thousand Westinghouse employes laid aside their tools in Pittsburg alone.

JAPAN IS SHAKEN

ASAMA-YAMA IN ERUPTION

TOKIO, March 16.—A serious earthquake occurred yesterday in the prefecture of Akita, island of Hono. A number of persons in the city of Akita were killed and many houses destroyed or damaged. In the village of Kowakubi, which was ruined, there were many casualties. The disturbance badly damaged the railroad and telegraph lines.

Full details of the disaster have not been received owing to the interruption of communication. Sixty dead bodies were found in the basin of the Omono river, where three hundred and twenty houses were destroyed. The village of Kitamono was burned.

As a result of the earthquake a copper mine at Tsunasdate collapsed. The fate of the three hundred workmen in the mine is unknown.

Simultaneous with the earthquake came terrific explosions and the bursting of flames from the volcano Asama-Yama, which terrified the inhabitants of that district.

Akita is a garrison town on the Sea of Japan. It does a considerable export trade, especially in rice. The population of the city is about 30,000. Asama-Yama is the largest active volcano in Japan. A majority of its active periods have been productive of only showers of ashes. Its last great eruption was in the year 1783, when several villages on the north side of the mountain were obliterated by huge streams of lava. The crater is about three-quarters of a mile in circumference.

TO SHOOT ON SUNDAYS.

Bisley Riflemen Will Get Long Sought Chance To Practice.

LONDON, March 16.—At an adjourned winter meeting of the National Rifle Association on Saturday Lord Cheylesmore stated the King had expressed heartiest approval of the postponement of operation of the new War Office Bisley rules until next year, which will allow ample time to consider the whole situation both as affecting Canadian riflemen and rifle clubs at home. His Majesty has, he said, added to the fund for carrying out the Empire match at Melbourne at the end of the year with a subscription of $250, and it was decided to send out a British team in charge of Col. Barlow to take part in the competition.

After encountering strong opposition from various religious organizations the Bisley ranges were Saturday for the first time opened for rifle practice on the Sabbath day. The reason which led the council of the National Rifle Association to this decision was that many men who desire to become proficient in rifle practice have no opportunity for practicing except on Sundays.

Woman Freed of Murder Charge.

CHICAGO, March 16.—Louise Van Keurin, who has been on trial for shooting and killing her husband, John D. Van Keurin, last June, was found not guilty of murder yesterday. Mrs. Van Keurin's defence was that she mistook her husband for a burglar.

The prosecution introduced evidence that Mrs. Van Keurin had been receiving the attentions of George Penrose, a jeweler, whose place of business was near the Van Keurin home. Pearose was made co-defendant with the woman, but the judge took his case from the jury and ordered him discharged.

U. S. Senators Shocked.

WASHINGTON, March 16. — The new carpet on the Senate floor is causing all sorts of trouble and excitement.

The carpet generates electricity. When the pages run about the chamber they become storage batteries and shock Senators whom they touch.

"What did you stick that pin in my finger for?" said Senator Fern, starting quickly, when Page Jackson of Kentucky handed him a card.

"No, sir, Senator, I did not stick you; it must have been a little electric shock, for this carpet is full of electricity," replied the page.

Twenty-Nine Bodies Recovered.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., March 16.—Three bodies were removed from the ruins of the Missouri Athletic Club fire yesterday, bringing the total of dead recovered to twenty-nine.

PREPARES FOR ATTACK.

Gen. Villa Is Getting Ready to March on City of Torreon.

EL PASO, Texas, March 16.—Coupled with the arrival here yesterday of Gen. Filipe Angeles, Secretary of War in the Carranza cabinet, were persistent rumors that Gen. Villa would leave Chihuahua next Monday night for the south and that the attack on Torreon might be expected to begin soon after.

Angeles is one of the most expert artillery men in Mexico, and was especially requested by Gen. Villa to formulate his political and administrative duties long enough to command the big gun arm of the service in the impending attack on the Federals' stronghold at Torreon.

That Gen. Villa purposes an early move received additional credence here when it became known that Geo. C. Carothers, special agent for the State Department, said he expected to leave for Chihuahua in a day or two. Carothers is an old friend of the rebel general and his particular, though unofficial, duty is to look to the interests of foreigners during the campaign in those places where there are no regular consuls.

Rebels Sacked Town.

MEXICO CITY, March 16.—Monclova station, on the International Railroad between Ciudad Porfirio Diaz and Monterey, was taken Saturday by rebels, who burned the railroad shops and three hundred cars and sacked the town. Minister of War Blanquet minimized the destruction wrought by the rebels, and insisted that the Federals had repulsed them when attacked. The Minister said he assumed that the rebels intended to move from Monclova toward Monterey.

From the State of Guerrero various rebel successes were reported today. The rebels continue threatening Tampico, but as yet have not attacked the city.

The gunboat Tampico, which recently joined the rebels, is declared by Minister of War Blanquet to have gone ashore in the harbor of Tepelchampo.

Mexican Prisoners Try to Escape.

FORT BLISS, Texas, March 16.—Gen. Hugh L. Scott Saturday night began an investigation of a report given him that Mexican prisoners were attempting to tunnel a way out of captivity. The work was slow because every test in a canvas city of 5,000 persons had to be examined for the entrances to the tunnel.

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES.

Over forty per cent. of the men employed in the building trades in Halifax are out of work.

In future the St. Catharines license commissioners will not issue a license to a hotel proprietor or a bartender who is not a British subject.

Five armed robbers broke into the mail order branch of the Hartman Furniture Co., Chicago, yesterday, blew open the office safe and got $15,000 in cash.

Jacob Chambers, of North Easthope, Ont., was drowned Saturday. While assisting his son to do the chores at the barn, he fell into a cistern from which he was drawing water.

Smallpox conditions in South Texas, due to the influx of thousands of Mexicans who have crossed the border to escape the revolution, it is declared, have assumed serious proportions.

Daniel McLaughlin, of Brock avenue, Toronto, a teamster, was buried alive in a cave-in at the gravel pit at the head of Jane street, West Toronto, on Saturday afternoon, and perished.

There is a well-grounded belief in Halifax that the Murray Government will dissolve the House and go to the country at the end of the present session of the Legislature, probably about June.

Private detectives are scouring the island of Montreal and the adjacent counties in search of a gang of expert forgers who have recently accomplished a $3,500 fraud by means of forged checks.

Clarence and Perry Crouse aged 15 and 18 years, of Lunenburg, N.S., were drowned Saturday. They left the shore in a dory to attempt the raising of a sunken boat, and, overturning the dory, they quickly sank.

Dr. Woods Hutchinson comments learnedly on the secret of baldness when everybody knows baldness can't be kept a secret.

The latest revolution in Haiti lasted six hours. This is wasteful—they ought to bunch up enough revolutions to last out a Sim.

Thin Blood is Poison To The Nerve Centres

Headaches, Irritability, Sleeplessness, Discouragement Result—Dr. Chase's Nerve Food the Great Restorative

A nervous temperament may be inherited, but nervous troubles only come when the nerve centres fail to derive proper nourishment from the blood.

Under ordinary circumstances the loss caused by wear and tear on the nervous system is restored by the nutrition contained in the blood.

When the blood gets thin and watery the nerves are starved and poisoned, and troubles of a serious nature appear.

Brain fag, headaches, sleeplessness, irritability, low spirits, and discouragement are among the symptoms of a starved nervous system.

There is nothing like Dr. Chase's Nerve Food as a means of forming new, rich blood.

Through the blood stream nutrition is carried direct to the nerve centres, and is converted into nervous energy.

Every beat of the heart, every breath of the lungs, and all the functions of digestive and other vital organs are dependent for life and energy on the nervous system.

Consequently the whole system is benefitted when health and vigour are restored to the nerve centres.

The nerves of the stomach resume their functions and digestion is improved. The appetite sharpens, the liver, kidneys, and bowels gain strength, and the blood derives further nourishment from the food taken into the body.

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is reconstructive and upbuilding in its influence, and therefore of lasting benefit. Fifty cents a box, 5 for $2.50, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

THE MARKETS

CHICAGO, March 14.—Corn was the speculative leader today on the board of trade. The Argentine harvest had been hit by wet weather. Farm offerings were scarce and there was sharp bidding by feeding centres. As a result the market, despite heavy profit-taking by holders, closed firm at ⅛ to ⅜c net advance. Wheat finished the same as last night, to ⅛c higher, and oats varying from a shade off to 1-8c up. In provisions the outcome was 5c to 12½c decline.

IGNORANT OF COLONIES.

Englishmen's Lack of Knowledge Forms Subject for Enquiry.

LONDON, March 16.—In a paper read before the British Academy some time ago Sydney Low referred to the "appalling ignorance of the average Englishman on matters relating to the laws, history and geography of the overseas Dominions," and suggested that a department of "Imperial studies" should be established in connection with the London University.

The Senate of the University have now appointed an influential committee to consider the best means of creating such a department. The names on the committee include Lord Rosebery, Viscount Bryce, Viscount Milner, Sir Krishna Gupta, Sir Harry Johnston, Sir Charles P. Lucas, Prof. Sir John MacDonnell, Prof. F. C. Hearnshaw, Sydney Low, J. H. Morgan, Dr. Parkin, Prof. Pollard and W. Pember Reeves.

Sent Back To Montreal.

CORNWALL, March 16. — Joseph Adelard Berthiaume, the young man arrested here on a charge of vagrancy, has been released from jail and sent back to Montreal. Berthiaume had been acting strangely here for several days, and was locked up for safe-keeping. He claimed to have escaped from Longue Point Asylum two years ago, where he had been a patient for eight years. He said his home was in Sorel, Que., but enquiry made there by Chief of Police Smyth elicited the fact that he had not been there for the past twelve years. He came to Cornwall from Montreal. He was supplied with a ticket and sent back.

Big Ice-Breaker Ordered.

OTTAWA, March 13.—The Canadian Vickers' Co. has been given the contract for a powerful ice-breaker for the St. Lawrence. It will cost $99,000, and will be one of the largest in the world.

Hon. Mr. Hazen's idea in getting the new ice-breaker is to expedite the opening of navigation in the spring.

POLICE ARE BAFFLED.

Montreal's "Gunmen" Still Manage to Evade Capture.

MONTREAL, March 16. — After roofing superior numbers of police twice when the gang might have been caught with comparative ease, the Montreal gunmen have now "enjoyed" five full days of liberty, and the whole detective force of the city is at a loss to know if or when or how they will capture the bandits.

The three wanted men were said to have been sighted at Three Rivers, 90 miles east of here, but the three were found to be simply out of works beating their way to Montreal. An unknown man, who threw himself into the St. Lawrence Saturday and refuse to save himself when a rope was pitched to him, is said to have been one of the fugitives.

Chief Campeau will commit Mayor Lavallee to-day with view of offering a reward for information that may lead to the arrest of either Foucault, Beauchamp or Benoit.

IS DR. DIESEL HERE?

German Inventor Is Said to Be Making New Start In Canada.

BERLIN, March 16.—The Abend Zeitung, Munich, publishes, under reserve, a statement that Dr. Rudolf Diesel is not dead, but, according to letters received, has begun life anew in Canada.

Diesel was the inventor of the motor bearing his name and which is being applied successfully for ships using oil as motive power. He disappeared some months ago while journeying on a Diesel motor-driven ship, and at that time it was thought he had deliberately committed suicide, or fallen overboard during a fainting spell and had been drowned. It was reported later that his financial affairs were not in good shape.

Japanese Leader Dead.

TOKIO, March 16.—Sumitaka Hasebe, who was elected President of the House of Representatives recently, in succession to Ikuso Oaka, died suddenly yesterday from heart disease. M. Hasebe was formerly Minister of Education, and had been a member of the House of Representatives for years. He sat as President of the House from 1908 to 1911. In 1906 M. Hasebe visited the United States to study its industrials.

Sixty-One Hurt In Wreck.

ST. PAUL, Minn., March 16.—Miss Julia Highberg, 28, of Minneapolis, was killed and more than 60 other passengers were injured, several fatally, when two coaches of a nine car passenger train on the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis & Omaha Railway Saturday night left the rails and rolled down an embankment at Mendota, Minn. The first part of the train remained on the tracks and came to St. Paul with the dead and injured. The train left Omaha for St. Paul early Saturday.

Imprisoned For Pamphlet.

ST. PETERSBURG, March 16.—Prof. Ivan Alexandrevic Bandoin de Courtenay, a member of the faculty of St. Petersburg University, who often has represented Russia in foreign congresses was sentenced Saturday to two years' imprisonment in a fortress for having published a pamphlet advocating federalism.

PROCLAMATIONS IN CHURCH

Suffragettes With White Paint Play Havoc In Cathedral.

BIRMINGHAM, March 16.—Worshippers in the cathedral yesterday found the walls and doors of the edifice covered with suffragette proclamations painted in white letters a foot high, reading "Votes for Women."

"The clergy must rise in our behalf and stop the torturing of women in prison."

Every foot of space except the altar had a sign painted on it, including the pews.

The work is believed to have been that of women who concealed themselves in the cathedral on Saturday night. It is thought it was done for the benefit of the Judges of the Assizes who attended the services yesterday.

Chanted Prayers for Militants.

LONDON, March 16.—Suffragettes yesterday chanted prayers in Westminster Abbey, Yorkminster and the Brighton parish church for their imprisoned colleagues.

Sylvia Pankhurst has written the Dean of Westminster, acquainting him with the intention of the East Londoc suffragettes to march to the abbey next Sunday and participate in the evening service and pray for the success to their cause. In her letter she said she would be present personally and that she desired the dean to adapt the service to a special occasion for the suffragettes.

Chanted In Cathedral.

GLASGOW, March 16.—A band of suffragettes rose in the cathedral during the service yesterday and chanted "Oh, Lord, we beseech Thee to save Emmeline Pankhurst, Helen Crawford, and all the brave women who are suffering for their faith."

GIRLS ESCAPE DEATH.

Six Hundred Get Out of Burning Building by Ladders.

NEWARK, N.J., March 16. — Six hundred panic-stricken girls fled for their lives yesterday in a fire which, starting in the factory of the Baker Printing Co., 251 Market street, threatened the destruction of the entire building block, which takes in many factories and printing establishments.

Many persons, trapped on the upper floors by the rapidly spreading flames, were rescued by policemen and firemen and carried down the fire escapes to safety.

There was an excited rush for the windows, stairways, and the roof. Some of the frightened girls threatened to jump, but were held back by the crowds in the street. The fire by this time had spread through to the front of the building. Ladders were quickly raised and a number of the girls were rescued in this manner.

The building was completely destroyed, involving a loss of upwards of $300,000.

LOCOMOTOR ATAXIA

"My nerves were very bad, and I could not sleep at night, nor could I control my arms or legs," writes Mrs. Robert Bustard, Maxwell, N.B. "Dr. Chase's Nerve Food cured me of what I believe was the early stage of locomotor ataxia or paralysis. I cannot described what I suffered but now I am entirely cured."

HOME RULE DEADLOCK REMAINS UNCHANGED

NEW STATEMENT TO-DAY

LONDON, March 16. — A settlement of the Irish Home Rule difficulty apparently has been little advanced by the British Government's great concessions to Ulsterites, and taking the assertions of both political parties at their face value, the deadlock yesterday remains as immovable as before Premier Asquith's conciliatory offer was made in the House of Commons on March 9.

The signers of the Ulster covenant declare strongly that nothing less than the permanent exclusion of the Protestant counties from Ulster from the Irish Government at Dublin instead of the proposed six-year option will be considered by them.

The more radical covenanters demand not only the exclusion of the four counties — Antrim, Armagh, Londonderry and Down — in which the Protestants are in the majority, but they want the entire Province of Ulster excluded. Anything else, they say, would be the desertion of their comrades in counties where Protestants are in the minority and would be treason to their covenant.

Sir Edward Carson, leader of the Ulster Unionists, yesterday sent a message to Belfast, saying:

"So far as our preparations are concerned, the pronouncement of the Government, if anything, necessitates a still more forward movement this year. We are going to make good in action all we have been saying and preparing for during the past two years."

On the other side the Government newspapers assert that Premier Asquith's scheme is the absolute limit of concessions and is not a basis for further negotiations.

Winston Spencer Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, speaking at Bradford, Yorkshire, Saturday, said:

"It seems to me that in principle —I don't speak of details—that it is the last offer His Majesty's Government can, or ought to make."

Sir Edward Russell, who is a close friend of Premier Asquith, writing in The Liverpool Daily Post, of which he is editor, takes a different view. He writes:

"In non-political clubs everybody is confident that Premier Asquith has made up his mind to let the Nationalists go; that sooner or later he will tell Mr. Redmond that the only feasible home rule is one with the entire exclusion of Ulster."

Irish Nationalist newspapers declare that John Redmond, the Irish Nationalist leader in the House of Commons, and his colleagues, could not possibly support a bill containing further surrenders from the original scheme of Home Rule. Some of the Nationalist organs bitterly denounce the Nationalist members for submitting to Premier Asquith's terms.

The London newspapers are filled with pictures of Ulstermen in civilian clothes and with rifle and cartridge belts, executing skirmish and other drills like trained soldiers.

Winston Spencer Churchill, commenting Saturday in his Bradford address on the preparation being made in Ulster to resist Home Rule, said: "The first British soldier or coast guard who it attacked and killed by the Orangemen, will raise such an explosion in this country as the Tories little appreciate, and it will shake the foundations of society."

Percy Holden Illingworth, the chief Liberal whip in the House of Commons, speaking at the same meeting, said there would be no general election until the Home Rule for Ireland, the Welsh disestablishment and the plural voting bills had been passed by Parliament.

Separate Schools In East City Will Be Entirely Renovated

At the meeting of the East City members of St. Peter's congregation in St. Alphonsus Lyceum yesterday, Bishop O'Brien announced the purchase of the property at the corner of St. Luke and Concession streets. It was secured for House of Providence purposes, although it is not expected that any building will be erected on it for the present. It was also decided at the meeting to thoroughly renovate the Separate School in East City and prepare it for occupancy next September. It is possible that four rooms will be utilized at the opening of the fall term.

LOCAL MAN SHARES IN ESTATE

Mr. J. Renwick of This City will Shares in Distribution of Property Valued at $13,700.51.

SURROGATE COURT

The estate included furniture $200, mortgages $5,614, $26.11 of a bank account and equity as shown in the following real estate; No. 135 Sunnyside Ave. $1,817.86, in Nos. 122 and 124 on the same street $2,775.56 and No. 45 Harbord Street $3,266.98.

No will having been left administration when granted would apportion the husband, Hancock Renwick, one-third of the estate and the balance equally among the children: John Renwick, organist, Peterborough; Mary, wife of P. C. Henry Richmond, Isabel Richmond, Vancouver; William F., merchant, Toronto; Alice, Helen and George.

Compromise Is Likely

Examiner Special:

OTTAWA, March 16.—It is considered probable that a compromise will be reached between those who in the Government ranks desire the complete abolition of agricultural implement duties, as advocated by the Liberals, and those who do not favour a reduction at all. There is a growing impression that the middle course will be taken and the duties reduced to ten per cent. There has been little talk of late concerning the wheat duties, the general impression being that the Canadian millers and other interests have succeeded in prevailing upon the Government to leave them alone. The Government will not be ready to proceed with a discussion in the House of the National Transcontinental charges contained in the report of Messrs. Guetilus and Lynch-Staunton, until a week from to-morrow.

EXAMINER NEWSBOYS CONTINUE TO MAKE MONEY

The Examiner newsboys' competition is progressing exceedingly well. The winner of this week's prize of $2.00, Williams, secured 8 new customers in a settlement, the heads of the families just recently coming to the City in connection with one of the newer industries.

Williams—First.

Anderson—Second.

Hamilton, Thorndyke, Payne, Dallen, ties for third.

Ball, Griffin, Theobald, Vanorman, ties for fourth.

POLICE COURT

In this morning's Police Court F. P. Robinson and his partner, who have been canvassing the city for the Perfection Brush Company, of Toronto, were charged with a violation of the Transient Traders' Act. The charge was laid at the instance of Mr. N. C. Cameron, representative of the Retail Merchants' Association, and after hearing the evidence the Magistrate reserved judgment. He expressed the opinion, however, that the two young men had violated the Transient Traders' Act.

In defence the men claimed that they were only taking orders for goods and were acting only in the capacity of agents for the Toronto firm. They admitted that they bought the goods from the company and resold them at a profit. It was for this reason the Magistrate expressed his opinion that they were not legally employed by the company, but were conducting their own business. The case was adjourned until Thursday morning. This is a test case and the first one to be tried in this city since the Retail Merchants' Association have had the Transient Traders' Act broadened out to include traders who do not occupy premises. The law provides for a fine of $100.

"A DREAM FOR ST. PATRICK'S DAY"

MEMBER FOR WEST PETERBORO' GIVES EVIDENCE

J. H. Burnham, M.P., Says That the Lord's Day Alliance is More Eminent Than Practical

AGAINST SAW-OFFS

Special Wire to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, March 16—J. H. Burnham, Conservative member for West Peterbrough, gave evidence before the Special Committee of the House of Commons investigating the question of the electorate proposition, today. Mr. Burnham thought that if there was a summary way of dealing with bribes it would be very effective. He remarked "If people are so brazen and rotten that they cannot be trusted in these matters then, of course, we cannot do anything." Mr. Burnham said that he was in favour of the proposal to make election day a public holiday. The labour people, he said, would object to Saturday because that is their own holiday. He had no objection to Sunday." The Lord's Day Alliance would object, but that body is more eminent than practical," said Mr. Burnham.

He went on to urge that the local magistrates should be given more power to deal summarily with cases.

Mr. Carvell said: My experience with country magistrates is that in election cases they are violent partisans."

Mr. Burnham was opposed to compulsory voting. He was in perfect accord with Sir Wilfrid Laurier in regard to this proposal. People could not be made to vote if they do not want to. "Some people," he said, "are too infernally good to vote." "If the people will not protect themselves it is no use trying to protect them." Mr. Burnham was emphatically of the opinion that saw-offs of election petitions should not be allowed. "I would make it a criminal offence to consent to a saw-off" he said.

The Committee then considered a number of proposed amendments to controversial selections act.

LOCAL EXAMINERS FOR LICENSES

The local examiners for chauffeurs' licenses state that there is considerable ignorance in regard to the new chauffeurs' license act. Only those who drive for pay, hire or gain have to be licensed, this not applying to private car owners or their families, who can drive without licenses. Some have applied in some places, without even a rudimentary knowledge of running a car and of course had to be turned down.

GOVERNMENT WILL CONCEDE NOTHING MORE

Premier Asquith in Speech to Commons To-day Says He Has Gone as Far as He is Prepared to Go

OPPOSITION DISAPPROVAL

Examiner Special:

LONDON, Eng., March 16.—As foreshadowed by Winston Churchill on Saturday, at Bradford, Premier Asquith to-day, in the House of Commons, before an immense crowd, stated that the Government had gone as far as it was prepared to go in giving concessions to Ulster in the Home Rule bill. He said if the proposals were acceptable to the Ulster leaders, supplementary adjustments of the administration would immediately be made. Asquith's speech was received by strong demonstrations of disapproval from the Opposition benches. Finally he put the straight question to the Opposition as to whether or not the Government proposals were satisfactory to them.

Asquith's direct challenge to the Opposition seemed to non plus his opponents for a few moments. It was contrary to his usual custom to put such a direct question. While there were general murmurings of dissent for a few moments, the Opposition seemed to be leaderless and nobody rose to make a reply. Finally Bonar Law said it was unfair for Premier Asquith to demand a reply on such short notice. There was a feeling of optimism among the Government supporters following Asquith's speech and it was argued that the indefinite attitude of the Opposition indicated a probability of acceptance of Asquith's terms.

JOSEPH O'TOOLE IS FOUND NOT GUILTY

Judge Huycke Addressed Prisoner as a Contemptible Cur, and Wished He Could Have Made a Conviction

THE DEFENCE

Joseph O'Toole, who it will be remembered, was committed for trial by Magistrate Dumble some two weeks ago, appeared before His Honour Judge Huycke this morning.

The first witness for the Crown was the girl in the case, who described the episodes which subsequently led to the arrest of O'Toole.

Detectives Newhall and Meagher also gave evidence of arrest, and Newhall stated that on the Monday after the arrest, the girl's father came to the Police Station, and asked to see O'Toole. This he was permitted to do, and some very obscene language was exchanged, which reflected discredit on the character of the girl.

The case for the Crown being concluded, Mr. Gordon, acting for the defence, said he had no evidence to offer.

Mr. J. Wearing, Assistant Crown Prosecutor, in summing up the case to His Honour briefly outlined the most important facts of the case, which he submitted, warranted a conviction.

This section is known as the White Slave section, and has been broadened to cover such cases as this, and I think in this case it was a direct conspiracy.

Mr. Gordon, addressing His Honour, said: There is no doubt that the prisoner has acted neither manly or decently or proper. The young woman says she had no idea of what was going to happen. All young women say this to protect whatever shred of decency they have retained. There is no evidence of solicitation or procuring, and the law demands that such evidence be shown.

I submit that Your Honour cannot find that his actions can make him guilty, and liable of the offence.

Judge Huycke, in his address said: I have heard the facts as deduced in evidence, and I wish to say that it is one of the most painful and unsavory cases I have ever tried, or heard. I do not make the law, I have to administer it. It is, of course, admitted that unless the facts in the case are within the words of the section, it cannot succeed.

I wish I could convict under this section. I do not think that I have ever heard a case that has made me more indignant than this case has. I think he is one of the most contemptible curs I have ever known, seen, or heard. The only evidence that I have to guide me in convicting, is

EAST CITY CATHOLICS TO BUILD NEW CHURCH

Meeting Held on Sunday Was Largely Attended—Will Hold Services in Basement for Few Years—Have a Location Decided Upon

ON HOSPITAL GROUNDS

For some time past preparations have been made for the formation of a new Catholic parish in East City. With the general plans well matured, a meeting of the Catholic men resident across the Otonabee was held yesterday afternoon for the purpose of discussing the matter of erecting a new church and rectory. His Lordship Bishop O'Brien presided with the attendance exceptionally large. Rev. Dean McColl was present. The site suggested by Bishop O'Brien is on the hospital grounds with the proposed church facing Roger street. This location met with the cordial approval of the meeting, and was formally chosen for the new church.

Accommodation for 1,000.

The plans call for a splendid building of Romaneaque design, and affording seating capacity for 1,000 persons. Some discussion arose as to when the work should be undertaken. On account of numerous other demands in prospect, it was deemed advisable for the present to finish only the basement. This will be so constructed and finished that it will provide comfortable and adequate accommodation for the people during the next few years. A priest's house will be built at the same time as the church, and the spiritual welfare of the East City members of St. Peter's congregation will be given every attention.

The Name Chosen.

The name decided upon was the Parish and Church of the Immaculate Conception, with the new parish to be dedicated to the Blessed Virgin Mary. It will comprise all that part of the present St. Peter's parish east of the Otonabee river.

One of the reasons for postponing erection of the entire church at one stroke is to provide for the future. Under the proposed scheme the immediate needs of the new congregation will be provided for, and, if in the meantime East City shows signs of growth similar to the south ward, the completed church will probably be made larger than provided for in the plans.

The Church of the Sacred Heart has no vacant pews, and the congregations at both the Sunday morning masses have grown to such an extent that it is felt another mass will be required before long.

In East City there are 225 Catholic families already, and if the growth of that section should be more rapid during the next few years it is expected that this number will receive a share of the newcomers.

CLAIMS $5,000 FROM THE CITY

Mr. M. Carton Asks for Damages in That Amount on Account of Injuries Received a Year Ago.

HURT BY A LIMB

M. F. D. Carton has issued a writ on behalf of Mr. M. Carton for $5,000 damages against the City of Peterborough. It will be remembered that in March of last year Mr. Carton was injured by a limb from a tree that was being trimmed in Central Park by corporation men. The branch fell upon Mr. Carton, fracturing his leg and otherwise injuring him.

Looks Like Sergt. Brown For Position

Local Officer Will Likely Get Port Hope Berth

Special to The Examiner.

PORT HOPE, March 16.—The application of Sergt. Brown of the Peterborough police force for the position of Chief of Police here is, it is understood, being very favourably considered and at a meeting to-night it is likely that Sergt. Brown will be appointed. Sergt. Brown was here on Saturday and met the authorities. There are fifty applications for the position, but the braw Scotsman from Peterborough is an odds on favourite for the berth.

Sidewalks Are Under Water in Many Places

The touch of spring has transformed the sidewalks in many parts of the City into miniature canals, banked in with snow thrown up by the snow ploughs. In some cases citizens turned out and tried to drain the walks; in others they called up the Engineer's office and tried to secure the necessary attention in that way. It is hardly necessary to mention particular localities for the reports were more or less general. It was suggested that some of the money which was to have been expended on sewer work back in the February days might have been turned toward the digging of drains and making less sloppy the walks of the working man, who is likely to get his feet wet, catch pneumonia and die just at present.

The public attention is drawn more prominently toward the devious ways followed by some of the snow plough contractors. Crooked paths were weaknesses not only of calves and cows. The horses that laboured before the snow ploughs had little sense of direction. Frequently you find half the sidewalk bare as the result of the thaw while the rest is deep in snow. But this has not been the sole indication of the apparent truth that there is a cog missing somewhere in the snow ploughing methods. Every winter the Board of Works resolves to put on the clamps. Every winter the snow men resolves to give the citizens no chance to complain, and every spring, not to mention the winter, the average citizen wonders whether such a quality as efficiency really exists.

In the meantime the work is paid for out of the taxes and you will notice that the man who should get the most benefit from careful snow removal is the man who "is trying to pay for his little home." Just now he is trying to find a dry way to and from work.

Quo Vadis At The Grand

The wonderful picture "Quo Vadis" probably the finest and most elaborate of G. Kleine's photo dramas was presented at the Grand Opera House on Friday night, and was pronounced by the big audience as superior to "The Last Days of Pompeii," or "Antony-Cleopatra," produced under the same auspices. The picture should not be confused with the other "Quo Vadis," which was shown some weeks ago. That was in three reels, while the present picture consists of eight, and takes 2 1-4 hours to run off. The sacrifice of the Christian martyrs, the releasing of the wild beasts into the arena, and the burning of Rome are vividly portrayed. The picture will be shown at the Grand on Wednesday, Friday and Saturday of this week.

LAKEFIELD SAWMILL HAS CHANGED HANDS

Mr. John Charlton has purchased the plant and business in Lakefield of Mr. John McGrath, who has for the past twelve or fourteen years been operating the Lakefield Customs Saw Mill. Mr. Charlton is fitting the mill out with new machinery and putting it in first-class shape. He also will put in stock wood, lumber, and shingles. The mill will be ready for operation the last week of March and Mr. Charlton hopes to secure the trade in Lakefield and district of custom sawing.

DAN SIMONS STILL A STAR AND A "SCREAM"

The following from the Calgary Morning Albertan, indicates that Dan Simons is still the "boss" fun-maker of the vaudeville stage and still gaining gold and glory for himself and reflecting credit on his native city:

The bill at Pantages this week is unusually clever and amusing. There is not a dull turn in the performance, and at least four of the acts are much above the vaudeville average.

The pet of the house undoubtedly is Danny Simons, the military hobo, whose fun-making has the appearance of being spontaneous. In his exaggerated military make-up he presents a figure of mirth-provoking absurdity, and he has a knack of making his audience laugh with him over the merest nonsense. When his Scotch travesty had been encored for fully four minutes yesterday afternoon, he responded with an impersonation of Mr. T. Roosevelt settling the Mexican squabble, which was a scream.

MONDAY, MARCH 16, 1914

"WOULDN'T THAT JAR YOU?"

The License Commissioners of St. Catharines, Conservative officials, are "trooly loy'l." They have decreed that licenses will only be issued to British subjects as hotel-keepers or bartenders. A man must be a British subject to sell whisky, but the Borden Government can appoint a foreigner, a "Yankee"—at $65 per day to investigate the Transcontinental Railway, and appoint the same man as general manager of the Intercolonial Railway, owned by a British Dominion. We must have our grog served through loyal channels; but our national railway can be managed by a "Yankee," who buys "Yankee" coal for it over the heads of British-Canadian coal miners. There seems to be something "jarring" about this.

STILL ANOTHER.

In 1911 M. Borden and his politic associates bamboozled a great many electors into voting for him on the cry, "No truck nor trade with the Yankees," and Mr. Borden would not be Mr. Borden if he didn't demonstrate how thoroughly he can swallow himself. He is guilty of the worst form of "truck and trade with the Yankees." He appointed a Yankee a member of the Transcontinental commission and paid him 65 dollars a day, to make a misleading and partizan report. This same gentleman was appointed manager of the government railway, the Intercolonial, and the new manager has proceeded to Yankeeise the people's railway. Mr. Gutelius has shown a practical preference for the coal mines of his native country. He has rejected offers of Nova Scotia miners for coal for the Intercolonial in favour of United States mines. The plea is that the price is better. But that is not really the case. The coal from the States was brought in by the Grand Trunk and the added cost makes price the same as the Canadian coal. When it was argued that an open market with the United States would cheapen food products to the Canadian consumer we were told that that would be very disloyal and dangerous. The people must not be benefitted at the expense of loyalty; they must pay for their loyalty. But this doctrine is forgotten when the government wishes to give the United States citizen they appointed as manager of a British Dominion railway, a free hand in discriminating against Canadian coal mines in favour of those of his fellow countrymen. And—but what's the use of talking? The loyalists who swallowed the Conservative Nationalist alliance cannot be expected to make a wry face over anything the Borden government does, no matter how hostile to Canadian interests, and to the slogan "no truck nor trade with the Yankees."

A PARTIZAN REPORT.

The government press is making a violent outcry against the "waste" of forty million dollarsin the construction of the Transcontinental railway. The partisan commission in making such a finding had not the fairness to state that the "wasted" forty millions or whateversum they might have said, was not wasted, but spent legitimately—with the object of making a thoroughly good railway, one that, when finished, would stay finished, and not require more than forty millions in reconstruction as has been done with the hastily constructed Canadian Pacific Railway. The extra expense in building the Transcontinental, was incurred in providing the easiest possible grades, and the easiest curves, so as to facilitate traffic operation. These grades and curves that cost money, will make a locomotive able to haul a much greater load at greater speed, and permit of low cost of operation, that will last as long as the road is used, and will save millions upon operating expenses. Permanent bridges cost more, but the cost is over once the expense is incurred. A thoroughly well-built road will makes a profitable road to operate, freight rates will be cheaper and the public will get a permanent advantage—in the aggregate far exceeding any extra amount expended to secure those advantages, by easy grades and wide curves. The C.P.R. was hastily built and in comparison flimsily built, and though it is a far better road now, this improvement has been brought about by spending millions to ease grades and eliminate curves, and reconstruct temporary bridges. The old Grand Trunk has also spent millions in the same way. No such expenditure will be required on the Transcontinental Railway, except upon such sections built by the present government, with, it seems the sole object of trying to make a case against the Liberal government.

Apart from ex-parte criticism of the justifiable expenditure of money to make the railway permanent, the partizan chaarcter of the investigation is shown in the fact that the present government is adopting in the case of the Intercolonial railway, the very same kind of expenditure the partizan commission condemns in regard to the Transcontinental. The very commissioner, Mr. Gutelius, who condemns the Liberal government for "wasting" forty millions in building the Transcontinental, is recommending to the Minister of Railways the expenditure of very large sums to provide easier grades on the Intercolonial Railway, of which he is manager. He reports that upon the section of the line to be so improved the "waste" of money in providing easier grades and curves will double the haulage capacity and greatly reduce the cost of operation and greatly increase profit of operation. If at the beginning the Intercolonial had been as solidly and well built as the Transcontinental, the present expenditure would not have been required, and the immense loss from increased cost of operation for the past fifty years of the government railway would have been avoided If the Intercolonial had been properly built in the beginning — if as much money had been "wasted" in providing conditions of economical operation, the millions of dollars of annual deficits the people have had to make up, would have been avoided.

Further evidence of the partizan character of the Transcontinental commission is at hand. Its object was to make a point against the Liberal government, no matter how great distortion of facts and extravagances of statement would injure the credit of the country, and create a bad impression in England and other countries where our present government is borrowing millions at an increased rate of interest. This loss will be many times greater than the falsely stated "waste" charged against the Liberal government. A United States' railway contractor, during a recent visit to Ottawa, in an interview with a representative of the Quebec Telegraph, said that the partizan criticism of the Transcontinental was almost a crime. There was no disposition to be fair and make comparisons with the construction of other railways on this continent. He said:

"Let a Royal Commission be appointed, and I will promise to produce practical engineers who have been working on the building of transcontinental railways in the United tSates, who will give evidence to the effect that many of our railways have cost much more per mile under the same conditions and grades than that of the Transcontinental. Why was not such a comparison made?

"Or, why did the two gentlemen appointed to make the investigation not first find out the cost of building the Canadian Pacific Railway as a period when labour and material were half the price that they are today, and add to this the tens of millions of dollars which the C.P.R. are now spending to straighten and grade their line, and even when this is done, it will never compare with the wonderful engineering feat in building this, the greatest transcontinental railway in the world."

This partizan commission, after spending two years at a cost of $65,000, at muck-raking, were not able to discover a single dishonest action to be laid at the door of either the president or any other member of the Transcontinental Railway Commission. All they could do was to trump up a charge that the Liberal government had spent too much money in making the Transcontinental the best and most easily and cheaply operated railway in the world; and the force of this ridiculous accusation is broken by the fact of the present government proposing to apply the same principle by spending immense sums to rebuild the Intercolonial Railway—to insure more profitable and better earning conditions.

Some of the adverse comments on Mr. Asquith's proposals show grief over the loss of a grievance. The British Government will not make war on the Orangemen. It never had the least intention of doing so. Home Rule was introduced as a measure of liberty, not of coercion. Consequently, when the men of Ulster will accept no assurances of fair play, Mr. Asquith offers to allow them to vote themselves out of the Irish Parliament. They do not need to shoot—only to vote. Sir Edward Carson, who, to do him justice, is thinking more of Ulster than of the aims of faction, is impressed and evidently ready at least to consider a settlement.

But Bonar Law will not be satisfied even with the exclusion of Ulster. He insists upon a general election. Of what use would that be? In a general election a dozen subjects besides Home Rule would be considered—the insurance bill, the new and the proposed taxes, the position of the House of Lords, naval and military defence, perhaps even the mangled remains of tariff reform, woman suffrage.

But in any case, nothing would be decided. An English vote in favour of Home Rule would not satisfy Ulster. An English vote against Home Rule would not satisfy the South of Ireland. All the labour and time that have been given to the measure would be wasted. All the work would have to be done over again.

Far better to settle the Irish question now, and remove it from politics. Then the next general election could be fought with the Irish question out of the way. The idea of a general election looks as if it had its origin in the House of Lords, which foolishly forced an election on the budget, and was forced to surrender.—Toronto Star.

PURITY OF ELECTIONS.

Mr. Rowell has introduced a bill into the Legislature to prohibit contributions for election purposes by corporations and Government contractors. In the Dominion Parliament a similar measure has been introduced by one of the Liberals, who has been waiting three years for Mr. Bordep to implement his promises to do this himself. It is some satisfaction to know that in this case the Dominion Minister of Justice has intimataed his approval of the proposal, and that, therefore, there is some possibility of its being carried. But we will be interested to see what Mr. Hanna does in the Legislature. He took a contribution of $500 from a Government contractor whose account was in dispute; and nobody has ever found out whether the contribution had been solicited, or voluntarily given. As the Premier admitted that Mr. Hanna made a mistake it is possible the Government may not have sufficient nerve to vote against Mr. Rowell's bill. Still, Conservative gall seems tobe unlimited; and we should not be surprised if they managed to side-track Mr. Rowell, even if they do not altogether oppose him.—London Advertiser.

NEW FINANCIAL DAILY

Hon. Mr. Fielding to be Head of New Daily Journal of Commerce.

Just as soon as the necessary machinery can be installed, the present weekly 'Journal of Commerce" will be turned into a daily financial and commercial newspaper. A strong company has been formed with the Honourable W. S. Fielding, ex-Finance Minister, at its head to take over the present weekly "Journal of Commerce." Mr. Fielding and those associated with him, believe that the time is ripe for the publication in Canada of a daily paper devoted exclusively to financial and commercial matters. The publication in question will cover commerce and finance in the widest possible way, including among other things, banking, stocks and bonds, municipal debentures, insurance, transportation, manufacturing, wholesale markets, company reports and other matters pertaining to commerce in the broadest aspect. The combination of an ex-Finance Minister as head of the first commercial and financial daily in the country, is a somewhat unusual alliance, and should make for a large measure of success. Mr. Fielding will be president of the company and Editor-in-Chief of the paper, with Mr. J. C. Ross, the present Editor of the weekly "Journal of Commerce" as Managing Editor. In addition, a staff of trained men is being secured to take charge of the various departments to be covered by the new daily. It will make its appearance in the course of the next few weeks, or just as soon as the necessary machinery can be installed. The new publication will not be in any sense a political or party paper, but will be an independent financial and commercial daily.

SATAN GOES TO CHURCH AND SOMETIMES OCCUPIES THE PULPIT--SUCCESSFUL IMPS

Powerful Sermon by Evangelist Pugsley--Evangelistic Services at Park Street Baptist Church Are Productive of Many Conversions---Three Services Yesterday.

Three large and well attended services were held on Sunday in Park Street Baptist Church. In the morning, Evangelist Pugsley preached a very powerful and impressive sermon, taking for the basis of his remarks—Matt 5:16. "Let your light so shine before men, that they might see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in Heaven." The subject of the Evangelist's address was the "Torch Bearers."

He compared the individual to a lighthouse as a warning and a guide to the mariner; and that God requires us to keep the lamps trimmed and the reflector polished. God will hold Christians responsible for souls that have perished through their neglect. He also emphasized the great responsibility of the church. The consecration service was held at the close of the morning service.

The Afternoon Session.

The Sunday School convened at two-thirty o'clock in the basement of the church. Following the opening exercises, the classes adjourned to the main auditorium, where Evangelist Pugsley addressed the entire school of nearly three hundred members, on the subject of "Little Things." His discourse was based largely on the feeding of five thousand people by means of five loaves and two small fishes. The parable was used to illustrate the great things that God can do with the little things of life, when they are consecrated to His service. The speaker showed how God uses little boys and girls in saving souls and promoting the interest of His Kingdom. He exhorted them to surrender themselves to God and dedicate their service to Him. At the close of the afternoon session, the invitation was extended and about sixty members of the Sunday School declared their desire to become Christians.

The Evening Session.

In the evening, the church was filled even to the gallery. Evangelist Pugsley preached for a solid hour on "What Is Satan," holding his auditors almost spellbound. The speaker outlined the personality of Satan, showing the subtle way in which he carries on his work. The Evangelist said that the devil was not the hideous thing that he was pictured to be, with horns, hoofs and tail, but that he appeared in the most attractive forms and often as an angel of light. Satan went to church and sometimes occupied the pulpit. The speaker declared that Satan worked most efficiently through the church members who were deceived and deceiving, and that some of the most successful imps were long coats and white ties. He said that one of the greatest agencies in the world for the devil was the stylish church, with a preacher who criticized the Bible and denied the divinity of Christ. He warned all to be aware of the great adversary of the souls of men and assured them that their only safety was in Christ who had conquered Satan for them.

At the conclusion of the sermon a number rose and said that they were glad that they were privileged to hear such a powerful sermon, declaring it to be the strongest they had ever heard on that particular subject. A number signified their readiness to accept Jesus Christ. Up to the present, over seventy have professed conversion. The meetings will be continued all this week.

Father Minehan Will Preach on Temperance At South End Church

Rev. J. J. O'Brien announced at the Church of the Sacred Heart yesterday, that Rev. L. Minehan, of Toronto, will preach a temperance sermon at each of the two masses next Sunday. He will also preach at vespers. His subject for the evening was not announced. Father O'Brien stated that he had promised the members of the T.A.S. to arrange for a special sermon if they worked hard to increase the membership. Fifty new members had been enrolled at the past two or three meetings, and Archbishop McNeal, of Toronto, kindly consented to arange for Father Minehan's coming to Peterborough next Sunday.

SPECIAL LICENSE RENEWED

Much importance is attached by the directors of the Electric Steel and Metals Co., Ltd., to the fact that the Company has renewed a special license for the use of the Heroult Furnace from the United States Steel Corporation who have the exclusive right for the use of this type of electric furnace in the United States and Canada. This is the most modern and economical of the various electric furnaces in use for the manufacture of liquid steel and ensures an exceptionally low production cost. An offer of $200,000 cumulative preference stock in the Company at par, with a bonus of 50 per cent. of common stock is being made by Rooke, Bickle and Co., 26—28 Adelaide Street, West, Toronto, to provide funds for the completion of the plant being erected at Welland. It is calculated to begin manufacturing by May 1st, and earnings for the first year are estimated on a basis of a production of 5000 tons out of a 4,000 ton capacity plant of steel castings at $580,000, which will be amply sufficient to pay all operating costs, provide for depreciation, pay the preferred dividend and leave a surplus of $61,000. Canada is believed to be on the eve of a marked industrial revival, so that the attractiveness of an offering of this kind to far-sighted investors will be at once apparent.

EIGHT O'CLOCK.

Of all the things the clock can say,
The one I do not like
Is "Eight O'clock," that twice a day,
The clocks and bells all strike.

For Eight is "Time-for-School," you know,
And Eight is "Time-for-Bed";
And when it strikes, you have to go—
There's nothing to be said.

Sometimes it's "Circuses" at Two,
And sometimes "Matinee."
And Three o'Clock is School-is-Through,"
And Four o'Clock is "Play."

And Five o'Clock, and Nine, and Ten,
Eleven o'clock and One,
Why, nice "Perhaps-Things" happen then—
("Perhaps" is always fun).

And Twelve and Six go very fast,
With "Things-upon-a-Plate,"
But soon as Seven hurries past,
You hear the clock strike Eight!

So when I'm grown and have my say,
And help to make thing go,
I'm going to take the "Eight" away
From every clock I know?
—Margaret Widdemer in February St. Nicholas.

EDUCATIONAL ANNIVERSARY SERMONS WERE PREACHED

DR. ROSE'S SERMON

The Education Auniversary of the George Street Church was observed yesterday by the congregation. In the morning the Rev. W. G. Clarke of Belleville, spoke; and in the evening the Rev. S. P. Rose of Montreal delivered an inspiring sermon. At both services special subscriptions to the Educational Fund were solicited, and to the earnest appeals of the visiting pastor those present made a generous response. Large congregations heard both sermons.

In the evening the Rev. Mr. Rose took his text from Mark 10:22, which reads as follows: "And he was sad, and went away grieved; for he had great possessions." He referred to the rich young man who came to Jesus asking what he must do to inherit eternal life. Christ's answer was: "Go thy way; sell whatever thou hast and give to the poor." The young man had had a good life. He had kept the ten commandments from his youth and been sincere in his observance of them. But that day he chose between a merely good life or a life of supreme godliness. He turned his back, for the time at least, upon Jesus Christ.

The demand that Christ had made of the young man was a surprising one. It seemed to some on a parallel with a great General asking a raw recruit to underake a hazard which would test to the limit the courage of the staunchest veteran. At that time Christ's life was, in the eyes of some, that of an adventurer. To become a Christian did not mean, as it does to-day, a worldly advantage. But it meant to run the risk of persecution. The young man had probably argued that his money could be put to better use under his supervision than otherwise.

So he chose between the sorrow of obedience and the sorrow of disobedience, which was not less distressing. Man had been given the privilege of saying "no" to God. In doing so they were to choose between two sorrows. But if they refused to answer to the invitation of Christ they must go forth to sorrow without duty, life would contain the bitter herbs without bread. The hardest way was in reality the easiest way.

The great danger of many of the Church members to-day was to lead the merely good life without choosing to be satisfied with anything less than the supreme life on earth that would win eternal life in the future. The rich young man had forced such a crisis, and had to decide between two sorrows. But with the sorrows of following in Christ's footsteps would come the greatest joys that earth could give. The joys that accompanied the other life were merely worldly joys. No one could deny that worldly pleasures had their attraction, but what would it benefit a man to gain the whole world and lose his own soul.

The speaker made a powerful and earnest appeal for aid and sacrifice of money and men for the educational work of the Church. There was never, he said, a time in the history of the Church when the need was quite so great as to-day. The Church was facing a situation that was not without peril. He drew attention to the fact that the modern missionary movement had its genesis in the colleges, and said that a contribution to the Educational Fund was a direct contribution to missions. Then, reverting to the text and its theme the speaker said: "Choose His life, follow in His footsteps, and share the rapture of His triumph."

The extreme earnestness of manner, the splendid substance of the sermon and the eloquence of the speaker combined to make a decided impression on the congregation.

The Peterborough Of To-day And To-morrow

As Outlined by Rev. James Rollins, of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church---The Time When There Was Only One Family on the 2822 Acres Now Comprising the City---The Case of Public Buildings.

Rev. James Rollins, preaching in St. Andrew's Church, last night, on the City of to-day and to-morrow, took for his text Revelations 21:1, "I saw a new heaven and a new earth."

Mr. Rollins said, if we could sit in our seats and in a few minutes see as in a panorama the evolution of the City from the time when there was only one family on the 2,822 acres now comprising the City up to the present moment, we would realize something of the problems which are created when 20,000 people try to live where a hundred years ago only a few families lived.

Mr. Rollins asked what constituted a city, and replied that streets, pavements, sewers, houses, hospitals, schools, churches and stores were as necessary to a city as a plant was to a manufacturing establishment, and that while the City was a much more complex thing than these, the city of to-morrow would pay more attention to these than at present. Cities were now allowed to grow in any way. Like Topsy, they grow, and that is why they so often look like Topsy.

Civic Legislation.

Mr. Rollins advocated the securing of legislation which would enable the City to control the laying out of streets, and the subdivision of land for residential purpses outside the City limits. There should be blue prints in the City Engineer's office, showing the streets, trunk sewers, trunk power lines, and parks for a city of least 50,000, and when the owner of land outside the City wishes to dispose of it for residential purposes it should be a matter of his placing the streets where the blue prints of the City call for them and not where it may suit him and a Township Council to place them. Such legislation might be rendered useless as there is a great tendency to let the future take care of itself, especially if taking care of the future means any increase in the tax rate and even blue prints cost money.

The People of the City.

The most important thing about a city is the people of the city. Just as the most important thing about a factory are the human beings associated with the factory. Mr. Rollins said it had long been his contention that an employer who did not take an interest in the personal well being of his employees, who did not see that they work in sanitary conditions, in wholesome surroundings, was a mere exploiter and did not deserve standing room among decent, self-respecting people. It should be the proud boast of every industry that its men, from the management down, were a husky, hearty, happy, healthy, intelligent, industrious, influential bunch of people. The employer who could not see the financial value of these qualities in the velopment of his industry was as lacking in grey matter as he was in religious sensiblity. The industries of the country were, along with the religious and educational institutions of the country, responsible for the type of manhood and womanhood produced in the country. It was the perogative of industries to turn out men low browed and narrow chested, and furtive eyed,, or men high browed, broad chested and fearless eyed.

There would be some new departments in the city of to-morrow. An increasing number of the actual necessities of life would be managed by the people, for the people.

Wider Application.

The principle of cooperation already working so well in the administration of education, police protection, fire protection, water, light, power, streets, would be given a much wider application in the city of to-morroy.

Mr. Rollins said there was no reason why the people should not deliver bread to themselves at cost, as well as water, at cost. Th was no reason why the people s not deliver coal to themselves a cost, instead of getting it, as at present, below cost. It made Mr. Rollins feel badly to be getting coal below cost. It was not right. The present was a providential time to establish civic coal yards. The coal dealers would be glad to be relieved of the present, to them, intolerable situation.

City of To-morrow.

The city of to-morrow would stop the suicidal policy of commercializing the people's pleasures, appetites and passions. These should not be exploited by private individuals for private gain. Nearly all the pictures which were shown were supposed to be educational. To-morrow we will make the discovery that the place to show educational pictures is in the school buildings, which were erected for educational purposes. Most of the equipment is already there. These buildings could be used from 4 to 6, and from 8 to 10 for the entertainment of the people without increasing the overhead charges very much. There would be a department of play in the city of to-morrow working hand in hand with the Department of Education and the Department of Health.

Swimimng Places.

The monstrosity of a city pouring its sewage into the river and neglecting to provide swimming places for its boys and the city of the future will see to it that the weaknesses of the people are not commercialised as they now are under our license system. The folly and the crime of that will one day dawn upon enough people to make its repetition impossible. A license to sell spirituous and fermented liquors was acquired in this city the other day by a certain individual, the consideration being $15,000. That was for a piece of paper granting a certain privilege; over and above that he must pay for the building in which to conduct the business; he must equip it, and buy the materials with which to conduct the business. You can easily figure out how much good money will be withdrawn from other commercial enterprises if this $15,000 license is to be a financial success.

Folly Will Cease.

That folly will cease in the city of to-morrow. Mr. Rollins liked Lady Aberdeen's motto: "Do the difficult things to-day, the impossible things to-morrow." The department of health will have very much wider powers in the city of to-morrow than they have to-day.

Inspection will be carried into every department of life where human interests can be served and helped by it. The police will not be left to handle the whole question of vice, its detection and punishment, and prevention. The Health Department will co-operate with the Police Department. Vice is a question of health, as well as a question of morals. You cannot keep the city healthy if you do not keep the city pure, God is not mocked.

Contagious Diseases.

Dr. Hastings, Medical Health Officer of Toronto, stated that diseases which were the direct result of vice cost the United States, in 1912, three billions, two hundred million dollars. He said Canada is not escaping. If we think we are it is because we are not investigating. We take steps to prevent the transmission of small-pox and scarlet fever and some other contagious diseases to the rest of the people. There are some other diseases which we have been too sensitive to face and fight. The time will come when the knowledge which physicians have and which they hold sacredly in trust, will be placed sacredly at the disposal of the Medical Health Officer, to be used by him sacredly in the interests of public health. Marriage licenses will some day be issued by physicians, and the innocent and confiding will at least be permitted the opportunity of acting with their eyes open, and not in the dark. A man cannot get $500 insurance on his life without a medical examination. The time will come when he will not be able to get a marriage license without a physician's certificate that he is at least free from the diseases caused by vice.

Subject for Next Sunday.

Mr. Rollins regretted that time did not permit of his taking up other matters in connection with the city of to-morrow and intimated that next Sunday night he would discuss the question of "Work, Wages and Unemployment." He invited the unemployed and the captains of industry to be present.

"THE INSIDE OF THE CUP"

Interesting Sermon on Winston Churchill's Money

A very interesting sermon, and the first of a series, that will be given by the Rev. C. G. Smith of Belleville, was delivered at the Murary Street Baptist Church last evening, before a very large congregaiton.

The subject last night was "The Inside of the Cup," or "Is Winston Churchill right."

"The Inside of the Cup" is one of that talented writer's last books, and has caused widespread interest among thousands of people. Upon this He took as his text, Matthew, 23:26, He took as his text, Matthew, 23:26, "Thou blind Pharisee, cleanse first that which is within the cup and platter, that the outside of them may be clean also," and said in part as follows:

Jesus Christ was of mankind. He was a man. He lived among the children of men. He spent His time among the little children, and among the poor indeed.

In the home of the Pharisee, every one was supposed to observe the punctillious form of washing. It was a matter of religion. The Pharisees are not satisfied with washing their own hands but take the microscope, and looked to see if they can find a speck of dirt on other people's hands. I would say to the Pharisee, that this punctillious washing business, is a matter of the body, and not of the soul. Cleanse first the inside, and then it is only natural to suppose that the outside of the body will be cleansed also. A man's action are always compatible with his belief. This has been referred to by one of the world's latest books by Winston Churchill, who ranks among the greatest writers of the world. If Winston Churchill only writes to people as a novelist, I would not undertake to denounce him from the pulpit. But he does so as a preacher, and he styles himself a reformer, when he undertakes his new interpretation of Christianity, and in this he naturally undertakes to cut out everything we have held precious and dear in these sublime truths, and which we hope to hold to our latest breath.

I say, that as a preacher, he shall be judged by a preacher. Everyone is reading the book. I have fifteen people in my own congregation who have read the book, and who have come to me and have said, "I wonder if he is right?" Why is it that such a large number of people read this book, written by a man like this, and swallow it up. Why, because there is love in it, and love covers a whole multitude of sins.

The Rev. Smith then vividly outlining the book. If you want to help people you must live with them. The heart is deceitful above all things and desperately wicked. Winston Churchill would turn out every member of the Church who is rich. I would turn out every man who is not rich, but who ought to be. Winston Churchill says that a man should not have more than $5,000. I say that a man is wicked if he can make $5,000 and does not and use it as God intended him to use it. Winston Churchill, heal thyself! He is a rich man, but he has not given his goods to feed the poor. If my ship is in the wrong course, will it be right if I take the compass and chart and throw them overboard. Never. We can only set right by keeping the course, and when we take on a new pilot, which is Jesus Christ.

Winston Churchill says that every man should have three acres and a cow, whether he wants it or not, and should have plenty of money. "I have been young, but now am old, yet never saw I the righteous forsaken, nor his seed begging their bread." It is not by reformation that a man is changed, but by transformation. Seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness, and then, let us pray.

Rev. Smith will conduct special services at the Murray Street Church during the coming week and it is expected that there will be largely attended.

It is said that Christy Mathewson of the Giants will draw a fatter salary than any other man in baseball under a player's contract. The attempts of the Feds to grab Matty caused the Giants to dig deep in order to keep the star twirler.

Mike (Twin) Sullivan is going to take hold of Johnny Boyle, the Lowell lightweight, and groom him for a ten-round bout with Johnny Duffy, the Buffalo lad.

Newest Ideas in

Wall Decoration

The new things for 1914 Wall Decoration are certainly of a high order. While some features seem to stand out as superior to all others, that is a matter of the taste of each purchaser to decide. Certainly the choice of styles and new ideas in combinations is wide enough for all to be exactly suited.

We want to particularly mention the handsome Cretonnes we are showing in patterns that match the borders.

If you can spare the the time soon to visit our show rooms, we will be pleased to show the new papers that are now on display.

Big Easy Arm Chairs In Whose Depth

Is The Experience Of Solid Comfort

Thus Providing the Home With a Delightful Means of Real Rest

"TAKE THIS CHAIR, it is more comfortable," says the hostess, and she pushes forward one of the luxurious arm chairs into whose depth the visitor sinks with the grateful ease of real repose. Perhaps the chair is one of those Spanish Cowhide covered rockers, that are selling for $24.50, and which are also to be obtained in ordinary arm chair style, upholstered all over.

The strong leather means a lifelong service, while one has a choice between a spring seat, or a separate cushion seat, both styles being a veritable nest of comfort.

And there is Another Chair in the handsome mission finish, which is strongly built of solid oak, and has carved arms and back.

This is a rocking chair having spring seat and padded back; upholstered in Spanish cowhide, and priced $19.75.

A similar chair with the padding on the back a little different; is finished in polished golden oak and is selling for $16.75.

Morris Chairs Substantially built of quartered oak in the beautiful fumed finish. The big arms are given the form of boxes, which will serve alike for a woman's odds and ends, or a man's books and pipe. The seat and the adjustable back are covered in green plush, the whole being a very commodious chair, such as any home would be proud to possess. The price is $15.00.

And Following This Brief List are many other styles of arm chairs, leather and imitation leather covered, in rocker or rigid design; the lowest priced model being of exceptionally good value at $5.69.

York Loan Property Sold For $250,000

TORONTO, March 16.—The Parkview Mansions, an asset of two defunct companies—the York Loan and Savings Company and the Union Life Assurance Company—have been purchased by Messrs. J. J. Walsh and David Lavine from the Metropolitan Life Assurance Company of New York, which assumed the assets of the Union Life Company. The deal was consummated on Saturday by H. H. Williams & Co. The purchase price was given as $250,000.

The deal includes two properties, the Parkview Mansions, containing thirty-four suites, with a frontage of 264 feet and a depth of 253 feet, and the southeast corner of Roncesvalles avenue and Fermanagh avenue, consisting of four stores and a vacant lot.

Joseph Phillips, of York loan fame, erected the building, which he intended to use as an office building, but he subsequently converted the structure into apartments. Five years before the York Loan closed its doors the property was purchased for about $50,000. Subsequently the stock fell into the possession of the Toronto Life Assurance Company. The Union Life absorbed the Toronto Life, and when the former concern became insolvent the property became an asset of the Union Life, and was later acquired by the Metropolitan Life Assurance Co. of New York.

Conditions In Port Hope

PORT HOPE, March 16.—The Executive committee of the Children's Aid Society for the united counties of Northumberland and Durham laid plans, at a special meeting in the Town Hall Saturday night, for carrying on the work on a scale not attempted in the counties before. Every municipality is to be communicated with at once and a general meeting called, at which each municipality will have a representative. The election of officers will take place at that meeting, and the work of properly caring for the district will be pushed forward by Mr. W. H. Beales, the Inspector.

Mr. Beales made a short report of conditions as he found them in Port Hope, referring among other places to one house where the parents and four little children are living. His report concerning this house concludes: "The whole surroundings make a picture of misery, hopelessness, abject poverty and dilapidation not surpassed by anything I have seen in the slums of our larger cities. As a place of habitation for human beings it is a crying shame and a disgrace to the owner, and should be razed to the ground."

Dr. Dickinson, the M. H. O., has given instructions to have the house closed and placarded at once.

ABOUT FLOWERS

When sowing annuals that do better to be sown in the open and then transplanted when they are large enough to handle, select a place that is best protected from the cold winds and that will get the greatest amount of sunshine. If you have time, dig this up in the fall, and by May it will be in fine shape for working. Bake it well with the garden rake until it works down as fine as flour, because most of the flower seeds are very small. If the soil was left in a coarse or lumpy condition, it would leave the surface too open and the seeds would not be covered very well and consequently they would dry out too quickly. After it is well worked with the rake it will be ready for the seeds. Sow each kind separately in rows rather than sow them broadcast. After sowing the seeds cover them lightly, firm the soil well and place a label with the name of the variety on it at one end of the row and a stick at the other so you will know the name of the variety when the seeds should come up.

Sow each variety parallel with the other, and wide enough apart so that you can work with the hoe. The rows should be about nine or 10 inches apart. It is advisable to sow them by hand, as by so doing the seedlings make better plants. You will be able also to transplant them when they are large enough much easier and with far better results.

After the seeding and watering are done, it is a good plan to cover them lightly with some good clean straw on which is placed a few pieces of brush. This is to prevent the wind from blowing the straw away. The idea of this is to keep the soil moist for a much longer period than if there was no covering at all. It also protects them in case of a severe frost. Look after them frequently and if the soil appears to be getting dry, water them, straw and all. It is not necessary to uncover them to do this. Do the watering in the morning. After the seeds are sprouted through the soil gradually uncover, taking off a little at a time. It is a great advantage to have a watering can that holds about two gallons with a sprinkler; you can then water the seeds gently and have no fear of washing them out of the soil. Another important point is to use soft water if it can be secured.

When lifting the young plants take as much soil as the roots will carry. In planting, place the young plants in the soil about the same depth that they were in the seedling bed. Make them good and firm by pressing the soil about the roots with the hand. After planting give them a good thorough watering. The best time to plant is in the evening or on a dull day.

The first flower I will mention of the varieties that have to be transplanted is the sunflower or Helianthus. This is rather a coarse flower, but if planted in the right place in the background, it is all right, as it is always smiling with its bright happy, face.

The next I will mention is the tobacco plant. This is noted for the delightful odor which it throws off, especially in the evening or early morning. Snapdragon is an old-fashioned flower, but pretty hard to beat. This flower can be brought to great perfection both in point of size and color.

Stock is a well known annual that should be in every collection. It is noted for its delightful perfume. The strain I would suggest for the beginner is the mixed ten-week stock in them you will have a great variety of color.

There are two classes of marigolds, the African and the French. The French class grows very strong, and the finest strains produce enormous flower heads, which are as dense as a knitted ball. They are of a dense orange or pale color or of intermediate shades. Although the plants are not quite hardy, they are quite easily raised.

French Marigolds are smaller than the African, double and single, tall and dwarf varieties. Some of the varieties are elegantly striped and spotted. The tall varieties grow about 20 inches high, and the dwarf about nine inches.

PETUNIAS

For anybody wanting a good strong bed of flowers the petunia is the best, especially the single variety. If the finest strains are procured and planted in a good open position, by the middle or end of June, they will be one mass of bloom, and will continue to bloom until the frost cuts them down. The double petunia is also very good and well worth growing. It has handsome blooms, but they do not flower so freely as the single.

VERBENAS

The verbena is an annual that grows rather low and spreading. As it is a vigorous grower, it should be given plenty of space in a good open position. If planted in a bed of border, they should be put well to the front, as they only attained a height of from six to 12 inches. They should be planted about 18 inches apart.

There are many other annuals which I have not mentioned. The idea is just to get the farmer's wife interested in them and when that is accomplished they will be so interested and delighted that they will try other varieties afterwards.

THE UNFAIRNESS OF THE PARTIZAN INVESTIGATION

While it is quite proper that all charges against public officials and all suspicious circumstances connected with public affairs, should be carefully investigated, the truth ascertained, and the guilty punished, yet it may be a question how far justice is promoted by placing the inquiry in the hands of a partisan commission. The judge who tries an accused person is supposed to be impartial; he is not the prosecutor; his only object is to ascertain the truth, no matter who suffers. A commission is, of course, not altogether in the place of a judge, for it cannot decide, or punish. It is only to secure evidence. But a partisan commission is naturally biased. It is tempted to prove the accused innocent or to prove him guilty, according as either result will benefit its own political friends, and injure its opponents.

We have had some illustrations lately. The Government desired to damage the Liberal party in connection with the building of the National Transcontinental Railway. It appointed as a commission of inquiry a Conservative lawyer of the most partisan type, and one of its own officials who had been borrowed from a rival railroad company. The only item of expenditure in over a hundred millions of dollars to which the colour of graft could be given was one of about $7,000 paid for a lease for which the commissioners say proper value was not given. And that after all is only a matter of opinion. But by disregarding the policy of the late Government, indorsed by Parliament, to build a first class road, they have been able to show that millions could have been saved had a cheaper road been built. Were that fact fairly and truthfully stated, no harm would be done. That a second-class road could be built for much less money than a first-class road is a self-evident proposition. But the report is so drawn up, and the figures so presented, that to a casual observer there is an appearance of wasteful expenditure on the part of the late Government. The report is a campaign document, pure and simple, but one that is calculated to injure the reputation of Canada. The facts stated might all be correct, but they are stated in such a manner that a wrong impression can be given. Such a report is manifestly unfair.

Another case is that of the Trent canal. A Conservative member of the Local Legislature is appointed to investigate certain charges. That he is prejudiced against the Liberal party is not to his discredit. That he should be chiefly interested in finding evidence of wrong-doing is only natural. But he is in a false position. He is a prosecuting attorney acting in a judicial capacity. Now he presents a report condemning certain Government employees. In so far as the evidence justifies this report he is quite correct in his action. But it was not necessary to drag in hearsay evidence reflecting on prominent Liberals, who had no opportunity to defend themselves.

Wherever a commission, whether partisan or not, finds wrong-doing in public affairs, it is their bounden duty to so report, and it is equally the duty of those in authority to punish the guilty. We are not objecting to the fullest inquiry into all the actions of any Liberal Government. And where offences have been discovered, we are not disposed to shield the guilty, or save them from punishment. But we dislike partisan investigations whose chief object seems to be the providing of campaign literature at the public expense.—London Advertiser.

BIG GATHERING OF ORANGEMEN

Two Important Sessions Will Be Held in Lindsay

LINDSAY, March 16.—Two very important gatherings of the Orange Order will be held in Lindsay next week.

The twenty-eighth annual session of the Grand Chapter of Ontario East, Royal Black Knights of Ireland, will meet in the lodge rooms of L.O.L. No. 557, on Tuesday afternoon next, at 2 o'clock p.m., when it is expected about 150 delegates will be present. They will finish their business by noon on Wednesday, March 18th, when the Grand Orange Lodge of Eastern Ontario will meet in the Town Hall at 2 p.m. on Wednesday, with about 300 delegates in attendance, and will continue in session until Thursday evening. On Wednesday evening, it is expected, the Grand Lodge will attend service in one of the churches of the town, the sermon being preached by the Grand Chaplain, Rev. W. F. Fitzgerald, of Kingston.

SIGNS AND TOKENS OF SPRING

A great many long years ago Aristotle said: "For one swallow does not make a spring, nor yet one fine day." We have to-day the finest March day we could ask, but that does not make spring. It is, however, one of the signs showing that the backbone of winter is broken. We have still other signs—we have the cawing crows, the gurgling streams, the floating streets, the walks ankle deep in slush, and we see other signs of spring, while the tinware men are bringing the maple sap buckets to the front. The relaxing grip of winter permits the maples to draw breath. The sap is rising in their grey trunks, and the mystic laboratory in the heart of the maple that transmutes the earth moisture into sugar laden sap is beginning to operate.

And the farmers will be tapping their trees soon, if not already—to-day the sap would "run" like evil tidings.

It is probable that the maple syrup season will be a short one. Here we are in the middle day of March, and we may expect that at the present prospect, the buds of the maples will soon begin to swell and open; then good-bye to sugar-making. Then the maple trees will have some better use for their sap than sugar and syrup-making. The farmer will have to vary the saying "make hay while the sunshines" into "make sugar while the sap runs." If a short maple syrup season means an early spring, give us the early spring. We have burnt coal to roast us inside, and shivered when we went outside, long enough. It is time for a change. Assiduous Thomspon sings: "Come Gentle Spring, Etherial Mildness Come," and as tuneful Tennyson sings, bring us "the boyhood of the year."

George Street Epworth League

A party from the George Street Epworth League paid a visit to the Protestant Home on Friday evening and entertained the old people there. The attractive programme rendered was thoroughly enjoyed by the audience, who look forward very much, to these entertainments.

The League is invited to a Shamrock social this evening, by St. Paul's Guild, and all leaguers are requested to meet at George St. Church, 7:45 sharp.

The reformer never accomplishes much, probably for the reason that if he did the job would be abolished.

LINDSAY AUTHORITIES BLAMED BY JURY

LINDSAY, March 16.—The adjourned inquest into the death of John Madison, one of the victims of the fire which occurred here on March 11, was resumed before Coroner Wood Saturday afternoon.

Much interest was manifested in the proceedings. The authorities were severely criticized for their laxity in allowing such conditions as were shown to exist in the Madison household. After the proceedings terminated Mrs. Madison and her mother, Mrs. Perrault, were taken to the House of Refuge. The one child who survived, it is understood, will be cared for by the Children's Aid Society.

The following is the verdict: "We, the jury empanelled to inquire into the death of John Madison, find that the said John Madison came to his death as the result of burns sustained while in an intoxicated condition in his residence on March 11, his death taking place at the Ross Memorial Hospital on the morning of March 12. The fire was caused by the breaking of a match while it was being lit by one of the family, the head falling among a lot of inflamable material consisting of rags, paper and other litter. We further find that the condition of the premises and the surrounding generally were insanitary in the extreme, and contributed to the death of the said John Madison, and that the authorities should have taken action to remedy the same."

SALE OF SHAMROCKS RETURNED $845 FOR THE ORPHANAGE

The sale of Shamrocks on Saturday resulted in the securing of the large sum of $845 for St. Vincent's Orphanage. His Lordship Bishop O'Brien referred to the generosity of the citizens as exemplified on this occasion, and expressed his appreciation of the kindly spirit manifested by many of the Protestant people of the city. The supply of Shamrocks was exhausted at noon on Saturday, and it is felt that the sum obtained would have otherwise been considerably exceeded. However, the ladies and the committee who had charge of the work are delighted with the returns.

Robt. Neill's rink won a niche in the 1913-14 honour roll of the Curling Rink by defeating Dr. Wightman in the final game of the Consolation series of the local bonspiel on Saturday night. It will be noticed that an extra end, fifteen in all, was required to reach a decision. It is hardly necessary to say that it was a close contest. Dr. Wightman's last stone, to be exact, the 240th, and the last of the game, might have given the decision to the Wightman rink. This probability, however, was very slight, for Neill was strongly entrenched with the single stone that was just an inch or two nearer the button than Wightman's best. And anyway, it is too late for probabilities. Wightman's last stone fell by the wayside and the game went to Neill by one point.

On the sixth end Wightman was leading by four points when Neill got a five end on the seventh and changed the whole face of the game. Neil had the only five-stones in the rink on this end. Wightman tied it up again on the ninth end. On the twelfth end Wightman was leading by two, and on the 13th was laying two when Skip Neill saved his own game. He picked an opening through the port and raised one of his own stones practically to the button for one counter. The fourteenth end should have wound up the game, but Neill chalked up another counter and tied the game.

The deciding end was in doubt almost to the last stone. Wightman lay half way over the twelve foot ring. Neill placed three stones around him, one of them being a few inches nearer the button. Guards in front made it difficult to reach when Wightman's last stone was his final hope. He had a chance on his first when Neill had only two stones near the Wightman counter. The (to themselves) called for a fast stone to break up the formation, but something went wrong. On his next stone Neill stole one into the weak position and filled it nicely. That forced Wightman into a wide draw that proved too weak on the stick ice. The game was practically won the 13th when Neill robbed Wightman of two by the clean raise already referred to.

It was a good game to follow, especially after that five and with which Neill closed up a rather wide gap. The ice was perspiring; in other words it was a trifle sticky, although some of the gallery regarded it as good going. In any case there was many a stone that failed to get over the hog line. The sweepers had to be keenly alert, for some of the stones had to be watched right to the barrier. At times they looked like lazy nags, to use a racing expression, that wanted to lie down in the home stretch. Only the spurs and work of the sweepers breezed them into position. The character of the ice made the game a little more uncertain than usual. Some of the stones bumped the end of the rink, and others that looked strong fell because of a moment's delay before the sweepers lent their aid. There were the exceptions, however, for both rinks gauged the ice exceptionally well.

The skips were given good support. Tennant played a strong game leading for Wightman. The two Williams, Higgins and Henry, topped off a good rink. Neill was helped out on numerous occasions by J. W. Firth, who played a strong game.

Neill 17, Stubbs 9

The work of the two Skips brought out considerable good curling. On the evening's play there was very little to choose between the two. It was anybody's game, and unless the weather turns cold again there will not be many more games.

T. R. And A. A. Won By 8 To 5

WINNIPEG, March 15.— Weakened through the loss of the services of Del Irvine, the star cover-point, and Stan Marples, the brilliant wing player, and worn out through gruelling matches on heavy ice during the past three days, the Monarchs were beaten Saturday night by the Toronto R. and A. A. team here Saturday night by the score of 8 to 5 in the first of the two exhibition matches.

The smallest crowd of the season turned out, but were treated to the best exhibition of hockey of the week. With Dick Irvin back in the line-up the Monarchs showed a wonderful improvement over their Allan Cup form, and despite the wet ice, the play was fast from start to finish. The Torontos came in for a lot of abuse from the spectators for their underhand tactics in stopping players by such mean methods as catching an opponent's sweater, hooking or tripping when out of reach, which is foreign to western hockey.

Torontos put up a fast exhibition and deserved their victory, but not by a margin of three goals. Stuart in goal for the Monarchs had a night off and several easy shots fooled him. Dick Irwin was the star of the game, scoring four of the five goals, and the visitors simply could not stop him, as time and again he skated past the entire team for a score. He took a lot of abuse, Heffernan and Gooch hooking or bodying him in an attempt to stop the tricky centre player. Jack Brown and Gordon Meeking were the stars of the visitors, they scoring several pretty goals. Maxwell and Alex Irwin were very aggressive for the Winnipeg champions. The teams:

T. R. and A. A.—Goal, Smith; point, Gooch; cover, Heffernan; rover, Stevenson; centre, G. Meeking; left, H. Meeking; right, Brown.

Horsefield replaced H. Meeking in the second half.

H. Sporule referee first half and judge of play second. Kean judge of play first half and referee second half.

Torontos Won First Game From Victorias In Stanley Cup Series

TORONTO, March 16.— Toronto N. H.A. champions, won the first game for the Stanley Cup on Saturday night with Victoria, Pacific Coast League champions. Five to two was the score, and is a good indication of the play. It was the first time that a Stanley Cup game has been played in Toronto, and, although the Arena was well filled with spectators, they were far from pleased with the brand of hockey exhibited by the champions.

In fact the game was one of the biggest disappointments of the season. Even though the home team did win, there is no doubt but that the amateur game has the call in this city. The Victoria team were away below the form expected of them, while the Blue Shirts did not show the same team play and aggressiveness as in their game with the Canadiens on Wednesday last.

There was little to enthuse over at any time. Victorias displayed considerable speed and stick-handling, but its effectiveness was lost by two much individual work. Team play and combination work was supposed to be the strong point of the coast champions. Saturday's exhibition did not prove this to the local followers. Of the little combination shown the Toronto forwards were for the most part the participants.

Very Ragged Game.

The game opened ragged and continued so until the end. Victoria had as many shots as the local forwards, but for the most part they were outside the defence. When they did get inside Marshall and McNamara, Homles proved their stumbling block. Their brilliant stick-handling seldom gave them any returns. Their shooting was fair, but the weakness seemed to be in the following in of shots. Holmes always had plenty of time to clear.

Lindsay, in goal did not over-exert himself and took things with much ease. Several of the locals' goals were scored on long shots, which Lindsay tried to handle too easily. The fast work of the local forwards, especially "Cully" Wilson, gave him considerable trouble. Genge was the best of the defence pair. The big fellow has a world of speed. He is somewhat slow in starting, but when in stride proves a hard man to stop. He generally came to grief before he had a chance to shoot, as the local forwards checked back hard. Genge is a player much after the style of Murphy of St. Michael's, but does not circle as much as the local player. Lester Patrick contented himself with staying back on the defence, although he did make several sallies into the local citadel.

Poulin at right wing gave Walker some trouble in the early part of the game, but the local forward stopped him with his famous hook check. Poulin is speedy, and a good stick-handler, but seldom penetrated the local defence. Foyston outplayed Dunderdale at centre ice. The latter, like the other members of the visitors' forward line, slowed up in the last period. Dubble Kerr, the ex-Ottawa player, at left wing, was not up to the form he displayed with the Senators several years, although it was reported that he had improved during his sojourn on the coast. Walter Small, Ulrich and Rowe were used at various stages of the game.

McNamara replaced Cameron on the local defence, and, although not as speedy a player as the regular, rushed just as well, and used good judgment when close in on the visitors' goal. Walker, although he tried hard, did not have as much success with his hookcheck as in his N. H. A. games. The teams:

Toronto subs.—"Cully" Wilson, McGiffin, Corbeau, Claude Wilson.

ATHLETIC CLUB MEETING ON WEDNESDAY NIGHT

Members of the Peterborough Athletic Club, as well as all those who wish to join the new organization, are asked to attend the general meeting of the Club, which will be held on Wednesday night of this week, March 18th, at 8 o'clock, in the Y. M. C. A. The members will be asked to vote on a number of important matters that have been taken up by the Executive, and it is requested that there should be an especially large attendance.

CANADIAN LEAGUE NOTES

OTTAWA, March 14.—The Ottawa Baseball Club which won the championship of the Canadian League last year, is now feeling the effects of the raids instituted by the Federals. The majority of the champions have been holding out, and several claim to have in their pockets offers from the outlaws far in excess of anything the Senators could offer. "Lefty" Rogs, who broke up many games with his bat last summer, and who pitched the Senators to victory on fifteen occasions, refuses to sign. He writes that he has taken the Illinois agency for a big oil firm, and that if he plays ball at all it wil be with one of the Federal clubs in that district. Smykal, Kubat, Donovan and several others are holdouts. Of course, the Ottawa Club does not believe that the Federals are really after the minors, but the threat of a jump to the Federals is a pretty effective weapon, especially when supporters are anxious to have the club bring back the men who won the championship last season. Already the Ottawas have signed Catcher Lage, Pitchers Kane Lill and Bernloko, infielders Dalon, Tesch and Bullock, and outfielders Powers, Murphy, and Shaughnessy. They are weak in the box, and to-day Manager Shaughnessy wrote to President Lichtenhein, of the Montreal club, asking for a couple of twirlers. His chances of getting assistance from the Royals are not bright, however, as they, too, have been hit by the Federals. Hughie Jennings promised to help out the Ottawas, and he, too, has been asked to send along reserves. The Ottawas open the season at St. Thomas on May 7th, and play their first home game against the Torontos on May 14. The season closes with the Peterborough team here on Monday, Sept. 7th. They will train at Battle Creek, Mich., or South Bend, Ind. Fort Wayne has been passed up on acount of the flood danger there. Players have been ordered to report on April 13th.

Hamilton Times: The officials of the Hamilton Ball Club received the signed contracts of the players who will be on the Hamilton line-up this season from Manager Yates yesterday, and according to reports given out this morning they are a likely-looking lot and when they report here on April 15th the rail birds who make a practice of watching them work out will see some very fast men in action. Every man on the local roster has played in some fast league, and if they live up to the past performances the Hamilton team should be up fighting when the count is taken up.

Artie Schwind, whom Ottawa is anxious to get back this season to fill the big gap at short, is going like a house afire at Atlanta, Ga., where he is expected to fill the shoes left vacant by Harry Bisland, the hard-hitting shortfielder who was drafted by St. Louis Americans. According to the Sporting News, Schwind is more than holding his own with the other candidates for the place, and if he can sting the ball away at all he will catch on without any trouble. This, of course, will knock all chance of him returning to the Capital.

President J. J. McCaffery of the Toronto International League club, stated he would open the Canadian League season with a street parade and general big doings. Mr. McCaffery in discussing Fred Herbert, declares he will be up in the big league next year. J. J. also says Herbert has developed a perfect "move". While in the Canadian League in 1913 Herbert had a "move" that few big league twirlers possessed. He did not have to improve on it very much.

Dusty Bullock has deserted the holdout league, and says he will play the game of his career for the Senators this season.

Charlie Isaac, who will play third for Toronto, hit .348 for Scranton last season in the State League. He fielded .911 in 109 games.

BASEBALL

The Rochester, Toronto and Montreal Clubs of the International League, have been seriously crippled by the desertion of some of their stars to the Federals.

The temperance cause is batting 500 per cent. in the Central Association. Four of the circuit towns are "dry," while the other four are as "damp" as Lake Michigan.

Scout Joe Page of the White Sox has applied for a New England League franchise for St. John, N.B. Page hopes to place a St. John team in the "Little Old" circuit in 1915.

Gerald Hayes, who has umpired in the American Association and International League for several years, will "call 'em as he sees 'em" in the Pacific Coast League this season.

If the promoters of the proposed Illinois State League are successful the new organization will probably take over the circuit of the Illinois-Missouri League.

Just because he named King Edward as among those present at the White Sox-Giants game in London, a Boston scribe was panned by several of his readers. "Heaven knows," writes one, "that it's a lie."

PROTECTION OF THE ANGELS

(Written for the Christian Science Monitor)

The Scriptural records are thronged with that "innumerable company of angels" of which Paul writes. Angels protected and led those who were obedient to God. Angels spoke to Abraham, to Moses and the prohpets, and directed and delivered Jacob. An angel brought to Mary the promise of the Saviour and announced his appearing to the waiting shepherds. Angels ministered to Jesus in the wilderness; delivered Paul from shipwreck and Peter from prison. In the Book of Revelation it is the angels who proclaim the destruction of evil and the dominion of good. All of these Biblical references are illumined by the definition of angels given on page 581 of the Christian Science text-book, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures": "God's thoughts passing to man; spirtual instiututions, pure and perfect; the inspiration of goodness, purity, and immortality, counteracting all evil, sensuality, and mortality."

It is apparent from the study of the Bible in this new light that these thoughts of God, these "spiritual intuitions" appeared to and communed with those who were receptive and who reflected goodness and purity. This is the requirement now as it was of old if men would entertain angels. We love to think of the child Samuel talking with God because of the purity of his thoughts. When the angel appeared to Moses out of the burning bush, it is written that God did not speak to him until he had turned aside—until he manifested receptivity to God's thoughts.

Are we listening for these spiritual inspirations? Do we believe they will come to us? Are we at home when they knock at the door of consciousness? We may entertain angels unawares, or ceasing to entertain them we forget their protection. On the other hand, spiritual intuition may be cultivated and increased by watching and praying expectantly for divine wisdom, guidance, and protection in all our ways, by striving to be awake to the God-sent messages which come to us every hour, and by reserved, spontaneous obedience to them. If we put aside the blinding veils of educated beliefs and human will sufficiently to perceive and follow these spritual guides they will lead us out of darkness and bondage into freedom and light. If we lend ourselves to these heavenly monitors we shall know what to do, and how to do, and when to do, at every point of experience and under every circumstance. They will warn us of danger, protect us from accident and contagion, guard our dwelling places, prevent us from stumbling and control our undertakings great and small. We can never be alone or forsaken with God's thoughts near. The sustaining and protecting presence and power of divine Love is expressed in God's thoughts of man.

We who laugh at the childish superstition that angels exist in the flesh should not blush to believe in them. We ned not, however, invest them with flowing white robes and feathered wings, seeking rather to de-materialize our conceptions and to realize that angels are indeed God's thoughts bearing only the spiritual qualities of purity and love. Child-like faith that God's thought angels are always near, underneath and overhead and all around, is a wonderful protection. Simple confidence that we are free to talk with God through His own thoughts with us is an ever-availing help in time of trouble.

God's thoughts—good thoughts — have the power to counteract evil suggestions, to protect those who think good and those of whom good is thought as well. To know that God's thoughts alone can come to man is to be protected in the measure of the thoroughness of such knowing. Evil beliefs have no other way to get at us than through perverted thought processes. So long as we entertain angels we are sure of being protected from evil, for God's thoughts exclude evil as light does darkness.

It is recorded of the Discoverer and Founder of Christian Science, Mrs. Eddy, that as a child her spiritual receptivity was so marked that like the little Samuel she heard her name called many times, and was told to answer as did Samuel: "Speak, Lord; for thy servant heareth." And after she no longer heard the voice as sound she continue dto listen for and obey the call of God. This led her to discover the way by which mankind may come to know God and so be healed and saved.

What a heavenly privilege to know that as we go forth to each day's experience God's angels go with us and that we may pause a moment before each undertaking and receive the guidance which will enable us to say and do the wisest and best thing in each situation! As we learn to rely more upon their guidance the angels' visits will increase and we shall find ourselves turning spontaneously to them and away from the erroneous influences which have tried to dominate our lives. There is nothing in the testimony of mortal sense from which help and light can come. When however, those who have been pronounced hopelessly sick hear the truth voiced by Christian Science; when to the sinning is spoken the message of practical redemption; when to discord and sorrow and fear the word of peace is declared, then the angels of God have come down to earth with healing in their wings.

After he was trimmed by Billy Murray in San Francisco, Leo Houck lost no time in beating it back to his home in New York.

AN ODE TO GERMS.

Dainty little things,
Ears and eyes and horns and tails,
Claws and fangs and stings.
Microbes in the carpet,
Microbes in the wall,
Microbes in the vestibule,
Microbes in the hall.
Microbes on my money,
Microbes in my hair,
Microbes on my meat and bread,
Microbes everywhere.
Microbes in the butter,
Microbes in the cheese,
Microbes on the knives and forks,
Microbes in the breeze.
Microbes in the kitchen,
Microbes in the bed,
Microbes on the brush and comb,
Microbes in my head,
Microbes in the faucet,
Microbes in the drains,
Microbes in my shoes and boots,
Microbes in my brains.
Friends are little microbes,
Enemies are big.
Life among the microbes is—
Nothing "infra dig."
Fussy little microbes,
Billions at a birth,
Makes our flesh and blood and bones,
Keep us on the earth.

GETTING A START

By NATHANIEL C. FOWLER JR.

(Copyright, 1914, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

A mania for things foreign, including wine, tobacco, clothes, and education, has become somewhat chronic in this country. Thousands of young men and women, including many of superficial ability and self-generated conceit, are labouring under the delusion that America has not educational or artistic facilities sufficient properly to train its inhabitants, and that, if one is to become liberally educated, and properly "cultured," he must go abroad and drink his learning from out a foreign fountain, and breathe knowledge in an away-from-home atmosphere.

I will admit at the outset that this tendency to go abroad is based upon the undeniable fact that many of the foreign universities, and especially the art classes, are of higher order than similar institutions in this country, and I will further admit that an education abroad, combined with one at home, broadens one out and gives him a greater grasp upon situations and conditions that can be obtained in this country, or in any one country, for that matter.

At the same time, this "education abroad" idea has been given a prominence which it does not deserve.

If one proposes to devote himself to the practice of some profession or art, and can afford it, I should most emphatically advise him to obtain all the education he can at home and to supplement it with a year or more in a foreign country; but, if he is of average capacity, he can never grasp, absorb, or use more than is at his disposal at home, and going abroad is a waste of time, energy and money.

Superliberal education is only for those who are far above the average, and who have reason to believe that they can become ultra-expert in the practice of their vocation.

If one would become a linguist, it is obvious that residence abroad is necessary for more than ordinary attainment in this direction; and if one would reach the apex of art, the art study of any one country is insufficient. Then, too, art abroad is of a higher order than art at home.

Hospital experience abroad, combined with training at the higher foreign medical school, in connection with the American medical school, undoubtedly will do much for the physician or surgeon, if he possess more than mediocre ability.

The average man, however, whether he would practice a profession or enter business, can obtain all that he needs, and all that he can use, in the schools and colleges of America, and I should advise him to hesitate long before deciding to consume the time and money necessary for post-education away from his native land.

The American fool who goes abroad returns to America a bigger fool. The education that is injected into him, after he has learned the three R's, is a waste of time and unfits him to realize the necessities of life.

Overeducation for those who are unable to handle it affects the mental health as much as drugging damages the physical body.

It's you, more than the school, that counts.

RHUBARB

A simple means of forcing rhubarb that is specially advantageous after the crops indoors are more or less exhausted is that of raising supplies outdoors by artificial means. This may be done as soon as the worst of the winter is over, and is a practice that should be extremely popular, as anyone with a small amount of trouble may achieve results that are very satisfactory. For successions' crops, outdoor forcing is much to be preferred. The plants should be forced where they are growing, and if a warm border is available, so much the better.

All that need be done in forcing a crop outdoors is to cover the crown of the plants with barrels, tubs, boxes, or any such article which shall have a movable lid. Large barrels should be sawn in two. The top end of the barrel should be knocked out, and made to suit the purpose of a movable lid, this being removed for observation and air-giving, also for obtaining supplies when ready. These utensils should be embedded in stable manure and leaves, this material providing the necessary warmth to excite the crowns into growth. Where leaves and stable litter are mixed in the proportion of about two of the former to one of the latter, a gentle heat may be provided.

A Card of Thanks.

The Mother Superior and the Sisters of St. Vincent's Orphanage wish to express their thanks to the Ladies' Aid Society for their work in connection with the sale of shamrocks, the Children's Aid Society for the loan of collection boxes, and the general public for the liberal offering to the funds of the orphanage.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Mr. Harry Rogers was the guest of his parents over Sunday.

Miss Gertrude Galvin of Lakefield is the guest of relatives in East City.

Mrs. Jas. Northey of Stewart Street, who has been confined to her home owing to an attack of appendicitis is improving.

Mrs. Alex. J. Robertson and Miss Ruth, 310 McDonnel Street, will receive to-morrow, Tuesday, and not again this season.

Mrs. F. S. Schneider, 170 London Street, will not receive on Tuesday afternoon, but will be at home on Wednesday afternoon, March 18th.

Mrs. J. Wilson of 372 George street, has returned from New York, after spending considerable time selecting the latest styles in Spring millinery.

Mrs. J. H. Renwick, 567 Aylmer Street, will be at home to-morrow afternoon, March 17th, from 4 to 6 p.m. Her sister, Miss Klingner of Toronto, will receive with her.

Mr. O. J. Chatworthy and Miss Alverda Brown of Oshawa, Ont., spent the week end visiting their brother-in-law, Mr. W. McMillan, 228 Charlotte Street, returned home this morning.

Inspector Coyle and Trainmaster McMillen, of the Grand Trunk Railway, passed through the City on a special car this morning en route to Lakefield. The train was composed of the official car and an instruction car. The eyesight and hearing of all the men in the employ of the railway is being examined.

Mr. Harry Rogers, son of Mr. R. B. Rogers, who has been on the Canadian Pacific Railway inspection staff for some years, has been promoted to the position of chief inspector of the Esquimault-Nanaimo branch of the C.P.R. Railway, with headquarters at Vancouver and Victoria. Mr. Rogers succeeds Mr. John Rankin, who has been appointed chief of the staff of inspectors on the Quebec bridge. Mr. Rogers left for the west to-day.

the evidence of Detective Newhall, but I think that it does not go far enough.

If this young man had been guilty of the offence, he would have been liable to imprisonment for five years under the section and also liable to be whipped, and if I could have found him guilty, he would not have got off very easily from me.

However, I must go on the evidence that I have before me, and as I do not make the law, I must find him "Not Guilty."

Addressing the prisoner, Judge Huycke said:

Joseph O'Toole, I feel impelled, in accordance with the law, and my duty as a judge, to find you not guilty. Not because I think that you are not guilty. You have my expressions of my opinion, and I don't think that it is necessary for me to repeat them. There is nothing I could say of how much I despise your conduct.

Now, young man, I want to say this to you. If you keep on this way, the time will come when you will not be so fortunate as you are to-day, and if that time comes, you will find yourself in different circumstances indeed. But at the same time, you are guilty of a moral crime. This girl is more sinned against than sinning.

But let this be a warning to you, and to any other young men who may be in the court room, and I see there are some. Go away, and be a good boy, for I think that there is some good in you, and make up your mind to lead a better life after this. You are discharged.

The case of Vincent O'Toole, who was charged with allowing the girl to be upon premises for illegal purposes, was then presented to the Judge. Certain facts were admitted by the defence, as contained in the other evidence.

Mr. J. Wearing for the Crown made a strong appeal for a conviction, and Mr. Gordon for the defence, referred His Honour to a case of the same nature. His Honour stayed his judgement until three o'clock, and at that time he delivered his decision as follows:

I wish to thank Mr. Gordon for his reference. The case referred to is conclusive, and there is no doubt in my mind that it was properly decided. Therefore I have to find this young man "Not guilty." If he had been he would have been liable to 2 years' imprisonment.

Mr. Gordon—I would move for the discharge of the prisoner.

Vincent O'Toole, stand up. How old are you?

O'Toole—Twenty-two years old.

I don't know what to say to you, said His Honour, or whether it is worth my while saying anything. I find you not guilty of the crime against you. There is another offence that you are guilty of, but you are not charged with that now. I want to tell you, as you seem a young man of ability, strength, and vigour, to stop this thing, or if you do not, it will make matters worse. To take advantage of this young girl was very wrong, it was worse than wrong. You were too weak to defend yourself. I do want to say this to you. You are going to land yourself in prison, or somewhere worse, if you don't take a turn about. I venture to express the hope that this will be a lesson to you. I now discharge you, with a very serious, solemn warning.

CAN'T COLLECT DEBT.

TORONTO, March 16.—Because she could not produce the required documentary evidence to support her claim that Mrs. Bernard McAllister, widow of the late Bernard McAllister, railway conductor, of Toronto, deceased on 13th May, had put her name to an assignment on the latter's $2,000 insurance policy in the New York Life, the action of Mrs. Elizabeth Cook of Marmora to recover the alleged $1,000 loan with interest from 1905 was dismissed by Mr. Justice Lennox in the Non-jury Assize Court at the City Hall.

The plaintiff through her solicitor, Mr. Frank Slattery, stated that the assignment with the wife's signature had been lost, but endeavoured to show that the transaction had taken place by exhibiting correspondence from the insurance company.

HAMBURG ROAST.

Make a dressing of stale bread soaked until soft. Then squeeze the water off and season with a little pepper, salt, sage, one egg and a few bits of butter. Stir it into your meat and put into a greased tin, add a little hot water and bake about one and one-half hours. One pound of steak fixed this way is plenty for four.

Awarded The Sum Of $725

Judgment was given at Osgoode Hall, Saturday, awarding John Robertson, of Havelock, $725 damages from the town of Havelock for the loss of his three children, who were killed in a cave-in at the municipal gravel pit last August. The amount of $5,000 that was referred to in Saturday's issue constituted the amount that was asked for in the action.

Robertson vs. Village of Havelock. —D. O'Connell (Peterborough) and D. J. Lynch (Campbellford) for plaintiff. F. D. Kerr and V. J. McElderry (Peterborough) for defendants. Action for $5,000 damages for death of plaintiff's three children, caused by falling sand and earth in a sand pit on defendants' property. Judgment: I am of opinion that the findings of the jury on the evidence submitted to them warrant me in directing judgment to be entered in plaintiff's favour, which I do for the amount assessed with costs. Let judgment be entered for plaintiff for $725 and costs. Apportionment of the amount amongst those on whose behalf the action was brought reserved till counsel speak to the Judge. Thirty days' stay.

OBITUARY

JOHN SEDGWICK.

Minden Echo: Gelert citizens mourn the death of Mr. John Sedgwick, one of the earliest settlers of that neighbourhood, whose demise took place in the early moments of Friday morning, February 27th, 1914, at the age of 68 years, 2 months and 17 days.

Mr. Sedgwick was born in Peterborough County and came to Snowdon township more than half a century ago. He helped his parents make a home on what is now Mr. John J. Sholer's farm, later settling on the farm south of that of his parents, where his comfortable home was a place of hospitality for his many friends.

During his residence in Snowdon he occupied the position of township councillor for ten years in succession, afterwards being elected to the more responsible position of Reeve for a like period.

His wife, whose maiden name was Miss Charlotte Puffer, sister of Mr. G. W. Puffer, late of Minden, predeceased him six years. Three sons and five daughters survive, namely: Washington and J. B., of Gelert, and Ernest, of Clapton, Sask.; Mrs. R. S. McElwain, of Gelert; Mrs. W. Hancock, of Irondale; Mrs. L. L. Malley and Mrs. Frank Malley, of Yellow Grass, Sask., and Miss Pearl at home.

Surviving brothers and sisters of deceased are: James, of Ochre River, Man.; Thomas, of Franklin, Man.; Isaac, of Gelert; Mrs. Elisabeth Dunmelt and Mrs. Alice Jewell, of Peterborough, and Mrs. M. Wilson of Lindsay.

Deceased had been suffering from rheumatism for several years, but contracted a cold last fall and was more or less ill from that time. He was confined to his bed for more than a month and dropsical for the last few weeks.

Stock Markets

A. E. Stratton & Co., Brokers, report the following:

The stock market is marking time. There is a waiting attitude on the part of large interests. It is noted, however, that upon all declines, good buying takes place.

The International and Washington uncertainties, combined with the effect of trade depression, influences an outside element to sell short and these factors operate for the moment to hold in check aggressive, broad bullish operations. There is no haste, but a little stock is taken and put away on all recessions. There is unmistakable evidence of the best quality of absorption of Union Pacific and Reading on reactions.

Great Northern may be said to be strongly bought on recessions.

St. Paul and Southern Pacific and Atch are understood to be taken for inside account during recessions.

SARNIA, Ont., March 17.—Suit for $50,000 damages for alleged breach of agreement was entered yesterday morning for trial at the spring assizes against Archbishop McNeill of Toronto, on behalf of Rev. Father P. J. Gnam of Petrolea.

This action, which was entered against Bishop Fallon last year, was arranged at the time, the brief states, by his grace the archbishop agreeing to assume the costs of the court action to support Father Gnam during the interim and to restore him to his parish, which included Wyoming, Petrolea and Oil Springs.

The plaintiff, who still occupies the rectory at Wyoming, alleges that the agreement has not been kept by the archbishop. He claims that he has not been restored to his parish, as he claims was promised.

The suit will come up for trial at the assizes, which open in Sarnia on March 24.

W. J. KELLY, CANADIAN IN ATLANTA PENITENTIARY

House of Commons Hears Story of Carleton County Farmer Who Was Dragged to a United States Prison

WILL BE TAKEN UP

OTTAWA, March 17.—The House spent the greater part of the day upon F. B. Carvell's motion for the production of papers relating to the case of William J. Kelley, of Carleton County, N.B.

The House followed with great attention and interest Mr. Carvell's story of which appears to have been an unusual case. According to Mr. Carvell, Kelley was illegally arrested by American authorities while on Canadian territory, taken to the United States, tried on charges of smuggling and assault with intent to kill, and was sentenced to fourteen years in prison. Although representations were made time and again to the authorities at Washington no clemency was granted and the man is still in prison.

It appears, according to Mr. Carvell, that the grand jury of Maine, some fifteen years ago, returned a true bill against Kelley for smuggling, but for some reason a warrant for his arrest was never issued. In April, 1903, Kelley, while driving a load of potatoes on the American side, was ordered to halt by a customs official. Upon refusing the officer fired twice, one of the shots taking effect, whereupon Kelley beat him into insensibility and escaped to Canada. The United States endeavored to extradite him, but failed.

From then on Kelley led an exemplary life. In the fall of 1908, however an agent of the U. S. Government who posed as a buyer named Black, called upon Kelley and bought a cow and some farm produce. He asked Kelley to deliver the purchases to him in the United States, but the man, in the presence of witnesses, refused to do so. It was finally agreed that he was to drive with them to the border. Accompanied by Black, he did so. When they were on a road which parallels the border line, they were set upon by American revenue officials. Kelley was arrested and taken to the State of Maine and lodged in jail.

In a sworn affidavit Kelley alleges that he was arrested on Canadian territory and photographs of the ruts made by the wagon are said to bear this statement out. But in spite of the evidence he was found guilty, not only on the old charge of smuggling, but also for the attempted murder of the officer who had shot him in 1903. For those offences he was sentenced to 14 years in the penitentiary.

Mr. Carvell charged that Prime Minister Flemming of New Brunswick had made no effort to have Kelley released, and that upon Mrs. Kelley's death two days before the general elections, he or his party sent a telegram which stated that Kelley had been released, which of course was untrue. The telegram Mr. Carvell characterized as the "most heartless and disgraceful election device" of which he had ever heard.

The Minister of Justice, in reply, stated that the Justice Department had done everything in its power to effect the release of Kelley. Personally he thought the man should be released. Representations had been made to the United States authorities but they refused to act in the matter, claiming that their investigation showed that Kelley had been legally on American territory.

Concluding, he hotly scored Mr. Carvell for attacking Hon. Mr. Flemming when that gentleman was not present to defend himself. He read communications received prior to Mrs. Kelley's death which conclusively proved that Mr. Flemming had interested himself in the case, and had written Ottawa regarding it.

WHEN YOU'RE SICK YOUR WAGES STOP

You know what that means—misery—worry—big bills—debt!

You know you can't afford to get sick. Keeping in good health means food and clothing for you and your family. It is up to you to take care of yourself. It is up to you, whenever you don't feel right, to take something to make you right, to strengthen you, build you up, ward off worse sickness—protect you and your family. That thing we have in Rexall Olive Oil Emulsion. In offering it to you, we protect you against money-risk, by personally promising you that, if it does not restore your health, we will give back your money without word or question. We believe it is the best builder of health, energy and strength you can get. It is helping many of your neighbors. If it don't help you, we will give back your money.

Rexall Olive Oil Emulsion is composed principally of pure Olive Oil and the Hypophosphites. Each has long been endorsed by successful physicians. Here they are for the first time combined. The result is a remarkable nerve, blood and strength-building remedy that is both food and medicine. For all who are nervous, run-down and debilitated—no matter what the cause; for sick people; for convalescents; for puny children, we know of nothing that will give health and strength as quickly as Rexall Olive Oil Emulsion. It is a real builder of good blood, strong muscles, good digestion. Pleasant to take, it contains no alcohol or habit-forming drugs. If you don't feel well, commence both building and strength by beginning today to take Rexall Olive Oil Emulsion. Sold only at the Rexall Stores, and in this town only by us. $1.00.—McDermid & Jury, E. L. Payne. Peterborough, Ont.

MILLIONS STOLEN.

German Shipping Officers Charged With Huge Frauds.

BERLIN, March 17.—One of the most important cases of graft ever unearthed in Germany will shortly engage the attention of the Criminal Court in Hamburg. It concerns allegations of embezzlement from the Hamburg South American Steamship Co. of nearly $2,000,000 and involving more than three hundred employes of the line, mostly captains and other ship officers.

The chief culprits, who have been in jail since September are chief inspectors of the company Sibbers and Stehr, head of the employment bureau. Their peculations, it is alleged, extend over a period of eighteen years.

Sibbers, who has been in the service of the company for a quarter of a century, is an influential official, and owing to the high estimation in which he was held at headquarters the captains and other officers stood in awe of him. They were accustomed, owing to fear of discharge, if they incurred his displeasure, to vouch unhesitatingly for padded pay rolls, which Sibbers, in collusion with Stehr, then proceeded to collect, pocketing for themselves the excess over the actual amount payable and the sums which they made the treasury of the company believe were due. Stehr confessed and Sibbers pleaded ignorance. Both officials have been living luxurious lives in Hamburg and Kiel for years.

RUSHED TO HOSPITAL.

But Woman Patient's Race For Life Was In Vain.

WINDSOR, Ont., March 17.—A 60-mile-an-hour race in a special train from Woodslee to Windsor made by Mrs. Clifford Townsend with a two-mile dash in a motor ambulance to the Hotel Dieu at the end of it, and a wild drive in an automobile through the streets of Detroit by Dr. Ernest K. Cullen, the famous obstetrical surgeon, followed by a trip across the river in a car-ferry Sunday, failed to save the woman's life.

Mrs. Townsend, whose family physician had decided that only an immediate operation could save her life was already under an anaesthetic when Dr. Cullen arrived at the hospital and the operation was performed immediately, but the patient died under the knife.

Martial Law Proclaimed.

NEW WESTMINSTER, B.C., Mar. 17.—Two cougars have been reported wandering aimlessly about the highly civilized municipality of Joint Grey, and a well-known hunter of those parts has departed on their trail with a gun and three dogs which are guaranteed to bring home the bacon, or the cougars, as the case may be.

Reichsrath Needs Closure.

VIENNA, March 17.—The Reichsrath was again prorogued yesterday, the obstruction by the Czechs rendering business impossible. An official communication issued last night hints at the necessity of having recourse to administrative decrees in order to carry on the public business.

Campers Will Be Affected

By Proposed Location of Sewage Disposal Plant—Predict Numerous Actions For Damages

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—I notice that surveyors in the employ of the City are engaged in locating a site for a sewage disposal plant across the river from the Street Railway Wharf. This will, indeed, be sad news to the working classes, who have been in the habit of spending their summer evenings on the river at this point, and who are unable from lack of time and small incomes to go far afield for fresh air. The erection of such a plant in that vicinity will certainly mar the pleasure of thousands of our citizens, to say nothing of adding another unsightly disfigurement to our beautiful water front. Surely the pre-election champions of the interests of the working man in the City Council will rise to the occasion, and see that this injustice is not carried into effect. It may be said by those in favour of the project that the plant will be perfectly sanitary and odourless, and those who have never had to face a whiff of singed smells from the smoke-stack of the Incinerator, for which the same claims are made, will possibly believe the statement, but take it from the writer or anyone who has ever had occasion to visit the vicinity of the small experimental plant in Toronto, the offensive odours are right there unless you have taken the precaution to plug your nostrils with limburger or some other mild disinfectant. One thing is sure, if the City Council persists in erecting the plant at this point, it will have scores of actions for damages to property on its hands. It will certainly spell ruin to a host of small property owners who looked forward on the erection of a bridge, in the near future, to selling their holdings as suburban property.

Yours truly,
Camper.

A WORD OF GRATITUDE

"In justice to humanity I want to tell you that I was a great sufferer from itching piles and have found Dr. Chase's Ointment the best treatment obtainable," writes Mr. Fred Hins, Brodhagen, Ont. "It gives instant relief and I can recommend it to any sufferer from this dreadful disease."

PLANING MILL BURNED.

TORONTO, March 17.—Between nine and eleven o'clock last night the planing mill at the corner of Eastern avenue and St. Lawrence street, owned by the Laidlaw Lumber Co., was destroyed by fire. The loss, including damage done to piled-up lumber by water, will amount to about $50,000. There is insurance in several companies, but neither Robert Laidlaw nor his son Robert, junior, could state last night the exact amount carried on the burned mill.

After the Laidlaw fire was well under control, Chief Thompson learned that a blaze had started in Frankel Bros.' metal and junk yard across the Don. Three wagons and half a dozen men were sent around by the bridge, and the budding fire was soon put out. It is supposed that it had its origin in a spark from the planing mill.

No theory as to the cause of the planing mill fire was advanced last night.

Explorer Met Death.

STOCKHOLM, March 17.—Baron Nordenskjold, son of the famous Arctic explorer who died in 1901, reports that his companion in an expedition in South America, Johnberg, had been killed. The despatch from Baron Nordenskjold came from Belem, Brazil. It gave no details concerning the death of Johnberg.

MONTREAL, March 17—What the Burns' detectives found out at the Montreal City Hall about the same time as they unearthed the graft at Quebec, will be made public between now and election day. Edward Beck, who wrote the sensational graft disclosures for The Montreal Mail, will bring out a weekly paper towards the end of next week, and the first issue is expected to give the details of alleged civic graft. Mr. Beck will not be able to revive The Mirror, as The Herald Telegraph lay claim to this designation. The Herald and Telegraph will add "and Mirror" to its name. Mr. Beck is now in New York in conference with the Burns' detectives. Mr. D. Lorne McGibbon is also there. Mr. Beck's new paper will be called "Beck's Weekly."

Burned By Suffragettes.

LONDON, March 17.—The reign of terror instituted by militant suffragettes following the arrest of Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst recently, was directed toward railways yesterday. The suffragettes swooped down upon the railway yards at King's Norton, near Birmingham and burned six passenger cars standing on a siding. Three others were badly damaged.

Mystery Cleared Up.

NEW WESTMINSTER, B.C., Mar. 17.—The body of Dan McCarkill, well known in this city and up the Fraser river, who disappeared last December, and who was believed to have been drowned in the Fraser, was discovered Sunday close to the second pump station at Matsoui Prairie. The body was found by a half-breed named Felix McKay.

Caught With the Goods.

LONDON, March 17. — A suffragette giving the name of Catherine Wilson was arrested in the lobby of the House of Commons last night. She was dressed in male attire and had a dog whip secreted in her sleeve. It is supposed that she was waiting to attack members of the Government.

"THE MAYOR'S WIFE"

By ANNA KATHARINE GREEN

Mrs. Packard must have had some very timorous guests," I observed. "Or, perhaps, you have had experiences here which have tended to alarm you. The house is so large and imposing for the quarter it is in I can readily imagine it to attract burglars."

"Burglars! It would be a brave burglar who would try to get in here. I guess you never heard about this house.'

"No," I admitted, unpleasantly divided between a wish to draw her out and the fear of betraying Mayor Packard's trust in me by showing the extent of my interest.

"Well, it's only gossip," she laughingly assured me. "You needn't think of it, Miss. I'm sure you'll be all right. We girls have been, so far, and Mrs. Packard,—"

Here she, doubtless heard a voice outside or some summons from below, for she made a quick start toward the door, remarking in a different and very pleasant tone of voice:

"Dinner at seven, Miss. There'll be no extra company to-night. I'm coming." This to some one in the hall as she hastily passed through the door.

Dropping the bag I had lifted to unpack, I stared at the door which had softly closed under her hand, then, with an odd impulse, turned to look at my own face in the glass before which I had chanced to be standing. Did I expect to find there some evidence of the excitement which this strange conversation might naturally produce in one already keyed up to an expectation of the mysterious and unusual? If so, I was not disappointed. My features certainly betrayed the effect of this unexpected attack upon my professional equanimity. What did the girl mean? What was she hinting at? What underlay—what could underlie her surprising remark. "I guess you never heard about this house." Something worth my knowing; something which might explain Mayor Packard's fears and Mrs. Packard's—

There I stopped. It was where the girl had stopped. She and not I must round out this uncompleted sentence.

Meanwhile I occupied myself in unpacking my two bags and making acquaintance with the room which, I felt, was destined to be the scene of many anxious thoughts. Its first effect had been a cheerful one, owing to its two large windows, one looking out on a stretch of clear sky above a mass of low, huddled buildings, and the other on the wall of the adjacent house which, though near enough to obstruct the view, was not near enough to exclude all light. Another and closer scrutiny of the room did not alter the first impression. To the advantages of light were added those of dainty furnishing and an exceptionally pleasing color scheme. There was no richness anywhere, but an attractive harmony which gave one an instantaneous feeling of home. From the little brass bedstead curtained with cretonne, to the tiny desk filled with everything needful for immediate use, I saw evidences of the most careful housekeeping, and was vainly asking myself what could have come into Mrs. Packard's life to disturb so wholesome a nature, when my attention was arrested by a picture hanging at the right of the window overlooking the next house.

It gave promise of being a most interesting sketch, and I crossed over to examine it; but instead of doing so, found my eyes drawn toward something more vital than any picture and twice as enhancing.

It was the face, the face of an old woman staring down at me from a semicircular opening in the gable of the adjoining house. An ordinary circumstance in itself, but made extraordinary by the fixity of her gaze, which was levelled straight on mine, and the uncommon expression of breathless eagerness which gave force to her otherwise commonplace features. So remarkable was this expression and so apparently was it directed against myself, that I felt like throwing up my window and asking the poor old creature what I could do for her. But her extreme immobility deterred me. For all the intentness of her look there was no invitation in it warranting such an advance on my part. She simply stared down at me in unbroken anxiety, nor, though I watched her for some minutes with an intensity equal to her own, did I detect any change either in her attitude or expression.

The demonstration failed to produce the least impression.

"A most uncanny neighbor," was my mental comment on finally turning away. Truly I was surrounded by mysteries, but fortunately this was one with which I had no immediate concern.

It did not take me long to put away my few belongings and prepare for dinner. When quite ready, I sat down ao write a letter. This completed, I turned to go down-stairs. But before leaving the room I cast another look up at my neighbor's attic window. The old woman was still there. As our glances met I experienced a thrill which was hardly one of sympathy, yet was not exactly one of fear. My impulse was to pull down the shade between us, but I had not the heart. She was so old, so feeble and so evidently the prey of some strange and fixed idea. What idea? It was not for me to say, but I found it impossible to make any move which would seem to shut her out; so I left the shade up, but her image followed me and I forgot it only when confronted once again with Mrs. Packard.

That lady was awaiting me at the dining-room door. She had succeeded in throwing off her secret depression and smiled quite naturally as I approached. Her easy, courteous manners became her wonderfully. I immediately recognised how much there was to admire in our mayor's wife, and quite understood his relief when, a few minutes later, we sat at table and conversation began. Mrs. Packard, when free and light-hearted, was a delightful companion, and the meal passed off cheerily. When we arose and the mayor left us for some necessary business it was with a look of satisfaction in my direction which was the best possible preparation for my approaching tete-a-tete with his moody and incomprehensible wife.

But I was not destined to undergo the contemplated ordeal this evening. Guests were announced whom Mrs. Packard kindly invited me to meet, but I begged to be allowed to enjoy the library. I had too much to consider just now, to find any pleasure in society. Three questions filled my mind.

What was Mrs. Packard's secret trouble?

Why were people afraid to remain in this house

Why did the old woman next door show such interest in the new member of her neighbour's household?

Would a single answer cover all? Was there but one cause for each and every one of these peculiarities?

Probably, and it was my duty to ferret out this cause. But how should I begin? I remembered what I had read about detectives and their methods, but the help I thus received was small. Subtler methods were demanded here and subtler methods I must find. Meantime, I would hope for another talk with Mayor Packard. He might clear up some of this fog. At least, I should like to give him the opportunity. But I saw no way of reaching him at present. Even Mrs. Packard did not feel at liberty to disturb him in his study. I must wait for his reappearance, and in the meantime divert myself as best I could. I caught up a magazine, but speedily dropped it to cast a quick glance aroud the room. Had I heard anything? No. The house was perfectly still, save for the sound of conversation in the drawing-room. Yet I found it hard to keep my eyes upon the page. Quite without my volition they flew, first to one corner, then to another. The room was light, there were no shadowy nooks in it, yet I felt an irresistible desire to peer into every place not directly under my eye. I knew it to be folly, and, after succumbing to the temptation of taking a sly look behind a certain tall screen, I resolutely set myself to curb my restlessness and to peruse in good earnest the article I had begun. To make sure of myself, I articulated each word aloud, and to my exceeding satisfaction had reached the second column when I found my voice trailing off into silence, and every sense alarmingly alert. Yet there was nothing in this well-lighted, cosy family room to awaken fear. I was sure of this the next minute, and felt correspondingly irritated with myself and deeply humiliated. That my nerves should play me such a trick at the very outset of my business in this house! That I could not be left alone, with life in every part of the house, and the sound of the piano and cheerful talking just across the hall, without the sense of the morbid and unearthly entering my matter-of-fact brain!

Uttering an ejaculation of contempt, I reseated myself. The impulse came again to look behind me, but I mastered it this time without too great an effort. I already knew every feature of the room: its old-fashioned mantle, large round centre-table, its couches and chairs, and why should I waste my attention again upon them?

"Is there anything you wish, Miss?" asked a voice directly over my shoulder.

I wheeled about with a start. I had heard no one approach; it was not sound which had disturbed me.

"The library bell rang," continued the voice. "Is it ice water you want?"

Then I saw that it was Nixon, the butler, and shook my head in mingled anger and perplexity; for not only had he advanced quite noiselessly, but he was looking at me with that curiously concentrated gaze which I had met twice before since coming into this house.

"I need nothing," said I, with all the mildness I could summon into my voice; and did not know whether to like or not to like the quiet manner in which he sidled out of the room.

"Why do they all look at me so closely?" I queried, in genuine confusion. "The man had no business here. I did not ring, and I don't believe he thought I did. He merely wanted to see what I was doing and whether I was enjoying myself. Why this curiosity? I have never roused it anywhere else. It is not myself they are interested in, but the cause and purpose of my presence under this roof." I paused to wonder over the fact that the one member of the family who might be supposed to resent my intrusion most was the one who took it most kindly and with least token of surprise—Mrs. Packard.

"She accepts me easily enough," thought I. "To her I am a welcome companion. What am I to these?"

The answer, or rather a possible answer, came speedily. At nine o'clock Mayor Packard entered the room from his study across the hall, and, seeing me alone, came forward briskly.

"Mrs. Packard has company and I am on my way to the drawing-room, but I am happy to have the oportunity of assuring you that already she looks better, and that I begin to hope that your encouraging presence may stimulate her to throw aside her gloom and needless apprehensions. I shall be eternally grateful to you if you will. It is the first time in a week that she has consented to receive visitors."

I failed to feel the same elation over this possible temporary improvement in his wife's condition, but I carefully refrained from betraying my doubts. On the contrary, I took advantage of the moment to clear my mind of one of the many perplexities disturbing it.

"And I am glad of this opportunity to ask you what may seem a foolish, if not impertinent question. The maid, Ellen, in showing me my room, was very careful to assure me that she slept near me and would let me into her room in case I experienced any alarm in the night; and when I showed surprise at her expecting me to feel alarm of any kind in a house full of people, made the remark, 'I guess you do not know about this house.' Will you pardon me if I ask if there is anything I don't know, and should know, about the home youd suffering wife inhabits? A problem such as you have given me to solve demands a thorough understanding of every cause capable of creating a disturbance in a sensitive mind."

"You will find nothing in this direction," said he "to account for the condition I have mentioned to you. Mrs. Packard is utterly devoid of superstition. That I made sure of before signing the lease of this old house. But I forgot; you are doubtless ignorant of its reputation. It has, or rather has had, the name of being haunted. Ridiculous, of course, but a fact with which Mrs. Packard has had to contend in"—he gave me a quick glance—"in hiring servants."

It was now my turn to smile, but somehow I did not. A vision had risen in my mind of that blank and staring face in the attic window next door, and I felt—well, I don't know how I felt, but I did not smile.

Another short laugh escaped him.

"We have not been favoured by any manifestations from the spiritual world. This has proved a matter-of-fact sort of home for us. I had almost forgotten that it was burdened with such an uncanny reputation, and I' sure that Mrs Packard would have shared my indicerence if it had not been for the domestic difficulty I have mentioned. It took us two weeks to secure help of any kind."

"Indeed! and how long have you been in the house? I judge that you rent it?"

"Yes, we rent it and we have been here two months. It was the only house I could get in a locality convenient for me; besides, the old place suits me. It would take more than an obsolete ghost or so to scare me away from what I like."

The Best Cough Syrup is Easily Made at Home

This recipe makes 16 ounces of cough syrup, and saves you about $2.00 as compared with ordinary cough remedies. It stops obstinate coughs—even whooping cough—in a hurry, and is splendid for sore lungs, asthma, croup, hoarseness and other throat troubles.

Mix two cups of granulated sugar with one cup of warm water, and stir for two minutes. Put 2½ ounces of Pinex (fifty cents' worth) in a 16-ounce bottle, and add the Sugar Syrup. Take a teaspoonful every one, two or three hours. Tastes good.

This takes right hold of a cough and gives almost instant relief. It stimulates the appetite, and is slightly laxative—both excellent features.

Pinex, as perhaps you know, is the most valuable concentrated compound of Norway white pine extract, rich in guaiacol and the other natural healing pine elements.

No other preparation will do the work of Pinex in this recipe, although strained honey can be used instead of the sugar syrup, if desired.

Thousands of housewives in the United States and Canada now use this Pinex and Sugar Syrup recipe. This plan has often been imitated, but the old successful formula has never been equaled. Its low cost and quick results have made it immensely popular.

A guaranty of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this recipe. Your druggist has Pinex, or will get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

MEAT INJURIOUS TO THE KIDNEYS

Take a tablespoonful of Salts if Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers

We are a nation of meat eaters and our blood is filled with uric acid, says a well-known authority, who warns us to be constantly on guard against kidney trouble.

The kidneys do their utmost to free the blood of this irritating acid, but become weak from the overwork; they get sluggish; the eliminative tissues clog and thus the waste is retained in the blood to poison the entire system.

When your kidneys ache and feel like lumps of lead, and you have stinging pains in the back or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment, or the bladder is irritable, obliging you to seek relief during the night; when you have severe headaches, nervous and dizzy spells, sleeplessness, acid stomach or rheumatism in bad weather, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning and in a few days your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys, to neutralize the acids in urine so it is no longer a source of irritation, thus ending urinary and bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, and nobody can make a mistake by taking a little occasionally to keep the kidneys clean and active.

●The finest "first aid" is Zam-Buk for many reasons. It is antiseptic—kills the poison in any wound, or skin injury, or disease against poison-germs in the air which are always ready to enter a sore place and set up poisoning and putrefactive change. Immediately they enter Zam-Buk they are instantly killed.

While certain ingredients in Zam-Buk are thus protecting you against external dangers, the rich healing herbal essences in the balm penetrate the tissue, stimulate the cells, and bring about perfect healing. Nothing like it! Watch it work! ●

PROOF FROM THE HOMES.

Mrs. Halliday, of Wrentor, Ont., says:—"I have found Zam-Buk a most reliable household remedy. I have used it for cuts, sores, and various skin diseases, and have found it an effective cure in every case. I would not be without a box of Zam-Buk in the house in cases of emergency, and I recommend all mothers to keep a box handy."

Mrs. R. B. Levy, of Hazlett's Cove, N.S., says:—"Eczema broke out very badly behind my baby's ears, and, despite treatment, got worse and worse. I was advised to try Zam-Buk. It proved effective from the first, and in a very short time it cured the eczema completely."

Equally good for all skin injuries and diseases, piles, etc., 50c. druggists and stores everywhere or Zam-Buk Co., Toronto.

Holding Thumbs For Nilsson.

My professional vocation has brought me up against almost every conceivable superstition, from Brignoli's stuffed deer's head to the more commonplace fetish against thirteen as a number. But I never saw any one more obsessed by an idea of this sort than Christine Nilsson. She actually would not sing unless some one "held her thumbs" first. "Holding thumbs" is quite an ancient way of inciting good luck. One promises to "hold one's thumbs" for a friend who is going through some ordeal, like a first night or an operation for appendicitis or a wedding or anything else desperate. Nilsson was the first person I ever knew who practiced the charm the other way about. Before she would grace on the stage somebody, if only the stage carpenter, had to take hold of her two thumbs and press them. She was convinced that the mystic rite brought her good fortune.—"Memoirs of an American Prima Donna," by Clara Louise Kellogg.

Illumination by Phosphorus.

Phosphorus is sometimes used for illuminating purposes, but the light is rather dim. The method is as follows, and it is serviceable when means of striking a light are not at hand: Take a long and narrow vial of the whitest and clearest glass, put in a piece of phosphorus about the size of a pea, upon which pour some olive oil heated to the boiling point; fill the vial about one-third full and then seal the vial hermetically. To use it remove the cork and allow the air to enter the vial, and then recork it. The empty space in the bottle will then become luminous, and the light obtained will be equal to that of a dull lamp. As soon as the light becomes weak its power can be increased by opening the vial and allowing a fresh supply of air to enter. In winter it is sometimes necessary to heat the vial between the hands to increase the fluidity of the oil. Thus prepared the vial may be used for six months.

In Scotland there is a cow with a wooden leg. We believe it. We've had a steak off many a one like that.

Philadelphia is a live town, nevertheless. The mint coined $2,000,000 more money last year than in the year before.

If that automatic restaurant really eliminates the waiter with the unmanicured nails it has accomplished no small feat.

WEAKNESS AND PALPITATION OF THE HEART.

When the heart begins to beat irregularly, palpitates and throbs, skips beats, and sometimes seems to almost stop, it causes great anxiety and alarm.

Many people become weak, worn and miserable, and are unable to attend to either social, business or household duties.

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are a specific for all weakness and heart disorders, and are recommended by us with the greatest of confidence that they will do what we claim for them.

Mrs. George Burridge, Coboconk, Ont., writes:—"Just a few lines to let you know what Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills have done for me. I have been troubled with weakness and palpitation of the heart. I tried many remedies but got none to answer my case like your pills did. I can recommend them highly to all with heart or nerve trouble."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50 cents per box, or 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited Toronto, Ont.

ANIMAL FIRE-BUGS.

Conflagrations Which Have Been Caused by Cats, Et Al.

Animal incendiarism plays a far larger part than most persons would believe in the ravages of the fire fiend. Only the other day a serious fire was caused at Dover, Eng., by a cat knocking over an oil lamp, and a still more remarkable case was reported of a fire which broke out in a village in Cumberland. There was a nest of sparrows in a roof, and it is supposed that the birds used some matches in their nesting material which, becoming accidentally ignited, set fire to the roof.

The midnight rambles of a cat plunged a city in darkness and incidentally caused a small though quickly-subdued fire. The manager of the works of the Cardiff Electric Light Co. said that the cat, which lived upon the premises yielded to temptation and strayed from his usual haunts. Either there was no mouse to hunt and he became tired of inaction, or he was suddenly seized with an insatiable desire for exploration. Anyhow, he climbed on to the switchboard and strolled among the cables one of which was fused and caused a local conflagration. The cat was killed, and the lights went out in sympathy.

On another occasion, and in another place, not a cat but a mouse did the very same trick. It ran among the gear and caused fusing, a fire, and darkness throughout a large section of the town.

But one of the most remarkable cases of animal incendiarism occurred in one of the manufacturing towns in the north of England. The oil-man was going his rounds when, from some unknown cause, the horse which he had left standing, suddenly took fright and bolted down the street. As bad luck would have it both horse and cart came to grief when the animal bolted into the boiler-house of a neighboring cotton mill. The oil poured out of the vehicle in such quantities that the boiler fires set it alight and a serious conflagration was caused.

A story which reminds one of Samson's exploit of sending his firebrand foxes into the standing corn of the Philistines occurred last autumn in the Midlands. A local gentleman who lived alone in the country, was in the habit of taking a lamp to light him along the dark lanes when he went abroad at night. He was almost invariably attended by a dog, which he had taught to carry his lantern. But disaster put an end to this pleasant plan.

Whatever it was the dog spotted, whether a stoat or a hare, his master never knew, but he set off in mad pursuit with the lantern still in his jaws. Had he dropped it in the lane all would have been well. But he didn't. He dropped it near a haystack, and before his master could reach the spot the stack was in such a blaze that nothing could stop it until it was reduced to ashes.

From Battlefield to Altar.

A romantic wedding took place in London recently when Lieut. Sophocelis Pantgos Pancheff, of the Bulgarian army, was married to Miss Elliot Ramsbotham, daughter of the late Dr. Samuel Ramsbotham, of Leeds. The happy couple met during the Balkan war, where the bride was a member of that devoted body of English women who went out to succour and nurse the sick and wounded, and Lieut. Pancheff, who was seriously wounded on the field, was one of her patients. A strong friendship sprang up between patient and nurse, which quickly ripened into love, and at the conclusion of the war Lieut. Pancheff followed his sweetheart to London and the courtship commenced in a field hospital has terminated happily at the altar. Lieut. Pancheff, who is of Greek birth, holds a commission in the Bulgarian army, and served with distinction through the greater part of the Balkan war.

A Story from Real Life

A SLAVE TO COCAINE WRITES HIS CONFESSION

Cured of the Use of Morphine, Scion of Wealth and Affluence, Takes Up the More Pernicious Practice of "Sniffing" Cocaine. Horrors of the Deadly Drug Described by a Victim, a Former Philadelphia Lawyer; Tells How He Became Addicted to Habit.

ONCE a confirmed morphine fiend, cured of that habit only to fall a victim to the even more dreaded practice of "sniffing" cocaine, and to-day a veritable slave to that most insinuating of all drugs, a man now calling himself Franklin D. Andrews gives here what he characterizes as the "confession of a flake fiend." "Flake" in the vernacular of those slaves of the drug is short for cocaine, and when the word slave is used it is done advisedly, for no more pitiable object could be pictured in mind ever so fertile than this once brilliant man as he is to-day.

Andrews was known to the writer many years ago when he occupied an exalted place at the Philadelphia Bar. Andrews, as might be supposed, was not his name then. He moved in the very best circles of Philadelphia society and reckoned his friends among men and women whose names figured prominently in the leading social events of the day. His income was large, for he had a big and lucrative practice, and his reputation as a pleader before the Bar was such as to always insure a big and rapt audience whenever it was known that he was to sum up in some one of the many important cases that came to him. Morphine was his undoing, and after giving himself up completely to its influence he abandoned his practice and dropped out of sight of his friends and clients to take up his residence in Philadelphia's Chinatown, where, with his dog—the only connecting link between his past and present—he eked out a horrible existence, living practically the life of a recluse.

But in a seemingly lucid interval, and aided by a missionary who worked ceaselessly in Chinatown, he threw off the shackles that bound him and, after enduring a struggle with conscience and will which he to-day declares was fraught with all the torments of hell, he emerged from his hiding place and went to New York determined to make a fresh start and see if he could not in a measure rehabilitate himself in the affections of an aged mother and the two sisters he had deserted. But once more he fell a victim to the soothing qualities of a drug deadlier by far than morphine, and within six months all good resolves had been thrown to the winds and he was quite as confirmed a slave as one could find in the fastnesses of Peru, where the drug and its use originated.

Seated in the back room of a saloon far over on the west side and near the San Juan Hill district, in New York, made famous by the many lawless negroes living there, the writer found Andrews. Tall, gaunt and haggard, a week growth of stubble on his sunken face, his clothing worn and tattered, linen frayed and soiled, he was one of those pitiable objects none could look upon without a wave of repugnance and horror sweeping over him. Not a trace of the once splendid looking and well groomed lawyer remained. Instead there sat a staring, unkempt, filthy human derelict who apparently was lost to all sense of shame and at all times, when under the influence of the drug, obsessed by hallucinations which took many fantastic and far reaching shapes and phases.

"Now please refrain from making any comment on my personal appearance," said Andrews after the first greetings had been exchanged. "I know as well as you do just how I look, how low I have sunk and just what is ahead of me. Thank God there is money enough left to supply my limited wants for the rest of my days. When that is gone I shall go to the Great Beyond, and there will be none to mourn me. You ask me to tell you my life story. Perhaps a recital of my experiences may tend to warn some poor unfortunate devil who can escape from the thraldom of drugs before the fetters are so strongly riveted that he is past redemption. I could have done this myself two years ago, but it's too late now, and I have just enough money left to keep up my supply of 'flakes,' and that's all I care about."

As he talked Andrews drew from his pocket a little silver receptacle of rare workmanship. It was an old fashioned snuff box, such as one to-day finds occupying a prominent place in a cabinet where rare bits of bric-a-brac and curios and antiques are zealously guarded and proudly displayed. From this he pinched a small quantity of a pure white powder which he sprinkled on the backs of two fingers, held tightly together, that he extended. Raising his fingers to his nose he took a quick, deep draught and the powder had disappeared. At the outset he had "sniffed his flake," or "coke," and the effect was instantaneous. Instead of the previously dead, lustreless eyes the writer gazed into orbs that flashed intelligence and fairly danced as they seemingly took in at a swift glance all that transpired about him. The old listless manner had disappeared, and Andrews sitting erect and talking in a rapid and highly excited manner, said he would tell his story.

"My name is not Andrews and you well know," he began. "My real name I once was intensely proud of, but it has been buried with the life I left behind me in Philadelphia. Once I thought I would resurrect the name, the reputation I shattered and all that, but it's too late now, for the 'coke' has me. My mother passed me on the street not so long ago. So close was I to her that I could have touched her, but she looked me calmly in the eye and then averted hers. She knew me, no doubt of that, and after all I can't blame her, for I am not the natty looking chap she once was so proud to call son. I am an outcast now, but there is one solace left me, and that I embrace to the full.

"How did I become addicted to the drug habit? Why, just as thousands of others did and just as millions of others will be unless physicians refrain from administering them in cases where it is not absolutely essential. I had been working very hard, had a number of important cases to conduct and was trying to do three men's work. I was burning the candle at both ends and my nerves were a jangle. Insomnia developed, and when I did not drop into a deep slumber of exhaustion I lay with staring eyes, imagining I was the victim of every ill that could beset man and in consequence in a highly wrought state. The physician I called in unhesitatingly produced his hypodermic syringe and in a twinkling morphine was injected in my arm. That was my first experience with the poppy, and in four years from that day I was quartered in Chinatown. My faithful bull terrier stuck by me and shared my humble quarters. He was my sole companion, and upon him when in my right senses I showered my affections.

"I noticed shortly after going to Chinatown that my sleep and the beautiful dreams I dreamed were often interrupted by poor old Jock, my dog, so I decided to so arrange matters that Jock should sleep while I did. The needle and its contents were applied to Jock, and it was not long before he was just as dependent upon the drug as I was. He died a horrible death, poor chap, for when summer came along and under the influence of a too strong injection he ran wild through Chinatown until stopped by a police revolver bullet. The newspapers said he had hydrophobia, and the policeman who shot him was lauded as a hero. But I knew differently, and I alone was responsible.

"I won't dwell on the mire that beset me the last year of my stay in Philadelphia. Suffice it to say that a friend, who had one purpose in life is to reclaim such weaklings as I, who drift into Chinatown, took me in tow, and at tremendous personal cost and sacrifice he brought me to my senses and made it possible for me to gradually decrease my doses of hourly injections of morphine, until I found I could lessen the treatment, and so on, down the scale, until I discovered that I really could exist without it.

Andrews had been talking rapidly. His voice pitched higher, and with gestures vehement he arose from his chair and strode about the room with springy, active steps. Had he been addressing a court he could not have better chosen his words, his eloquence often becoming so forensic that his interviewer momentarily expected that a request from those in charge would result in his ejection to the street. Again the old fashioned snuff box was drawn from the tattered pocket, and again a pinch of the dead white powder found its way into the nostrils of its slave.

"I fled from Philadelphia, coming here, hoping and fully determined to start anew," Andrews continued, as he became a little more composed. "An old friend, a lawyer, had volunteered to extend a helping hand. In order to try myself out, I used to go to his office, take refuge in his private law library and pore over its authorities and briefs I found there. The days were all right, but when night came I found I was overwhelmed by my loneliness, and then, too, it seemed that when the city's lights burned brightest and I saw the thousands of well dressed men and women hurrying hither and thither, all pleasure bent, my entire past would arise to jeer and taunt me. It was a constant, never ceasing nightmare, and I found there was just one man in this great, big, restless city who, apparently, enjoyed having me drop in to his drug store and sit there and talk to him in his leisure moments.

"This man was the first I ever saw use cocaine. I noticed from the first that he frequently inhaled a white powder through his nostrils, and my curiosity, piqued from the first, finally got the better of me and I asked what it was he used so frequently.

"He told me it was a mild stimulant, quantities much the same as quinine, and that by using it sparingly he found it stimulated his intellect, quieted his nerves, and when he retired at night he took sleep as tranquilly as an infant. Here was I torn and wracked by ten thousand devils, lashed by a conscience that was raw and sore, and thoroughly alive to the terrifying battle I must fight should I hope to rehabilitate myself, and sleep denied me! The weary and lonely hours I spent in dragging my tortured body through the street were as nothing when compared to those I must spend alone in my room, vainly courting sleep.

"You can readily understand what an easy matter it was for me to accept my friend the druggist's invitation to 'try a pinch of his coke.' Many of his customers were addicted to the habit and purchased their powder from him. In fact, he did a thriving business in this line, and apparently took no undue pains to conceal it. You know the rest. I am a 'coke fiend' to-day of the most pronounced type, and, whereas in my heart I curse that druggist, as my first tempter, yet I wouldn't break with him for the world, for I get my flakes from him."

It was evident that the effect of the drug was wearing off. Andrews was fast lapsing into that lethargic state in which I found him. The drift of his observations showed that his flagging spirits were at low ebb and that he was fast approaching the slough of despond. It was in this mood that I preferred him, for I felt confident he would be less apt to romance and deal more freely with facts—conditions as they really were.

"You lost out in Philadelphia," I said, "through morphine, and then freed yourself of the habit. Now it is cocaine. Now that you have tried each which do you prefer?"

"Cocaine, to be sure," was the unhesitating reply. "Morphine may invigorate for a time, then it palls and a terrible nightmare follows. Cocaine stimulates, quickens the brain, fires the body, fires the blood until one feels is coursing through his veins like that of a race horse as she faces the barrier. When sleep is desired it can be courted, and then come dreams that are as beautiful and inspiring as Faust's!

"Ah! that little powder those little crystals, are dearer to me than life. For they alone make it endurable."

Then, opening the snuff box he held in his hand, he took another "sniff" and settled back in his chair ready and eager to resume his narrative.

"Once a lawyer always a lawyer," Andrews continued. "No man who ever succeeded at the Bar ever forgets the thrills born of victory. He knows when he has handled a case well, and he knows when, with certain defeat staring him in the face he, by an adroit presentation of the flimsy evidence at hand, or by a trick of oratory, or a parry or a thrust, so sways his jury that he gets the verdict he so earnestly strove for, that he not only has done something worth while, but that another laurel has been added to the wreath he is fashioning by his own efforts for himself.

"Well, now, I'll tell you what cocaine can do for me. I can dream just the dreams I want to dream! I can conjure up any vision I crave to behold! I can lay rapt and entranced by myriads of melodic strains—melodies that bounded me in the old days when music was a passion with me. I can picture myself in the saddle astride an unbeaten hunter, plunging at break neck speed over turf or fallow, flying over post and rail, stone wall or hedge, lifting my mount with the dexterity of an Archer, finally rounding into the stretch and leading my field by a safe margin as the thundering hoofs of the vanquished pursue me, while I dash under the wire the winner, amid the deafening roars and cheers of the multitude as they hail me the greatest jockey of them all."

During his recital Andrews sat astride his chair, giving a splendid but pantomimic exhibition of his cross-country prowess which prompted the question:—

Rather sheepishly he replied:—

"You may recall that once I maintained a good stable of hunters and, further, that I was a corking good cross-country rider."

All of which was true, for he did ride and he rode well. Many cups were won by his horses in the races for gentlemen riders, and he invariably piloted his own hunters.

"Are your hallucinations confined to court rooms and race tracks?" I asked.

"Don't call them hallucinations," he said. "Dreams is a pleasanter and more fitting word. When I partake of my sleeping potion, and this is generally a much more liberal quantity than I take during the day, I can stretch out on my bed and concentrate my thoughts for a moment or two on any subject I elect. Then comes that delicious drowsiness slowly creeping over me. I sink into blissful unconsciousness and the dream I courted arises before me.

"Before being admitted to the Bar I studied medicine. In fact, my preparation for this profession was far more extensive and careful than for the law. I took a post graduate course—one of the big universities of Germany and looked forward eagerly to a surgical career, but an accident at a very important clinic spoilt surgery for me. I saw one of the most eminent surgeons I knew make a faulty incision which cost the patient her life. My nerve forsook me and, leaving the amphitheatre, I resolved then and there to seek a new profession, and I did.

"Frequently, however, the old love of surgery returns to me and I dream that I am performing some delicate and dangerous operation. I see it all as vividly as it used to be. The immaculately clad surgeons, interns and nurses cluster about me as I stand with lancet or knife poised while I demonstrate the nature of the operation to the hundreds of intent and eager students rising tier upon tier before me. The more delicate and rare the operation the more cherished is the dream. I rarely make a slip in such cases as these—the operation invariably is successful and I am always awakened by the hearty congratulations of brother surgeons, who, awe struck by my skill, stand by, and the vociferous applause of the students who so eagerly followed every phase of the operation.

"Now perhaps you can understand what these little crystals mean to me. Here I sit before you, shabby and unclean. I know all this, but somehow I, like many another 'flake' partaker, abhor water. We prefer to go with faces and hands soiled, and when it comes to tidying up our wardrobes, why, that would mean a cash outlay which would be sufficient to purchase a supply of 'flakes' that would last me several months. That would be a wonderful waste. And now that I have been telling you about my dreams I am going to my room and enjoy one to the full. I am tired and I am drowsy. I know the symptoms, you see."

"What is the dream to be this time?" I asked.

"Haven't decided yet," he said. "Perhaps it will be of the old days—the days when you knew me and I really amounted to something, never suspecting then that I would see the day when I would have to request you to lend me a dollar, since I find myself temporarily out of funds."

He got it. And as he slouched out of the saloon it was apparent that another and more copious "sniff" would be necessary to bring the sleep he so ardently wooed, for his gait was as halting and jerky as though he was in the last stages of St. Vitus' dance.

Andrews is but one of the thousands of cocaine fiends who haunt the dives of the big cities. A habit that was imported to the North by the negroes of the South, among whom it has been prevalent for years, it has grown until it is to-day regarded as one of the gravest perils that confront society. The rapidity of its devotees is second only to their viciousness.

A walk through the various prisons will reveal scores upon scores of slaves of this type, and should by any chance their supply be cut short they would stop at nothing under 10 procure a fresh one.

"I Sink Into Blissful Unconsciousness and the Dream I Courted Arises Before Me."

The Redskins' Skillful Interpretation of Modern Music

"CANTE MASICA! Cante masica!" ("My heart is sad! My heart is sad"). Thus piped the Indian brave beneath the shadow of the forest until he drew his maiden forth from her tepee to gladden it. The rude wooden flute upon which he played was practically the only instrument he possessed, as was the melody the only tune of his that has been set upon paper. Few people have understood just how naturally musical the Indian is. It is a trait that has not been featured on the pages of the novelists and historians, who have presented principally only his bloodthirsty or warlike attributes.

One generation of the Indian trained in modern music has shown that he has only to be taught how to express himself to give remarkable evidence of his latent and naturally musical character.

James Holy Eagle, a typical Sioux warrior from South Dakota, is a fair example of the extraordinary musical ability of the race. Just a year ago the wooden flute was his sole instrument—the melody "Cante Masica" the gamut of his harmonic achievement. To-day Holy Eagle plays the solo cornet part of the most difficult compositions with consummate skill and ease.

But, with a wisdom that might be emulated in the education of their young white brethren, the redskins are taught whatever form of music in which it seems they may excel, not primarily to earn a livelihood but in order that it may soften their character and afford them an accomplishment that will enable them to enter certain classes of society which might otherwise remain closed to them. As a result of this idea and its application, says Bandmaster Claude Maxwell Stauffer, of the Carlisle Indian School, there are scattered throughout the country many scores of bands in which are playing young Indians who have gained equal social recognition thereby. "Here lies a splendid social uplift idea for the masses of the supposedly more cultured and civilized white race:—Could little slum dwellers, if thoroughly versed in music in the settlement houses and other uplift agencies around or among them develop into strong-arm men and thugs?" The Indian school authorities, Superintendent M. Friedman and Bandmaster Stauffer, believe that the number would be reduced, and insist that musical training has a tremendously softening effect upon their own charges.

The personnel of the Carlisle Indian Band changes each year. There are seldom half of the same men together in two succeeding years, and yet it is enabled to attain proficiency equalling that of many of the leading bands of the country and render with superb finish practically any of the more difficult instrumental scores. Music, however, with the Indians, whatever their degree of talent, is merely a side issue while at Carlisle. The bandsmen go to school half a day and work half a day. Their musical instructions, whether individual or in the aggregate, as in the band, is gained in their own time, or play period. The young Indians are now beginning to gain individual fame in the musical world. Many of them are winning scholarships in some of the leading musical colleges of the country, as, for instance, Sylvester Long, a young Creek, who gained a full free scholarship in the musical department of St. John's Military Academy, and Fred Cardin, a Chippewa, who bids fair to become a violin virtuoso and who gained by his ability the same privilege in Dana's Conservatory, at Warren, Ohio.

GIRLS WHO ARE PALE, NERVOUS

May Find Help in Mrs. Elston's Letter About Her Daughter.

Burlington, Iowa.—"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has cured my daughter of weakness. She was troubled almost a year with it and complained of backache, so that I thought she would be an invalid. She was entirely run down, pale, nervous and without appetite. I was very much discouraged but heard of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound through friends and now I praise it because it has cured my daughter."—Mrs. F. M. ELSTON, R. D. No. 3, Burlington, Iowa.

Case of Another Girl.

Sexton, Minn.—"I used to be bothered with nervous spells, and would cry if anyone was cross to me. I got awful weak spells especially in the morning, and my appetite was poor. I also had a tender place in my right side which pained when I did any hard work. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and my symptoms all changed, and I am certainly feeling fine. I recommend it to every suffering woman or girl. You may use this letter for the good of others."—Miss ELLA OLSON, 171 5th St., Virginia, Minn.

Young Girls, Heed This Advice.

Girls who are troubled with painful or irregular periods, backache, headache, dragging-down sensations, fainting spells or indigestion, should immediately seek restoration to health by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

YOUR MISTAKES.

Study Them, Then Profit From Them, and Go Ahead.

Study your mistakes.

There are two kinds of mistakes Those that happen from ordinary human misthinking and those that come from carelessness and petty unthinking.

Study your mistakes.

No one ever gets too big to make mistakes. The secret is that the big man is greater than his mistakes, because he rises right out of them and passes beyond them.

After one of Henry Ward Beecher's sermons in Plymouth church, Brooklyn, a young man came up to him and said, "Mr. Beecher, did you know that you made a grammatical error in your sermon this morning?"

"A grammatical error!" answered Beecher. "I'll bet my hat that I made forty of them!"

Half of the power of the forceful man springs out of his mistakes of one sort or another. They help to keep him human.

Study your mistakes.

But the mistakes that tear away the power of a man, weaken him and make him flabby are the stupid, the reckless mistakes. The clerk who forgets, the stenographer that doesn't care, the worker who neglects—these are the ones whose life blood and vitality are sapped and sucked away into failure.

Study your mistakes.

One of the great things of each day for you is to do your best, unmindful of mistakes. But after your work is done and you realize your blunders don't shirk, don't whine, don't despond, but—

Regularity
of the bowels is an absolute necessity for good health. Unless the waste matter from the food which collects there is got rid of at least once a day, it decays and poisons the whole body, causing biliousness, indigestion and sick headaches. Salts and other harsh mineral purgatives irritate the delicate lining of the bowels. Glowworms Use Anaesthetics.

Before he begins to feast the glowworm administers an anaesthetic. He chloroforms his victim, rivaling in the process the wonders of modern surgery, which render the patient insensible before the surgeon operates on him. The usual game is a small snail, hardly the size of a cherry, which in hot weather collects in clusters on the stiff stubble and other long, dry stalks by the roadside, remaining there motionless, in profound meditation, throughout the scorching summer days. It is in some such resting place as this that I have often been privileged to light upon the lampyris banqueting on the prey which he had just paralyzed on its shaky support by his surgical artifices.

But he is familiar with other preserves. He frequents the edges of the irrigating ditches, with their cool soil, their varied vegetation, a favorite haunt of the mollusk. Here he treats the game on the ground and under these conditions it is easy for me to rear him at home and to follow the operator's performance down to the smallest detail.—Henri Fabre in Century Magazine.

NEW RIDING TOGS.

What the Debutante Will Wear This Spring.

ITS SMART FOR COUNTRY WEAR.

Decidedly rakish are the newest riding habits for country wear. The skirts or even the bifurcated skirt are passe, and now the young girl wears breeches like her brother's and a very masculine vest.

To complete the costume there are a long coat, a smart looking collar and cravat and a silk velours hat.

The Wedding Ring.

It is just a plain gold band. It is of no value compared to that gorgeous circlet with its coruscating diamond which the young girl proudly flaunts upon the third finger of her left hand. But think of what the wedding ring betokens. Its value is not its intrinsic worth as an article of jewelry. It is the taciturn yet eloquent symbol of the golden round of womanly duty lovingly performed, year in, year out, in sickness and in health, with devotion undying and asking no reward but the knowledge of loving, faithful service.

As well think of the old flag, borne through the hell of battle, as nothing more than faded, tattered bunting. It is the emblem of lives laid down for the love of country, "as a lover lays a rose at the feet of his beloved." Even so the wedding ring is the token of a life given daily, hourly, for the sake of all that a woman holds most dear in this human world.

That's What They All Say.

POLITICIANS' MASCOTS.

Are Horseshoes Lucky or Unlucky at the Polls?

When, as the result of the last general election in Britain, Mr. Hill-Wood was returned for the High Peak district of Derbyshire, he stated that he "was helped enormously by a black cat which accompanied him everywhere on polling day."

Black cats will be in great demand for electioneering purposes in the future, but it is dubious if the so-called lucky horseshoe will not be regarded with mild suspicion. On the occasion of Sir Edward Carson's visit to Ireland recently he was presented by the Unionists of Mid Antrim with a silver horseshoe with the best intentions in the world, but there was a decided slump in these luck-bearers as the result of the Bolton election of December, 1910. As a matter of fact, at the close of the last speech of the Unionist candidate before the poll, at Millville a lady stepped out from the audience and handed to Col. Hesketh a horseshoe suspended by parti-colored blue ribbons, bearing the inscription, "Good luck to Colonel Hesketh for Bolton"; but, unfortunately for the superstitious, the gallant officer was beaten by over a thousand votes, which calamity some believers solemnly put down to the fact that the horseshoe was adorned with ribbons.

It will doubtless be alleged by the the supporters of the horseshoe theory that at the same election Mr. G. A. Touche won the North Islington seat, which had been lost in 1906, for the Unionists, notwithstanding, or because of, the presence of a gilt horseshoe, tied by an admirer to his motor-car on polling day. It may further be pointed out in support of the horseshoe mascot that the same candidate was the recipient of yet another horseshoe, which, by the way, was also tied up with blue ribbon, but it must also be mentioned that the same was composed of white heather, and white heather, as everyone knows, in any shape or form is the most potent of mascots.

In addition to the horseshoes, Mr. Touche received by the same post a silk handkerchief on one corner of which was a crest and the inscription, "Vote for Tariff Reform and work for all," embroidered in silk; but it is understood that the handkerchief as a mascot has no standing with the superstitious, who doubtless attribute Lord Robert Cecil's success in the bye-election at Hitchin in 1911 to the fact that his motor-car was adorned with a gilded horseshoe and miniature brooms, the latter to ensure a "sweeping" majority.

HIS SPECIALTY WAS WOMEN.

Two friends started out in life, each of them resolving to pursue his own ideal.

And one of them went to see the world and the other became a hermit.

After many years they met again.

And the hermit said: "There is only one thing that I am curious about—women. Have you met any?"

"Have I met any?" exclaimed the other, smiling. "Why, women have been my specialty."

"Are they vain?"

"Very."

"Are they inquisitive?"

"Dear me, yes!"

"Is it true they talk continuously?"

"O, yes."

"Are they extravagant?"

"Yes, enough to suit any taste."

"Have they any good points?"

"Well, I should say they have."

"What are they?"

"Well, they can be unselfish."

"Indeed!"

"And they can save, if they love enough."

"How interesting."

"And they are good nurses. In fact, they differ widely in their capabilities. They are constant and inconstant, fickle and true, small and large, charitable, good, bad and indifferent."

The hermit grasped his companion's hand eagerly.

"My friend," he said, "this is all very wonderful to me—your knowledge of women is evidently extensive. And now tell me how many of them have you really known?"

And the friend replied:

"One."

Laying Keel of Big Warship.

NEW YORK, March 17.—The laying of the keel of battleship No. 39, which may eventually be named either the North Carolina or the Arizona, at the navy yard in Brooklyn yesterday, marks the beginning of the greatest fighting machine in the United States navy.

With a displacement of 31,500 tons, she will be slightly larger than her older sister, the Pennsylvania, and will be the tenth vessel of the super-Dreadnought class to be added to the fleet.

Venezuela Has a Revolution.

GEORGETOWN, British Guiana, March 17.—Serious revolution has broken out on the Venezuelan frontier near Moraweanna, capital of the northwest district of British Guiana. Four hundred and fifty rebels, according to the reports, have raided El Terror camp and are making preparations to attack the village of San Jose. The Venezuelan Government official, Gen. Orres, who commands the frontier stations, and sixty men are in a perilous position.

How to Remove Hairs From Chin, Lip or Cheek

(Beauty Culture)

It is an easy matter to banish every trace of objectionable hair and leave the skin soft and smooth and free from blemish. Just get a small, original package of powdered delatone and with water mix enough paste to cover the hairy surface. Let this remain on the skin for 2 or 3 minutes, then remove, wash the skin and the hairs are gone. No failure will result from this treatment, but be certain it is delatone you get.

JOURNALIST IS SHOT

IN REVENGE FOR ATTACK

PARIS, March 17. — Gaston Calmette, editor of The Figaro, was shot yesterday by Mme. Henriette Caillaux, wife of Joseph Caillaux, the French Minister of Finance. M. Calmette died last night.

Mme. Caillaux went to the office of The Figaro to carry out an act of vengeance against M. Calmette, who had been waging a campaign characterised by great bitterness against the Minister of Finance. She fired at least three times, M. Calmette being wounded in the chest, in the side, and in the abdomen.

While the editor was being transported to the hospital, he said repeatedly: "I have done my duty. I have done my duty." Having committed the deed, Mme. Caillaux submitted to arrest, and while employes in The Figaro office were taking the pistol from her hands she said:

"Since there is no justice in this country, I take upon myself an act of justice. Take me where you will."

Mme. Caillaux was immediately removed to a police station, where she underwent a preliminary examination, the substance of which was communicated to the press at her desire.

"I am sorry," she said, "for what I was obliged to do. I had no intention of killing M. Calmette, and I would be happy to know that he will recover. I desired only to teach him a lesson."

In her statement to the police Mme. Caillaux explained that the campaign against her husband had become intolerable and she determined to stop it. She consulted an eminent lawyer, who advised her that legal proceedings would be futile—that they were often worse in the case of the innocent than in the case of the guilty. She decided then to take the law into her own hands. She bought a revolver, drove to The Figaro office and sent in her card.

It was officially announced last night that M. Caillaux had tendered his resignation from the Ministry of Finance, but that Premier Doumergue withheld his decision until today.

Mme. Caillaux is the Minister's third wife. She is 39 years of age and her maiden name was Henriette Raimouard.

ASKS FOR SUPPLIES.

OTTAWA, March 17.—A mail has just been received at Ottawa from the Northwest Mounted Police at Fort McPherson, which includes letters from Stefansson. He writes from Collinson Point, and give some details of the scientific work which the party there is doing. He asks the Department for additional supplies to be sent to Herschell Island as soon as possible this spring. These supplies are to replace those that have gone with the Kariuk. Some of the supplies sent by the Naval Department will go down the Mackensie river and the balance by way of Behring Strait.

Stefansson reports that the men are all in good spirits, and they are doing valuable exploration work in the Mackenzie Delta, which has never been before accurately delineated. If his plans hold good, which he outlines at the time of writing, Stefansson will be returning now from a 300-mile trip into the Arctic, where he hopes to discover some new islands.

Education Notes.

Several of Arizona's school laws are models of simplicity and effectiveness, according to officials of the United States bureau of education.

The people of Macon county, Ill., are planning to do honor, by a memorial volume and in other ways, to the memory of the late John Trainer, "father of the modern country school."

The result of inadequate industrial education will be "peace, precision and prosperity in industry; happiness and hope in our homes," in the opinion of Secretary of Commerce Redfield.

That the hundreds of health teaching agencies in the United States should organize into a general body for united and co-operative action is the assertion of Dr. F. B. Dressler of the United States bureau of education.

Stomach Troubles Due To Acidity

SO SAYS EMINENT SPECIALIST.

So-called stomach troubles, such as indigestion, wind, stomachache and inability to retain food, are in probably nine cases out of ten simply evidence that fermentation is taking place in the food contents of the stomach, causing the formation of gas and acids. Wind distends the stomach, and causes that full, oppressive feeling sometimes known as heartburn, while the acid irritates and inflames the delicate lining of the stomach. The trouble lies entirely in the fermenting food. Such fermentation is unnatural, and acid formation is not only unnatural, but may involve most serious consequences if not corrected. To stop or prevent fermentation of the food contents of the stomach and to neutralize the acid, and render it bland and harmless, a teaspoonful of bisurated magnesia, probably the best and most effective corrector of acid stomach known, should be taken in a quarter of a glass of hot or cold water immediately after eating, or whenever wind or acidity is felt. This stops the fermentation, and neutralizes the acidity in a few moments. Fermentation, wind and acidity are dangerous and unnecessary. Stop or prevent them by the use of a proper antacid, such as bisurated magnesia, which can be obtained from any druggist and thus enable the stomach to do its work properly without being hindered by poisonous gas and dangerous acids.—M. F. P.

DANDRUFF, FALLING HAIR, ITCHY SCALP END THIS AT ONCE—25 CENT DANDERINE

Girls! Girls! Save Your Hair! Make It Grow Luxuriant and Beautiful

If you care for heavy hair, that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life; has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine.

Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair, besides it immediately dissolves every article of dandruff; you cannot have nice, heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp; the hair roots famish, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast.

If your hair has been neglected and is thin, faded, dry, scraggy or too oily, get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine at any drug store or toilet counter; apply a little as directed and ten minutes after you will say this was the best investment you ever made.

We sincerely believe, regardless of everything else advertised, that if you desire soft, lustrous, beautiful hair and lots of it—no dandruff—no itching scalp and no more falling hair—you must use Knowlton's Danderine. If eventually—why not now?

ASQUITH DISAPPOINTED.

He Will Not Give Out Further Details at Present Time.

LONDON, March 17.—"I do not feel much encouraged over the reception of my proposals in regard to Ulster," said Premier Asquith yesterday in the House of Commons.

He was replying to number of requests for further details of the scheme of local option, under whose provisions the nine counties of Ulster will be permitted to vote separately on the question whether they shall be left out of the control of the new Irish Government at Dublin.

Premier Asquith said he fully adhered to the proposals in the hope that they would form a "basis of settlement." He added:

"I am anxious in the interests of agreement and peace that the main principle of our proposals should be considered on their merits without being encumbered with minute details liable to draw the discussion into backwaters."

Andrew Bonar Law, leader of the Opposition, took exception to the Premier's attitude. He declared it was impossible to debate the proposals unless details were given.

Premier Asquith then promised to give the House an opportunity to discuss his refusal of the details before knowing whether the Opposition could accept the main principle of the proposals.

SITTING IS BRIEF.

Legislature Gives Second Reading to Three Bills.

TORONTO, March 17.—Three bills passed their second readings in the short half-hour session of the Legislature yesterday afternoon.

The bill of J. W. Johnson (Belleville), although not eliciting unanimous support, was allowed to pass the second reading and go to committee. It was designed to safeguard the sinking funds of municipalities from officers who would use them in the payment of town debentures. The sinking fund was a trust fund which should be kept intact, said Mr. Johnson.

Hon. Mr. Hanna pointed out that the earmarking of sinking funds was not always feasible. It was a question whether it paid better to have the sinking fund laid aside to accumulate a low rate of interest or to use part of it to pay off the higher rates which were connected with other municipal undertakings. The present act had the financial advantage.

The bill of John McFarlane (East Middlesex) to grant power to county councils that would allow of territory extension in police villages was also passed on to the private bills committee.

There is a possibility that rural communities will gain the privilege of having their tax papers and collections handled through the mail according to the custom now followed in the towns and cities. This is the purport of J. G. Anderson's bill, which secured its second reading without comment.

The amendment to the Motor Vehicles Act, which would enable municipalities to forbid the use of their roads to motorists for 24 hours every week was withdrawn by its sponsor, J. G. Andersen (Bruce), because of the unpopularity of the proposal.

James Gordon Bennett Ill.

LONDON, March 17.—James Gordon Bennett, owner of The New York Herald, is seriously ill aboard his yacht Lysistrata at Suez, according to a despatch received here last night. Mr. Bennett is reported to be suffering from a severe fever. He has been on a three weeks' cruise.

TOOK SEVERE COLD.

A bad cough accompanied by that distressing, tickling sensation in the throat is most aggravating.

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is rich in the lung healing virtues of the Norway pine tree, and for this reason it will stop that tickling in the throat which causes that dry hard cough that keeps you awake at night.

Mr. Sanford Roode, Antrim, N.S., writes:—"Last fall I took a severe cold which left me with a terrible hard cough and a nasty tickling sensation in my throat. I tried many cough medicines, but they did not help me so I got a bottle of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, and before I had used half of it the cough had left me, and the next one made a complete cure, and I will recommend it as the best cough medicine on the market."

See that you get "Dr. Wood's" when you ask for it. Do not accept any imitation. The genuine is put up in a yellow wrapper, three pine trees the trade mark, price, 25 and 50c., and manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

BEST LAXATIVE FOR BOWELS—"CASCARETS"

Get a 10-cent box.

Are you keeping your bowels, liver, and stomach clean, pure and fresh with Cascarets, or merely forcing a passageway every few days with Salts, Cathartic Pills, Castor Oil or Purgative Waters?

Stop having a bowel wash-day. Let Cascarets thoroughly cleanse and regulate the stomach, remove the sour and fermenting food and foul gases, take the excess bile from the liver and carry out of the system all the constipated waste matter and poisons in the bowels.

A Cascaret to-night will make you feel great by morning. They work while you sleep—never gripe, sicken or cause any inconvenience, and cost only 10 cent a box from your druggist. Millions of men and women take a Cascaret now and then and never have Headache, Biliousness, Coated Tongue, Indigestion, Sour Stomach or Constipated Bowels. Cascarets belong in every household. Children just love to take them.

TERM TO END IN FALL?

Duke of Connaught Will Then Retire Says British Paper.

LONDON, March 17.—The Manchester Guardian, which is generally judicious in what it publishes regarding exalted personages, gives prominence yesterday to a despatch from its correspondent in London, who declares the Duke of Connaught will definitely close his term as Governor-General of Canada in September. The Duke, however, may not return to England immediately, seeing he is going to visit the Yukon. His Royal Highness is likely to return home via the United States, taking leave of President Wilson at Washington and spending a few days in New York in private engagements. The Guardian's correspondent adds that the duke will, on the close of his Canadian term of office, consider his long public career ended.

As to his successor at Ottawa, this correspondent thinks the Duke of Teck will not likely accept, seeing he is due to command the First Life Guards.

Quick Cure For Rheumatism

He Suffered for a Year, but His Return to Health was Quick and His Cure Complete.

Bourg Louis, Que., March 16.—(Special).— How quickly Dodd's Kidney Pills will cure rheumatism and other forms of Kidney Disease when taken in the early stages is shown in the case of Mr. Robt. J. Pyle, a well-known farmer living near here.

In an interview Mr. Pyle says: "Working in cold, wet weather was the cause of my trouble, and for about a year I had occasional cramps in the muscles and stiffness in the joints. I was often dizzy and felt depressed and low spirited. I was nervous and my skin itched and burned at night.

"When Rheumatism was finally added to my ills, I decided to try Dodd's Kidney Pills. One box cured me completely, and I have had no return of my trouble."

Dodd's Kidney Pills cured Mr. Pyle's Rheumatism because it was caused by sick Kidneys. Dodd's Kidney Pills always cure sick Kidneys and you need Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Worry Stops Digestion And Destroys The Nerves

This Letter Tells of Case Which Baffled Doctors—Lasting Cure Effected by Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

If you only worry enough, digestion will stop entirely. Worry and anxiety consume nerve force at a tremendous rate. Blood rushes to the brain to renew the wasted nerve cells, and other parts of the body must suffer accordingly. When nervous energy is being consumed by the brain in worry, there is not sufficient left to run the machinery of digestion. This is why nervous, irritable, worrying people usually suffer from the food they eat the nourishment essential to the maintenance of health.

"Laugh and grow fat" is an old saying laden with value for nervous people in particular. Drop the worry habit and use Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and you will soon get the nervous system restored to good condition. Digestion will improve, appetite will return, and you will find such symptoms as headache and sleeplessness fast disappearing.

Mrs. Fred Jenson, 40 Gladstone Avenue, Windsor, Ont., writes: "I have used Dr. Chase's Nerve Food for nervousness and stomach trouble and never found anything to equal them. I was a nervous wreck. Doctors gave me up as incurable, but now I feel well again and have recommended Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to several people suffering as I did, and they have also been cured by its use. I am fifty-one years old, do all my own work, and am very thankful that I learned about this great medicine. I am satisfied that my cure is lasting and want others to benefit from my experience."

CATTLE MARKETS

UNION STOCK YARDS.

TORONTO, March 16.—Receipts of live stock at the Union Yards were 69 cars, comprising 1251 cattle, 1144 hogs, 70 sheep and 65 calves.

Butchers.

Choice steers sold at $8 to $8.75; good, $7.40 to $7.60; medium, $7 to $7.25; common, $6.50 to $6.75; choice cows, $6.75 to $7; good cows, $6.50 to $6.75; medium cows, $5.50 to $6; common cows, $5 to $5.50; canners and cutters, $3.75 to $4.50; bulls, choice, $7 to $7.50; good bulls, $6.50 to $7; medium, $6 to $6.50.

Stockers and Feeders.

Stockers and feeders were none too plentiful. Prices of steers, 800 to 900 lbs., at $6.75 to $7; steers, 700 to 800 lbs., at $6.25 to $6.50; stockers sold at from $4.50 to $5.75.

Milkers and Springers.

Receipts of milkers and springers were not large. Choice milkers and forward springers of good quality still bring good prices, but common to medium milkers, and late springers are slow sale. Two choice Holsteins sold at $100 each. The range of prices were from $60 to $100.

Veal Calves.

Receipts of veal calves were light and prices very firm. Choice calves, $10 to $11; good, $9 to $10; common and medium, $6.75 to $8.

Sheep and Lambs.

The sheep and lamb market was firm. Sheep, light ewes, sold at $6.50 to $7; heavy ewes, $5.75 to $6.25; rams, $5.25 to $5.75; heavy lambs, $8 to $8.75; choice lambs, $9 to $9.75.

Hogs.

Selects fed and watered sold at $9.10 to $9.25, and $8.90 f.o.b. cars.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, March 16.—A stronger feeling prevailed in the market for cattle today and prices advanced 15c to 25c per 100 pounds, owing to a smaller supply, especially of choice stock, coming forward. Demand was improved, but buyers showed no disposition to operate freely. A few full loads of choice steers changed hands at $8.25; picked small lots at $8.40, and choice butchers' cows brought as high as 7c per cwt. A weaker feeling has prevailed in the market for milch cows of late, on account of the increased offerings, and prices ...

Hogs showed a decline of from 25c to 50c per cwt., owing to increased supplies coming forward. Ontario selected stock sold at $9.50 and Manitobas at $9.50, while sows brought $8.50 to $8.90, and stags $4.75 to $4.90 per cwt., weighed off cars. The trade in sheep and lambs was very quiet, but prices ruled firm, on account of the continued small offerings, but the demand for calves was fairly good and some extra choice veals brought as high as $25 each.

Butchers' cattle, choice, $8.25 to $8.40; medium, $8.00 to $7.80; common, $5 to $6; canners, $4 to $4.25; choice cows, $6.75 to $7; medium, $5.50 to $6.50; bulls, $6 to $7; milkers, choice, $90 to $100; common and medium, $70 to $80; springers, $60 to $90; sheep, ewes, $5.50 to $6; bucks and culls, $5 to $5.25; lambs, $8.50 to $9; hogs, $9.50 to $9.90; calves, $8 to $15.

EAST BUFFALO LIVE STOCK.

EAST BUFFALO, March 16.—Cattle—Receipts, 4100; slow and 15c to 25c lower; bulls, steady; prime steers, $8.75 to $9; shipping, $8 to $8.60; butchers, $8.75 to $8.25; heifers, $6 to $8; cows, $5.75 to $7.50; bulls, $6 to $7.00; stockers and feeders, $5.75 to $7.25; stock heifers, $5.25 to $5.75; fresh cows and springers, active and strong, $35 to $90.

Hogs—Receipts, 12,000; active; pigs, 10c higher; others, 10c to 15c lower; heavy and mixed, $9.20 to $9.25; yorkers, $9.15 and $9.25; pigs, $9; roughs, $8.25 to $8.50; stags, $7 to $7.75; dairies, $9 to $9.25.

Sheep and lambs—Receipts, 11,000; handy sheep and lambs, active; sheep steady; lambs, 50 higher; lambs, $8.10 to $8.05; yearlings, $8.50 to $7.15; wethers, $6.25 to $6.35; ewes, $3 to $5; sheep, mixed, $6 to $6.15.

CHICAGO LIVE STOCK.

CHICAGO, March 16.—Cattle—Receipts, 18,000; market, steady; calves, 50c lower; Beeves, $7.20 to $9.50; Texas steers, $7.15 to $8.15; stockers and feeders, $6.60 to $8.75; cows and heifers, $3.75 to $8.50; calves, $8.50 to $9.50.

Hogs—Receipts, 53,000; market, active; light, $8.60 to $8.85; mixed, $8.50 to $8.85; heavy, $8.40 to $8.52½; rough, $8.40 to $8.50; pigs, $7.35 to $8.70; bulk of sales, $8.70 to $8.90.

Sheep—Receipts, 25,000; market, steady; native, $4.90 to $6.30; yearlings, $6.80 to $7; lambs, native, $6.40 to $7.75; western, $6.50 to $7.85.

Two Workmen Killed in Blast.

SHERBROOKE, Que., March 17.—A. R. McDougall was instantly killed and Ludger Lisee so seriously injured that he died some eight hours afterwards by a premature blast in the mine of the Weedon Mining Co. at Lake Weedon, on Saturday afternoon. The explosion took place just a few minutes prior to the workmen quitting for the day. McDougall lived at St. Raphael, Que., and Lisee at Fountain Mills, Que., and each leaves a widow and family.

Big Asbestos Deposits.

Asbestos deposits throughout a region approximately two by four miles in extent have been discovered in Natal.

FOOLISH TO SUFFER FROM STOMACH ILLS

What's the use of suffering from heartburn and the other disagreeable things caused by Dyspepsia and Indigestion, when we offer you the privilege of using Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets entirely at our risk, with the distinct understanding that, if they don't relieve your stomach trouble and make your stomach comfortable and your digestion easy, they will cost you nothing. If they don't do all you expect them to, we want you to tell us and let us give back your money. We know what they have done for others, and what they are made of. That is why we have confidence in them.

Among other things, they contain Pepsin and Bismuth, two of the greatest digestive aids known to medical science. They soothe and comfort the stomach, relieve heartburn and distress, promote the secretion of gastric juice and help make the bowels regular. We believe them to be by all odds the best remedy for indigestion or dyspepsia ever made. We believe you will say so, too, once you have used them. If you don't, they will cost you nothing. Sold only at the more than 7,000 Rexall Stores, and in this town only at our store. Three sizes, 25c, 50c and $1.00.

After Prof. Sabouraud confirmed the germ origin of dandruff, science was confronted by a new problem, which was not solved until the discovery of Newbro's Herpicide. Herpicide (being the first successful preparation compounded in harmony with this new theory, "the original remedy to kill the dandruff germ."

Since then, numerous preparations, said to be "just as good" as Herpicide have been thrown upon the market; others have adopted Herpicide claims, and without making any change in their remedies, but none have ever reached the same the same degree of popularity. Everywhere this remedy is recognized as the one genuine dandruff eradicator. As a result, Herpicide has more satisfied users than all other hair preparations combined.

Being the original remedy, users expect more astonishing results from Herpicide than they would look for from any other preparation, and they usually get them. So wonderful has been the success of this germicide that it is now recognized as the standard hair remedy of the world.

Newbro's Herpicide in 50c and $1 sizes is sold by all dealers who guarantee it to do all that is claimed. If you are not satisfied your money will be refunded.

PETERBOROUGH, TUESDAY, MARCH 17, 1914

IS HIS SEAT FORFEITED?

It Is Stated That G. H. Ferguson Has Defied the Statutes in Accepting Appointment

CANAL INVESTIGATION

OTTAWA, March 16.—Mr. G. Howard Ferguson, M.P.P. for Grenville, has, according to the revised statutes of Ontario, forfeited his seat in the Legislature and become liable to a penalty of $2,000 per day for every day on which he has occupied his legislative seat since his acceptance of the Trent Canal Investigation Commission from the Dominion Government. According to questions placed upon the Parliamentary order paper to-day, under which it is not improbable the Department of Justice may be called upon to take a hand, Mr. Ferguson's liability extends back to 1912.

Mr. Ferguson, in apparent defiance of the statutes, accepted for the Dominion Government the commission to investigate charges of irregularities in connection with the conduct of officials and employees on the Trent Canal, and his report has just recently been made public. Under the statutes, the conception of which was evidently designed to prevent a politician in one Legislature accepting commissions of emolument from politicians in another legislative body, thel arge penalty to which he has become liable can be collected from him by process of law by any citizen who desires to take action.

The revised statutes of Ontario for 1914, chapter 11, section 10, set forth as follows:

"Except as hereinafter specially provided (the special provisions naming members of the Executive Council, army and navy officers, Coroners, Justices of the Peace, etc.), no person accepting or holding any office, commission or employment, permanent or temporary, in the service of the Government of Canada or of the Government of Ontario, at the nomination of the Crown or at the nomination of any of the officers of the Government of Canada, or of the Government of Ontario, to which any salary, fee, wage, allowance, emolument, or profit of any kind is attached, shall be eligible as a member of the Assembly, or shall sit or vote therein."

Section 16 of the same chapter provides that "a person ineligible as a member of or disqualified from sitting or voting in the Assembly who sits or votes therein while he is so ineligible or disqualified shall forfeit the sum of $2,000 for every day on which he so sits or votes, and the said sum may be recovered from him by any person who sues for the same in any courts of competent jurisdiction."

Had Evanturel This in Mind?

In this connection it might be mentioned as an interesting possibility that Mr. Gustave Evanturel, the ex-member for Prescott, may have had some such prosecution as this in mind when he quietly resigned his seat in the Legislature without carrying out his declared intention of taking a few parting shots at Hon. Mr. Hanna and af "others." Rumours of this kind reached Ottawa to-day.

Dates Back to 1912.

Mr. Ferguson's first brief from the Borden Government is said to have been in 1912, when it is understood he investigated charges made with regard to irregularities in the purchase of dynamite for use on the Trent Canal. The sequel to this investigation is told in the report which Mr. Ferguson made this year, and which was published a few days ago, leading to the suspension of Supt. McClellan and other officials at Peterborough. It may be noted in passing that there is good ground for believing that the irregularities which Mr. Ferguson brings to light in his latest report were disclosed in his first investigation, but that no action was taken.

Striking Music in "The Red Rose"

The Seat Sale Opened This Morning

"The Red Rose" is not only a sensational musical comedy success, but more so a play that exceeded all expectations, opens at "The Grand" next Thursday Matinee, for one performance.

It is unlikely that there ever was a musical comedy produced which furnished more real music and comedy than this one. Musically "The Red Rose" is one of the most alluring achievements in the field of light composition. The haunting melody of "Rosemary" the irresistible humour of "Queen of Trinity Pier," a capital patter song, "The Bachelor Girl of Fifty-Five," "The Tango Dance," "Dearie," and "Dreaming" are a few of the musical gems.

THREE NEW CONSTABLES APPOINTED

Provisions Have Been Made for the Appointment of a Police Matron

THE APPLICANTS

At a meeting of the Board of Police Commissioners, which was held last evening, Mayor Butler moved that Chief of Police Thompson be authorized to select and recommend to the Commission, a person qualified to perform the duties of police matron. It is understood that Mrs. McElhiney, of the Salvation Army, has been spoken of for the position. An appropriation of four hundred dollars has been set aside for this purpose.

NEW APPOINTMENTS.

F. Burnham, W. S. Brown and J. H. Deannard were appointed constables on probation at a salary of $650 a year, in accordance with the new schedule. The appointments to date from March the sixteenth.

W. S. Brown, who resides at 154 Edinburgh Street, gives his age as 26 years, height six feet two inches, weight 175 pounds.

F. Burnham is thirty years of age, height five feet ten and one-half inches, and weighs 190 pounds.

John H. Deannard, 188 Lake St., is of the same age and height as F. Burnham, and weighs 210 pounds.

THE PUBLIC PARKS.

The secretary was instructed to write to the Nicholls Park Trustees and suggest that the parks be placed under the protection and supervision of the City Police force.

A number of accounts were ordered to be paid.

Those present at the meeting were His Honour Judge Hayden (chairman), Police Magistrate Dumble and His Worship Mayor Butler.

LAST ADDRESS OF THE CANADIAN CLUB

Hear Prof. Mavor of Toronto University To-morrow Night

The members of the Canadian Club are reminded of the address to be given tomorrow evening, March 18, by Professor Mavor of Toronto University, head of the Department of Political Economy on "the present Economic Position of Canada." The subject is most timely, when one considers the enormous sums of borrowed money this country is using to develop its natural resources, to deepen its canals, to extend the steel to the uttermost parts in a mad rush to be ranked among the first nations, and incidentally swell the coffers of the capitalists; one might therefore reasonably be excused were he to stop for a moment to reflect on the present economic position of Canada, and to question the stability of a country's prosperity and development, based so largely upon money derived from its foreign investor and borrowed capital.

Professor Mavor is in a position to handle this subject with exceeding fitness and resourcefulness, for it has been his business throughout the years of his professorship to study this particular phase of the question of economics from the academic side and his ideas. Therefore he will be untrammelled and free from the bias of one actively engaged in commercial pursuits.

Professor Mavor is also an author of some note, his latest book being a history of the political economy of Russia. He is, too, a fluent and pleasant speaker and the members are assured of a profitable evening. This being the last address of the season it is hoped that there will be a large turn out to welcome the guest of the evening.

Card of Acknowledgement

Mr. Harry Winch wishes to take this means of thanking his many friends for the great kindness shown Mrs. Winch during her long illness and stay in the Hospital. The beautiful flowers sent and the kind and frequent visits paid brightened her days and gave a cheer and comfort that tended to promote recovery. They were, and still are, warmly appreciated, and will long be a pleasant memory. Mr. and Mrs. Winch wish also to thank the Nicholls Hospital staff for their kind attention for many weeks.

FEMININE PREROGATIVE.

15th MAY VISIT CITY

Invitation Has Been Sent to the Belleville Regiment to Come Here on Victoria Day

WILL LIKELY ACCEPT

Peterborough may entertain a regiment of infantry on Victoria Day. Lt. Col. Clegg of the 57th Regiment, is sending an invitation to the 15th Regiment, Argyle Light Infantry, to visit this City for the holiday. The Belleville Corps was anxious to come to Peterborough last year, but the visit could not be arranged then. It is thought that they will come on this occasion. The Eastern Regiment will probably arrive on Saturday night, and spend Sunday and Monday in the City. There will be a Church parade on Sunday and on Monday morning, the visitors will be taken over the lift lock, while the afternoon will be left open to allow the soldiers to attend the Canadian League ball game at Riverside Park.

The local regiment is rounding into shape for the commencement of the drill season, which begins on the first Tuesday in April. There will be recruiting at the Armouries tonight in the different Company Armouries.

COMMENDATION OF THE EXAMINER BY THE MERCHANTS

They Formally Express Their Appreciation of the Examiner's Dollar Day Enterprise

The Examiner is pleased to feel that it deserves something of the commendation of the committee on Dollar Day, as expressing the sentiments of the merchants of the City generally. It is as follows:

We, the committee appointed by the merchants of the City, for the purpose of co-operating with the Examiner in promoting Dollar Day, desire to extend to the Examiner newspaper the appreciation of every merchant for the inauguration and extensive advertising of Dollar Day, which proved to be one of the best business days in the year, besides bringing the merchants together to make Peterborough the shopping centre; and one and all threw their efforts into one great cause, to give the purchasing public the best values obtainable. The Dollar Day demonstrated to the City and country that our merchants can furnish every line of goods, and meet every need at more advantageous prices than any mail order house.

WESTERN WEATHER AND OTHER THINGS

A private letter received from a newspaper man in Calgary states that the weather is beautiful, and spring's there to stay till it merges into summer. It is also stated that matters in some lines are dull, especially in newspaper sensations — "Things are woefully quiet—Calgary is the best policed city in America of its size—crime is kept at a minimum by Chief of Police Caddy, formerly of Toronto, who is the terror of crooks and black-legs. He is a fine man, as well as a splendid police officer."

SIX MONTHS IN CENTRAL PRISON

John Lowry Sentenced to That Term by Magistrate Dumble at Police Court This Morning

A VAGRANT

John Lowry will spend the next six months in Central Prison. He has been living at a boarding house for the past eight months and owes in the neighbourhood of $130 for board. Last night he went home the worse of liquor and when Mr. Pratt, with whom he boarded ordered him out, he started to break up the furniture. Assistance was sent for and Lowry was removed to the Police Station. He appeared on a charge of vagrancy before Magistrate Dumble, this morning. He entered a plea of guilty, but said he could not get work. Chief Thompson said he could have got work if he had wanted it.

"You are doing nobody any good here; they may make something out of you in Central Prison," said the Court, as sentence was imposed.

Nelson Succee, a resident of Tweed, who has just finished a ten-days' sentence for drunkenness, was again found in an intoxicated condition on George Street, yesterday. He was fined $2, with an alternative of another ten days at Castle Nesbitt.

Girls Had Narrow Escape

Special Wire to The Examiner:

WELLSLEY, Mass., March 17. — Four hundred girls, many of them clad only in their night garments, were driven from their room in the main dormitories building of the famous Wellsley College this morning at five-thirty o'clock, when fire broke out and destroyed the entire building valued at two hundred thousand dollars. The flames were discovered accidentally by one of the girls who was awakened by the crowing of roosters in a nearby poultry house, otherwise many girls might have been trapped and lives lost. The fire originated in the chemical laboratory.

Winston Churchill Is A Hero Again

Special Cable to The Examiner:

LONDON, Eng., March 17.—(Special cable.)—Winston Churchill has again become the hero of the Liberal party. This was evidenced by the manifestations of the ovations yesterday and today when he rose in the Commons to reply to some trivial question. In this connection the Daily Chronicle today said: "In the past few months there has been some criticism of Churchill that was more than justified. He was one of the few members of the Cabinet who believed in the exclusion of Ulster, and the fact that his views have been accepted and acted upon by his colleagues vindicates his opinion and his judgment. There is no doubt that Cabinet unity is now complete and they stand shoulder to shoulder on the Home Rule question, even to the smallest details. In the meantime, it is patent to the most optimistic observers that the Unionists are resolved to trample the concessions under foot. Bonar Law's reticent attitude of yesterday was merely to gain time.

WILL ERECT ABATTOIR

Messers Lumley and Perrin, Local Butchers Submit Proposal to Property Committee of City Council

SPECULATORS

Messrs T. W. Lumley and G. E. Perrin, furnished the Property Committee of the City Council with a genuine surprise last evening, when they predicted their willingness to erect an abattoir and conduct it in accordance with a by-law to be enacted by the City Council. Mr. Lumley requested that a by-law be passed to prohibit the slaughtering of animals for food until they were inspected by a qualified inspector, and that an abattoir be established. If given a charter, Messrs. Lumley and Perrin would establish and conduct an abattoir, the City to regulate the fees to be charged.

Messrs. Lumley and Perrin were asked to submit their proposal in writing. This they agreed to do. Referring to the meat that is sold on the market, Mr. Lumley said that the majority of vendors who offered meat for sale on the market were speculators. He knew of instances where meat had been sold at the market at higher prices than was charged in the regular retail meat stores. The erection of an abattoir and the enforcement of compulsory inspection would have a tendency to reduce the cost of meat to the consumer, rather than increase it.

Ald. Duncan said that the proposal, as submitted by Messrs. Lumley and Perrin, was a step in the right direction.

RED RIVER REBELLION

Veterans Are Sought After by Former Secretary of Association

2423 Twentieth Avenue,
Rosemount, Montreal.

The Editor, Examiner:

Dear Sir,—During the Red River rebellion, 1870-1-2-3, there were some of the members of the Ontario Battalion of Rifles who enlisted, and who are said to have belonged to your town, or the immediate vicinity.

I was formerly secretary of the South African Veterans' Association in Toronto, and am now trying to locate some of these older soldiers, and with the kind assistance of many of the Ontario papers I have been able to get the addresses of not a few of these veterans, or at least the addresses of their relatives or friends. If any of your readers have knowledge of the whereabouts of any of these men, or where their relatives or friends may be found, it will be gratefully received.

Members of the Ontario Battalion of Rifles, who are thought to have enlisted in your locality, or rather to have come from there are: George Henry Brownlee, Frederick Amaudrez, John Walter Babcock, John Davidson, Charles Forman, Wellington Hawley, William Massey, Alfred Morgan, C. Nilson, Daniel Rutherford, Wm. Ray, Wm. George Rogers, Albert Carney, Alexander Rogers and Francis Phair.

I would be glad to hear from your readers of any Red River veterans whom they know, or the addresses of their relatives. With thanks for any assistance you may be able to give me in the matter.—Yours faithfully,

G. M. BROWN.

REPAIR WORST PAYS.

"Repair work has cost me more than the original machine," stormed the physician.

"Repair work does pay better," said the automobile man. "You find it so in your business, don't you?"

And the doctor finally admitted that he did.

NEW MARKET REGULATIONS INTRODUCED

Present By-law Will Be Amended —Fowl Must Be Sold By Weight

SANITATION

A by-law is shortly to be enacted that will require all fowl sold on the Peterborough market to be sold by weight. A ticket must be attached to the fowl, showing the exact weight of the produce offered.

This matter together with numerous others, were thrashed out at a meeting of the Property committee of the City Council which was held last evening.

Need Not be Cleaned.

It will not be necessary to draw the fowl that is offered for sale on the local market. The clause pertaining to this was eliminated from the proposed by-law.

Aldermen McIntyre, Saunders and Duncan were opposed to the clause, claiming that its insertion would inflict a handicap upon the farmers.

Ventilation.

Ald. Langford, chairman of the Property committee, was instructed to confer with the City Trust Commission regarding arrangements to improve the heating and ventilation of the market building.

"Slink" Meat.

Veal must not be offered for sale on the market, weighing less than fifteen pounds per quarter, or less than four weeks old. This clause will be inserted in the by-law, which is now undergoing a few changes at the hands of Mr. E. H. D. Hall, City Solicitor.

Scrub the Market Hall.

No action was taken in respect to the suggestion to remove the horses from the vehicles on the market. Steps will be taken to have the market building scrubbed out occasionally. "If the building is not kept clean, we will go ahead and clean it, charging the cost to the City," said Sanitary Inspector Spence. "We" refers to the Board of Health.

FOUR DEAD AT BRECHIN

Hotel in Northern Village Destroyed by Fire and Four Lives Are Lost as Result of Conflagration

NO CHANCE TO ESCAPE

Special Wire to The Examiner:

BRECHIN, Ont., March 17. — (Near Orillia)—Four persons are dead as the result of a fire which completely destroyed Brechin Village hotel, and Dr. Gilpin's residence across the street from the hotel, at 2 a.m. to-day. The body of Mrs. McCauley was found in bed and had not been touched by the flames, death having resulted from suffocation. Miss Callaghan, a servant, and the six-year-old son of the proprietor occupied rooms in the upper floor of the hotel, and had no chance of escape.

The proprietor, Thomas McCauley, was awakened by the smell of smoke and made a desperate attempt to rescue his wife and the other occupants of the building, but was cut off by the flames.

In the meantime a bucket brigade was formed to fight the fire. Carried by a stiff breeze the flames shot across the street and set fire to the residence and office of Dr. Gilpin, and it too was burned to the ground. The rest of the village was saved from destruction by the fire fighters, handicapped by lack of water. The financial loss will be fifteen thousand dollars.

ORILLIA, Ont., March 17—Further details regarding the fire at Brechin indicate that a seven months' old infant was also burned to death, and McCauley, himself, so badly burned he may not recover. He is delirious and does not know of the death of his wife and two children, and his servant.

THE GREAT STRENGTH AND STABILITY OF THE NEW TURNBULL BUILDING

As Solid and Substantial as Steel and Concrete Can Make It —Virtually Fire-proof

While the new Turnbull building will be the most conspicuous and handsomest business structure in Peterborough, its beauty is not its chief feature, unless, like Samson and Hercules, its beauty lies in its strength. Anyone who has had occasion to frequently pass and repass the corner of George and Simcoe Streets, must have been struck with the strength and stable character of the building in all its details, and at all stages of construction. In the earlier stages he would have noticed that the foundations burrow downward to solid base, fifteen feet below the level of the sidewalk. In a steel structure like this the real foundations are the bases of the steel pillars, one foot square, placed on the two fronts, centres 18 feet apart.

Stable Foundations.

These support the weight of the building above and rest on concrete footings six feet square and six feet in thickness; that is, they extend six feet below the level of the basement floor, which is ten feet below the pavement. These steel pillars are placed at eighteen feet distances over the whole building, and each has a base six feet square and sunk six feet below the level of the basement floor, and each extends, from the foundation footings, fifteen feet below ground level, upward, the whole four stories. Each range of these steel pillars on all the floors, including the roof, is connected from north to south by twenty-inch-deep steel-eye beams, with lateral steel-eye beams connecting the pillars from side to side. The pillars and main eye-beams of steel and the tie beams are bolted together, or rather, literally welded together with white-hot bolts. Thus, from side to side, from end to end, and from top to bottom, the whole massive steel framework forms one single and connected structure as strong and rigid as steel can make it, and able to resist any strain or pressure to which it can be subjected.

except by some force like an earthquake; and even an earthquake could not shake it down unless it tilted the building to an angle at which the attraction of gravitation would bring it down, as an oak is shaken from its upright poise by the woodman's axe. What gives additional strength is, that upon the eye-beams is placed flooring consisting of 2 x 6 inch scantling set on edge, bolted to the steel girders, and solidly spiked sidewise to each other from one side of the building to the other, the whole floor being thus virtually one piece, six inches in thickness, without an opening or space between the several floors, except the openings for the stairs and elevators. The strength of this floor and its supports is almost inconceivable. What engineers call the "safety load" of this floor is 200 pounds to the square foot, and the "safety factor" is three times greater, or 600 pounds to the square foot. This strength is the same over every square foot of every floor, and even of the roof—constructed in the same manner. This 200 pounds to the square foot means, by way of illustration, that if every floor were covered with men standing as thick as they could be placed, each weighing 200 pounds, the floor would carry only one-third of the load it is capable of carrying. The east and south fronts of the building are faced with Indiana stone, for the first story, and with New Jersey terra cotta for the other stories.

The interior, or north and west walls, where they adjoin other buildings are of brick, eighteen inches thick, in the basement, and fourteen inches thick the other stories. Where each section of the eye-beams or "bent," as the like sections of a barn frame is called, joins the wall, the wall is buttressed to a thickness of eighteen inches. The west brick wall is eighteen inches thick for the basement and first two stories, and fourteen inches above.

Virtually Fireproof.

The building is virtually fire-proof—the six-inch solid floors being so slow-burning and sheathed on the underside with sheet-iron that there is no practical probability of destruction. Then there are no openings between the floors, no flues as in the case of joist-borne floors, to create draughts.

In order to further show the strength and solidity of the Turnbull building it may be stated that the foundations and steel work were designed to carry a seven storey structure, instead of four-storey, now being built, and what was designed to be absolutely safe for seven stories, which may ultimately be erected, is surely safe for four.

ST. PATRICK'S DAY.

To-day, the day of Ireland's patron saint, breaks bright and fair in the deep blue Canadian sky, and may be hopefully regarded as an omen for a brighter day for Ireland, the dawn of self-government. Whatever our political or religious affiliations, we all welcome the day and join with our Irish fellow-citizens of all creeds and parties in at least sympathetic observance of the day of one of the greatest saints in the roster of hagiology. St. Patrick was a national saint par eminence. He did great things for Ireland in his instrumentality, in implanting and spreading the blessings of the Gospel of Christianity upon Irish soil, and in Irish hearts. This, coupled with his encouragement of learning, has had not only a direct and deep influence in making Ireland the most pious of nations, her womanhood the most virtuous and her manhood the most honourable and chivalrous, but has had a reflex effect upon other nations in the world of warfare, of learning, of religion, which has been brightly marked by the work of Irishmen. So that when we think of St. Patrick and what the observance of his day means, their influence has no mere narrow national bounds. Whatever of myth and conjecture surrounds the origin and early life of St. Patrick, there is no doubt that he was of noble parentage, of patrician stock. And he has lived up to his responsibility in this regard. His life and work and influence have not only ennobled the clans into which he was born, but they have even ennobled royalty. When the Duchess of Connaught, on St. Patrick's Day, 1886, gave birth to a daughter, royalty honoured itself by giving the name Patricia to the royal daughter, now our own gracious and sweet "Princess Pat," as she is affectionately called by us Canadians. To-day almost every breast bears the Shamrock or some other emblem of the Emerald Isle in memory of the day, and even in some places the Union Jack is displayed in similar recognition. And why not? The Union Jack in itself is a token of national unity. It bears the triple symbol of Christianity, the combined three crosses of the three nations that have made the deepest and most beneficent impress upon human history, the crosses of St. George, St. Andrew and St. Patrick. Why should not the unity thus expressed in our glorious flag express the unity of the three great nations, which, with their descendents, composing the greatest empire of the world, fight the battle of human freedom and human enlightenment as no other national entity can ever equal? The flag that floats over all, and stands for equal rights for all, might well, as it is hoped it will soon do, float over a united Ireland, blessed with the boon of self-government, itself the greatest, the strongest, the indispensable bond of enduring and mighty empire.

ONE-SIDED.

The Borden Government is not satisfied with a rather one-sided majority in the House, but it insists on applying the one-sided principle to many of its administrative acts. The Government appointed a commission to investigate matters in connection with the construction of the Transcontinental Railway, and if the commission was not a partizan one; if its report was not one-sided and partizan, the manner of the Government in dealing with it is partizan and one-sided. The commissioners heard only one side, and reported only one side. The report contained everything they thought would bear against the Liberal Government. The most damaging partizan touches were selected from report and spread broadcast through the party press. The Liberal party in Parliament demanded that the Government bring the matter of the report before the House so that it could be discussed and both sides be presented. But, though the report was tabled a month ago the Government has stood off discussion. Since there is nothing in the business of Parliament to prevent earlier discussion of the report, the Government is holding off, it would seem, to continue the unfair advantage against the Liberals. The partizan press will continue to be fed with the one-sided extracts from the report, which go unchallenged and uncontradicted, by the steering off of discussion. It is a rather bad cause that won't stand the light or bear the keenest scrutiny.

FARMER'S SON AND THE HIRED MAN.

J. W. Flavelle, of Toronto, in the course of an address on the food question, said the farmer's son should be paid a wage and not be forced to work from morning till night for nothing; his position at present was worse than the hired man's. There is undoubtedly wisdom in what Mr. Mr. Flavelle says, although not every farmer will be inclined to agree with him. The old man often turns over the farm to the son and more often still, helps to settle him on another one. He does not do that for the hired man.—Montreal Gazette.

A JOKE OR A MYSTERY.

A mysterious return presented to the Legislature by the Provincial Treasurer shows that the Government has learned to regard it as impertinent for members to inquire as to what debts the people have been saddled with or what has been done with their money. It was brought down in response to a motion by Mr. Sinclair asking what securities had been sold since October 31, 1912, the date of sales, names of purchasers, and the price. The Government's answer is a long list of unconnected dates, then a long list of purchesers' names, and nothing to connect them with the dates or the purchases. Then follows a list of sales and prices not connected with purchasers or dates.

The amounts of the sales range from $1,080 to $1,770,300. The price, apparently by an oversight, is attached to each sale. All that is necessary to make the return absolutely void of information is the detaching of the prices from the sales, as these are detached from the dates and names of purchasers. The prices show a somewhat regular descent from $102 to $99. Such treatment of the Legislature looks like a stupid and ill-timed joke. It proceeds from the notion that the public have no right to grow inquisitive as to operations that sink them permanently into debt.—Globe.

OFFICIALS IN ELECTIONS.

An inspector in the employment of the Ontario Government did his utmost to prevent the Scott Act from being carried in Welland, Peel, and Huron. Mr. Hanna's defence is that people were asking what would be the effect of the passing of the Scott Act in places where the Ontario local option law is in force. Mr. Snider thereupon prepared a lengthy statement of the law, which was given to the press.

This is no defence at all. If the Ontario Government really believed that the two laws would conflict, and wished to issue a statement of the position, that statement should have been published in such a manner that the Government would be held to its full responsibility. There should have been no ground for the suspicion that the Government was taking part in the campaign against the Scott Act.

Instead of that, we find Mr. Snider issuing his statement, for which the Government at first disclaims responsibility. Then Mr. Snider entered the constituencies when the contest was in progress and made himself an active campaigner against the Scott Act. Does Mr. Hanna really mean to set up his conduct as an example to Government officials? If Mr. Snider was justified, then it would be equally justifiable for the Deputy Attorney-General or any other official in that department to stump the country against any proposed change in the law, using his position as an official to give authority to his words. He could be saying everywhere: "If you make such a law as is proposed, we cannot undertake to enforce it." Is any official to feel himself at liberty to leave his office and stump the country in that semi-official way? If the practice were to be extensively followed, the whole civil service would be disorganized.—Toronto Star.

$14,000 Damages Are Awarded

Special to The Examiner:

NEW YORK, N.Y., March 17. —Edward Gurney, the millionaire Toronto stove founder and his wife were to-day given fourteen thousand dollars damages against the Connecticut Cable Co., for injuries received by a collision with the cable of the defendant company when driving from the docks here three years ago.

Real Estate Stir Evident In East City

It looks as if East City would receive its fair share of attention this year in real estate transfers. Quite a demand is evident already in moderate priced houses and they cannot be had. It is understood there will be some building done on the Dickson Company's property, corner of Hunter and Burnham Streets, which has been vacant for years. This property has been subdivided and houses will be built facing on two streets, and posibly on a third which will be opened up, facing west.

Music & Drama

NOBODY'S DAUGHTER.

Only a very small audience was present at the Grand Opera House, last night, for the presentation of "Nobody's Daughter," by Mr. A. E. Anson and his English Company, but those who were there saw one of the best attractions of the year. The play was a splendid one, and the capable Company, headed by Mr. Anson, gave a fine interpretation of their respective roles. Peterborough has been singularly fortunate this year in the visit of so many fine English companies.

"Ruth Cameron" Missed

To the Editor:

Sir,—I believe I share the feelings of many of your readers when I frankly say that I have missed the delightful, practical little essays by "Ruth Cameron," which you used to publish. I do not know the reason that has led you to stop publishing them, and should not dictate in this matter. But I feel free to confess that "Ruth Cameron" was far more welcome to many of your readers than Nathaniel C. Fowler, Jr.'s "Getting a Start," or Pastor Russell's "sermons." Excusing the liberty for thus addressing you, I am.

Yours,
Constant Reader.

To Close Up The Arcade

Suggestion Advanced by Mr. Vincent Eastwood

Mr. Vincent Eastwood waited upon the Property Committee last evening for the purpose of pointing out the advisability of closing up the Market Arcade. He characterized the place as a repository for garbage from the adjoining stores and loafers. He would also close the upstairs market and arrange to erect a suitable one-storey market building in the centre of the Market Square.

Mayor Buller favoured the proposal and expressed the hope that in a few years steps would be taken to remove the present market to some other part of the City.

"How would you regard a new city hall?" interrogated the Mayor.

Mr. Eastwood—"It's needed, but we should first make provision to spend more money on the City's streets."

Mayor Buller suggested that some form of canopy be erected to protect the vendors on the outside market from the elements.

Mr. Eastwood favoured a change in the present regulations governing the Market that would enable the farmers to dispose of produce two or three times a week. They should be allowed the privilege of selling meat in small quantities as well as other provisions.

The matter will be taken up with the City Trust Commissioners.

ST. PATRICK'S DAY IN NEW YORK

Examiner Special:

NEW YORK, March 17.— To-day's celebration of St. Patrick's Day in this city took the form of a monster celebration over the victory of the Home Rule cause. Never before has the day been observed with a display of enthusiasm. The chief feature of the programme was the big parade, in which every Irish military and civic organization in the metropolitan district took place.

GRAPE-NUT GEMS.

Two eggs, one coffee cup Grape-Nuts, one coffee cup flour, one scant cup cold milk, one tablespoon sugar, 1 tablespoon melted butter, one tablespoon baking powder, pinch of salt. Bake in moderate oven twenty minutes. The above makes twelve gems.

Curried Eggs.

Fry a little sliced onion in a tablespoonful of butter. Stir into this a tablespoonful of flour and one teaspoonful of curry powder, or the latter in quantity to taste. When well blended, pour in one cup of hot water in which a bouillon cube had been dissolved (these cost five cents for two) and stir until the sauce is smooth and thick. Next lay in four hard boiled eggs cut into quarters or slices. Season with pepper and salt. When the eggs are heated through the dish is ready to serve.

Ginger Pudding.

Mix four ounces flour with four ounces breadcrumbs, four ounces chopped suet, two ounces sugar, one dessertspoonful of baking powder. Then stir in two eggs (well beaten) and two tablespoonfuls of golden syrup thinned with a little milk. Put into a greased mould and steam for two and one-half hours. Serve with treacle sauce. To make the sauce put two tablespoonfuls of golden syrup into a saucepan, with a gill of water and a little lemon juice, and boil for five minutes.

SIR JOHN MURRAY LOSES HIS LIFE

Famous Canadian Was Eminent as a Naturalist and Oceanographer and Was Educated in Victoria University

EDINBURGH, Scotland, March 17.—Sir John Murray, the noted naturalist and oceanographer, was killed yesterday near his home, Challenger Lodge, Wardie, Edinburgh, in a motor car accident, which occurred while his daughter Rhoda was driving. Sir John was returning from a visit to Glasgow, accompanied by his daughter and chauffeur. Miss Murray, who was at the wheel, took a road which was used as a short cut to the lodge. The car swerved, climbed a high bank and turned over. The occupants were thrown out and Sir John was instantly killed. The chauffeur was only slightly injured, but Miss Murray was conveyed to a hospital. An examination, however, showed that her injuries were less serious than at first feared.

Born at Cobourg, Ont., on March 3, 1841, John Murray received his early education in London, Ont., High School, and at Victoria University, Cobourg. Later he was graduated at Edinburgh University. At a comparatively early age he became famous as a scientist, and in 1868 visited the Arctic regions as a naturalist on board a whaling vessel. He was with the famous H. M. S. Challenger expedition of 1872-76 as a naturalist, and did valuable service in compiling reports of the great ocean basins. He participated in numerous other important explorations, including those in the Farce Channel. In 1898 he received knighthood, and in that year was created a knight of the Prussian Order Pour le Merite. In the following year he was British delegate to the International Hydrographic Conference at Stockholm, and in the same year received the honorary LL.D. degree at Toronto University.

He published numerous books and articles on subjects connected with his special subjects.

Mad Mullah's Raid Creates Anxiety For British Force.

NEW YORK, March 17.—A London cable says that The Express, commenting on the announcement that the Mad Mullah had headed a raid on Berbera, says there are two explanations. Either the remnant of the camel corps, about 150 strong, and the men of the Indian contingent, 250 strong, who are stationed at Sheikh, have been penned up in the Sheikh Fort, or they have engaged in a battle in the open and have been exterminated.

TRADE DISPUTES DURING FEBRUARY

The record of the Department of Labour for February shows that there was a pronounced decrease in the number of days lost through strikes and lockouts as compared with the previous month, although the number was somewhat larger than for the corresponding month of last year. The decrease was largely due to a settlement of a strike of shoe machine workers in Quebec, about 3,000 employees returning to work on February 14. There were altogether seven disputes in existence in Canada during February, as against five in January and nine in February of last year. About twenty-three firms and 4,400 employees were involved in these disputes. Approximately 66,937 working days were lost as compared with 117,450 during January, and 42,680 during February of last year. Three disputes commenced during February, none of which were serious from the standpoint of numbers affected. They were all, moreover, of short duration. The dispute of coal miners on Vancouver Island and garment workers at Montreal remained unsettled at the end of February.—Bulletin.

RETURN OF "QUO VADIS"

"Quo Vadis," George Kleine's magnificent production of the masterly Cines photo drama which crowded the Astor Theatre in New York City and broke records at Philadelphia, Chicago and Boston, continues to do so in all other cities where is it being presented. It is a glowing tribute to the finest achievement the worldhas yet known in the field of photo drama and serves to illustrate the marvellous hold this form of entertainment has on the public and the enormous possibilities for future development.

That tremendous soul or magnetism with which the brilliant Sienkiewicz invested his novel is retained in the photo drama reproduction and the audience is almost as much swayed by the camera effect as by the words of the novelist. The artangement of the picture is perfect, relating the story in sequential detail, and, by the use of the slightest imagination, the auditor has no difficulty in following and understanding it. The pursuit of Lygia by the young patrician Vinitius is so thoroughly human it has a strong appeal to everybody and when his earthly passion is glorified through his conversion, the young man has everybody's sympathy in his trials. It is the immense human interest of the photo drama that has as much as anything to do with its success. The spectacular features are wonderful, the burning of Rome, the pageantry of the court of Nero, the games in the Arena and the devouring of the Christians by the lions all have their thrills, but to young and old it is the big love story that lingers longest in the memory.

Mr. George Kleine's production of "Quo Vadis" will be the attraction at "The Grand" for to-morrow (Wednesday), Friday and Saturday of this week. There will be a daily matinee at 2.30. Evening performance commences at 8 o'clock.

Another Woman In The Case

Examiner Special:

PARIS, France, March 17—Another woman in the case is talked of to-day in connection with the murder of Editor Calmette of La Figaro by Madame Caillaux, wife of Finance Minister Caillaux, called the "Lloyd-George" of France, and frequently spoken of as the next President. Caillaux's action in publishing the letter is said to have been inspired by Madame Dupre, who was married and divorced by Caillaux. The latter's resignation was accepted to-day by the President, and he says he will spend the rest of his life fighting for his wife's life and liberty, if necessary. A grim and bitter political upheaval will likely result.

NEED OF PUBLICITY IN CONTRIBUTIONS TO POLITICAL FUNDS

The non-partizan discussion of the abuse of party funds which recently took place in the House of Lords is of interest to Canadians at a time when the same question is under discussion with us. Commenting on this discussion, The London Times says:

The question is a many-sided one, but there is no aspect of it that does not intimately affect the purity of politics. The revelations of the past years have shown the need of reforming the present system in at least one particular. It has been made clear that altogether too much power is vested in the chief whip. There are, however, many other risks to which the secrecy under which political funds are collected and spent exposes the character of public life. The funds themselves are probably necessary evils. It is not their existence, but the mystery surrounding their operations, which makes them liable to abuse. To take only one example, the acceptance of conditional gifts from outsiders who are not members of the party to which they subscribe is a practice that clearly tends to the demoralization of political ethics; and it could hardly arise if all parties were to follow and improve upon the example of the Nationalists and the Labour party and publish a regular balance-sheet indicating the sources of their contributions and the ways in which they are expended. The present secrecy, moreover, is objectionable on other grounds. It is apt to give an excessive influence to a few rich subscribers and enable them to nominate candidates from motives that are concealed from the mass of the voters. It may also, in unscrupulous hands, be used to apply an unwholesome pressure to individual members of parliament whose election expenses have been paid for them. Against these and similar dangers a public and periodic audit of party accounts, such as the Americans have been driven to adopt, might be an effective safeguard.

The Thunderer also comments on the revelations which have been made relative to the giving of knighthood and similar honours to men whose claims to such recognition consist solely in the fact that they have been large contributors to the funds of one or other of the two leading parties.

The one certain antidote for the poison of electoral corruption is, as The Times point out—publicity. Electors will be bribed and other wrongful means employed to carry elections, just so long as there are funds available for such purposes. Until these can be curtailed, or stopped altogether, laws for the punishment of bribery and corruption will not accomplish very much. In the United States, a country to which we do not look for instruction in political purity, they have got ahead of us in this matter, and are requiring the publication of the sources of election contributions. It is possible such a law may be evaded, to some extent, as all other laws to promote clean elections are, but insofar as it can be made effective it can accomplish naught but good, and it is certainly worth while giving it a trial.—Brantford Expositor.

The Second Floor Showrooms Presenting Selections of the Season's Latest Styles

SO MANY PEOPLE have remarked upon the beauty of the Spring Hats, the chief charm of which lies in the piquant tilt that is caused by the extended bandeau beneath the brim.

This new order of things has made possible a host of smart trimmings that are quite of a different nature to former styles, yet which are most becoming to women of every type.

So it naturally follows that, with most of the hats tilted to the right side, the under part of the hat figures as conspicuously as does the upper part, and is consequently tastefully adorned with flowers, feathers and ribbon.

One of the Smartest of Shapes

Is the "Peg O' My Heart" Hat, which is somewhat flat and worn at a rakish angle. There is one of these models that is made of Nigger Brown Tagel Straw; the top side being covered with crepe of the same shade. It has a split ostrich band encircling the low, dome crown, and terminating in a small mount at the right side. Beneath the brim, the high bandeau is prettily trimmed with rosebuds. The price is $10

The Hesitation Shape

In Virgin Blue, Tagel Straw, boasts a wreath of Forget-me-nots and foliage; while beneath the tilted brim, frayed Tango Silk and more Forget-me-nots are attractively placed. This smart little model is $6.75

The CRESSMAN Company Limited
The Store That Shows New Things First

A Black Sailor

This is the style of hat that has become so popular in the great centres, and which in this instance is modestly marked at $5.25

That Real Estate Debate

Mr. Austin Refers to Particulars in This Letter---Says Mr. Ellis is Chasing a Rainbow---Intimation That End of Controversy is in Sight.

Editor Evening Examiner:

Dear Sir,—If I am not trespassing too far on your space, I would like to reply to the fierce and fiery frothings of our two friends, as shown and recorded in Mr. Ellis' last letter.

As there are quacks on our market square who offer us a medicine which they claim will cure all diseases flesh is heir to, from corns to brain storm, so there have been since the time of Aristotle society quacks coming forward, each with a remedy or nostrum that was bound—to hear them tell the story—to bring about the millenium in a short time, to revolutionize society, to right all its wrongs, cure all its ills. As a general rule the agitators have been extremists, advocating measures so far outside the bounds of good common sense that it did not make any very decided impression upon the average man.

Some have advocated Nihilism, some Anarchy, some Socialism, some the single tax theory of Henry George. The Henry George theory and the single tax are to be commended in so far as they advocate the lightening of taxes on improvements and the placing it upon the land. This plank of their platform appeals to most progressive men. It is this part and this part alone that recommended it to the western provinces, and I wonder very much that a man who could bring forward one plank that would assist progress so much should at the same time bring forward three other planks in his platform so diametrically opposed to progress, to right and to righteousness as you and I understand it. This single tax theory assumes that the men who do not buy or pay for land (or society if you will), have a better right to the land than the individual who buys and pays for it, and this single tax is to be so increased that land becomes of practically no value—that is the land bought by the individual is to be confiscated—without remuneration to the owner. The name of land owner, or speculator, is to be anathematized. Nothing is too hard to say against the speculator. The speculator must be accused of every crime in the calendar. All you men that have speculated in lots in the south end—listen to what Mr. Ellis, this noble citizen, says of you: Speculation is most immoral; therefore you know what you are. You cause hardship to the settler, cause insanity to his wife; and in his last letter he quotes Rev. Mr. Pogue's illustration to show that we who speculate are like Bedouin tribesmen — ready to murder, ready to steal, and ready to hold people up and take their last cent, and let them escape only with their life. I heard this illustration from a member of Farm and Dairy staff some two or three years ago. If Rev. Mr. Pogue used it, he probably got it from that office or else they have their illustrations in common. I hope Rev. Mr. Pogue did not use this illustration in the same connection that Mr. Ellis did. Mr. Ellis argues that getting land as the speculator does, is legalized theft. Proudhou, the Anarchist, had a celebrated dictum, "La propriete C'est le Vol," ownership is theft. Mr. Ellis says legalized theft, and he and Rev. Mr. Pogue are certainly in good company when they use an illustration like this. The Encyclopoedia Britannica classed the other man who said property was theft as an Anarchist. It is usually correct in placing men. One can hear illustrations like this in Central Park, New York, or on the side streets in Chicago, but the men that use them are speaking from a soap box or the tail end of a cart, and the red flag of anarchy is usually displyed when fire-eaters appeal to passions like this and seek to set one class against the other, and stir up strife and contention. Are these men who appeal thus to people's passions to prejudice them them against other men, are they sincere or are they playing to the gallery? I am told on what I believe to be excellent authority, that one of these men who used this illustration, borrowed money within the past two years on his life insurance policy to send to Winnipeg, to be speculated with. I do not think he did a thing wrong, but if he has such violent prejudice against real estate speculation, why does he not keep his own doorstep cleared of it. The two largest purchases of land we made in the west, running up to $150,000, were made from ministers, one a Methodist, one a Presbyterian, so that while some ministers in the west are kicking about speculating in land there certainly are others, not a few, who are taking some of the bargains that are going. Mr. Ellis thinks a speculator never gives value, consequently steals his profits. Now, Mr. Ellis, put on your spectacles and find for me if you can, any stealing in the following transaction:

In 1905, one of the companies for whom I am acting, bought 12,800 acres of raw prairie in Saskatchewan from the Canadian Pacific Railway at $7.00 per acre. Purchase was made here in Peterborough, from agent, a minister, who I learned after, made 50c. per acre on the sale.

In 1908, after paying the taxes on the property, we sold it to the L. L. Co. of St. Paul, at $11.00. I examined every acre of this land myself. I knew it was worth at the least calculation as land sells here, $40.00 to $0.00 per acre, yet we sold it at $11.00 and made a decent profit — no big thing. The L. L. Co. of St. Paul resold this land immediately at $13.00 to $17.00 per acre to farmers who had sold their land in Iowa and Wisconsin at $60 to $150 per acre, and who were delighted to get this land at $13.00 to $17.00. Yet Mr. Ellis says we steal the profits, I think Mr. Ellis, that either you heart or your liver is out of order, because you certainly have very distorted views of things. Simply because you happen to think that it was wong for us to buy excellent land when it was going for a song, at $7.00, because that is your opinion, it does not make it so. We had as much right to buy that land as you had to buy your house on Gilmour Street. Now, after we bought the above land (it was all odd numbered sections, remember), the homesteads were taken up by a colony of Russians and Germans. I suppose Mr. Ellis will claim that we should have given them the profit—that the settlers made it. This is another instance where his beautiful theory does not hold , for the very fact that most of these settlers were Russians, and spoke no English, lost us $2.00 per acre on the selling price.

Mr. Ellis winds up his letter by a prediction of what will occur when the single tax is universally adopted. He says it will be a just, economic system. Yet the system confiscates the value of all land, without giving any compensation in return. Very just and righteous system is it not?—one that takes away your home and mine — nothing for it, either.

Then free trade the world over is another plank in the single tax platform—adopt this system to-morrow and you close every factory in Peterborough, for we could not compete with the Chinese and the Jap. How would this effect your poor working men over whom you shed so many real tears? Make this plain for a minute that single tax means competition with the Yellow Peril, and no intelligent workman will follow your lead for a minute. Further, should single tax be adopted to-morrow, the value of all real estate is destroyed, each man becomes a renter; no towns and cities where all are tenants will ever make any progress. No, Mr. Ellis, you are chasing a rainbow that glitters and gleams and attracts, but like all other rainbow chases, it lands you in bogs and marshes. There are evils in the world, and in the real estate business there are problems hard to solve, but the single tax, though it has some merits, is not the solution. Now as to this controversy, Mr. Ellis, you wrote the first letter to me, and have now written three. This is my third letter in reply. I could, I think, keep up the argument all summer, but a long suffering public has to be considered. If you are satisfied and ready to lay down the pen, I am, and while we have had a rather breezy, wordy war, there has been no one, I hope, seriously injured. I have rather enjoyed the diversion, and if another winter we are both spared, and you want to discuss the question of single tax or Socialism, or real estate speculation, I shall try to give you what satisfaction I am able.

Respectfully yours,
W. C. Austin.

Mistress Leaves Her $14,000 and Choice of Any Home

HAMILTON, March 16.—As a reward for faithful services rendered during the past 32 years in the home of the late Mrs. H. P. Coburn, James street south, Miss Eliza Jinkins receives a tidy and comfortable fortune amounting to $14,000. This became known this morning, when it was stated that she, together with a number of the other attendants of the household, including the coachman and others, were each remembered in the will. The will, which was probated in the local court, had no mention of these heirs.

Miss Jinkins, who gets the largest portion of the estate of any of the employees of the household, receives not only the $14,000, but the pick of all the furnishings in the fine residence. In addition to his, she also has the choice of any home in this city which is at the present time available. It is likely that one has been decided upon by this time. For the next three months she will reside at the Coburn residence. This was one of the requests made in th will. It is quite probable that she will move into her own home at the expiration of this time.

The amount that the other attendants and servants of the household received has not been made known. dence. In addition to this, she also ceived a very generous allowance.

BISHOG O'BRIEN WAS INITIATED INTO ST. PETER'S COURT C.O.F.

At a largely attended meeting of St. Peter's Court, C. O. F., of this City, held last evening in their hall on Hunter Street, His Lordship Rt. Rev. M. J. O'Brien, D.D., was duly initiated a member of the Order. The members were most enthusiastic over the fact that their beloved Bishop was becoming a member, and consequently turned out in force. The initiation ceremonies were splendidly put on by the Chief Ranger, Bro. Perdue, and the officers of the Court and His Lordship was loud in his words of praise at the manner in which everything was carried ont. After the initiation ceremonies were over, addresses were made on the good of the Order by the chaplain, Rev. C. J. Phelan, the Deputy H.C. R.. J. P. Sheelin, Brothers V. J. McElderry and J. J. Lynch, the first Chief Ranger of St. Peter's Court, when it was formed 23 years ago. His Lordship, Bishop O'Brien, was then called upon, and gave a very stirring address to the members. He told them how pleased he was to become a member of the Order, and was delighted to know the great progress the Order was making, both in Canada and the United States. He exhorted horted them to be practical Catholics — gentlemanly and temperate in their habits, and to continue the good work the Order was doing. St. Peter's Court has flourished during the past year, and has at the present time a membership of 282 in good standing, with two or three to be initiated at the next regular meeting. Now that the Bishop has joined the ranks, 1914 is expected to be a banner year for St. Peter's Court and Catholic forestry generally.

MUSKRAT HAT PELTS WILL NOT BRING VERY HIGH PRICE

Muskrat pelts should soon be drying in the sun, or wherever they treat them, if the marshes get a little more of the present sunshine. The rats will not bring as high a price as last year according to the market indications. For the March sales in London there were 4,500,000 rat pelts listed, in comparison with something over one million at the January sale. Mr. K. G. Lech stated that this was an indication of an over supply, and in face of it a high price could not be looked for. The price is not expected to go over 50 cents a hide. A few years ago 90c was reached, but it resulted in financial loss for many of the big dealers.

Ferguson Must Forfeit His Seat

Special to The Examiner.

PARLIAMENT BUILDINGS, Toronto, March 17.—Despite the announcement in a despatch from Ottawa to the effect that G. Howard Ferguson, M.P.P. for Grenville, must forfeit his seat in the Legislature, that member when seen to-day, declared that he "would stick." The point comes up in connection with his acceptance of a commission from the Federal government to investigate the Tunis Kelley Case.

Son Gets More Than Father

Rev. G. W. Henderson Urges Young Men to Go Into the Ministry

ST. CATHARINES, Ont., March 16.—"I may say I have a son, a mere lad, in a commercial position in Toronto. He is getting a better salary than I am, or ever expect to get. But I still think the old man is the better of the two, even yet. I may say I would rather be a humble Methodist preacher, than the Premier of Canada."

So said Rev. G. W. Henderson, pastor of Welland Avenue Methodist Church, Sunday night, in the course of a sermon to young men in which he urged them to go into the ministry, because in the end it offered more return than any other calling in this world.

PETERBOROUGH BOY'S SUCCESS

Peterborough people are always interested in the career of former citizens, who have gone out into the world and scored a success. Such a one is Mr. Frank Hamilton, late son of Mr. Frank Hamilton, of East City. Mr. Hamilton has been for six years general foreman with the Dominion Bridge Co.'s works, at Lachine, and is leaving to assume the position of superintendent in the Structural Steel Works at Longue Point, operated by the Dominion Bridge Co. On Saturday night, in the company's club rooms, Mr. Hamilton was presented with a handsome cabinet of silver, and a purse of gold, testifying to the esteem in which he has been held by his fellow-workers.

His many friends here will be glad to har of Mr. Hamilton's success.

WILL STUDY ITALIAN OPERA

Miss Lillian Lavigne is Returning to Paris and Milan

The Sunday World of Sunday last had the following reference to Mrs. Heber H. Ward, who was formerly Miss Lavina Hallihan, of this City, accompanied by a beautiful photogravure of the artiste:

"Lillian Lavigue, the Canadian soprano, well known in Toronto and who has been meeting with great success abroad for the past couple of years was recently married to Dr. Heber H. Ward of New York City, by the Rev. Father Craig, of St. Joseph's Church, Brooklyn. Miss Lavigue made a very successful debut in London a short time ago, under her maiden name, Mme. de Newsky, and intends returning to Paris to study a French repertoire and theatre to fit her for Italian opera. She will still be known professionally as Lillian Lavigue."

New Spot Is Found On Sun

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, March 17.—Astronomers here to-day discovered a huge spot on the sun, a new spot they say, ten thousand miles in diameter, and big enough to swallow the earth without choking. They figure out that it is a huge black hole not seen before.

EMIGRANTS FOR PETERBORO'

What is probably the commencement of a very busy season in Immigration circles had its initiative yesterday afternoon. Mr. Miller, the local Immigration Officer, had received word, the latter end of last week, that several farm hands would arrive in the course of a few days. A party of five was expected, but only three arrived. These had been to Toronto, and were returned to this City, as they had been booked here. Two were experienced farm hands, and the remaining one was "green." They reported having a rather rough voyage across the Atlantic Ocean. They were immediately placed with farmers in this vicinity and will leave the City some time during the day. More are expected within the next few days. The demand on the other hand, is about the average. The Spring work will soon start and it will be then that the demand will be the greatest. Last year, it will be remembered, the demand could not be satisfied, but Mr. Miller hopes to cope with any demand that he may meet this year, as the work in the cities is slack, and those that would otherwise have stayed in the cities will, by force of circumstances, have to resort to the farms. It is probable that several well conducted parties will be brought to the City before the expiration of the active season.

PRESENTED WITH AN ADDRESS

On Saturday evening last the members of the choir of the Methodist Church at Lakefield met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Baker to bid goodbye to Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Spencer, who were about to remove to Peterborough. The evening was spent in games and other amusements, after which refreshments were served. During the evening the following address was read:

Dear Friends,—We, you co-workers in the choir of the Methodist Church have heard with deep regret of your early departure from Lakefield. Your removal from our midst will be a distinct loss to our choir and you will leave a vacant place which will be hard to fill. During your connection with our choir for upwards of three years we have spent many pleasant evenings together, and we will also miss you in your social intercourse. You have always been faithful co-workers in all departments of church work, and we pray that God may abundantly bless and prosper you in your new home in Peterborough.

Signed on behalf of the choir,
Mrs. W. J. Baker,
Laura Grylls,
Hazel Meade,
A. E. Higgins,
C. E. Kennedy.

TRIED TO HAND PETITION TO KING

Examiner Special:

LONDON, Eng., March 17.— There was great excitement at the matinee in Palladum Theatre this afternoon when a suffragette attempted to present a petition to King George and Queen Mary who were in the royal box. When they approached their Majesties, members of the royal escort grabbed them and hustled them toward the door and they showered the royal box with suffragette literature. The King and Queen remained quite cool, although there was much screaming and excitement.

A PROMINENT ORGANIZER HERE

H. J. Osborn, J.P., a prominent English journalist, speaker and organiser, is on a short third visit to the Dominion, on personal business; but he also represents numerous leading English newspapers, as Editorial correspondent, and is to speak for Temperance and Social Reform interests.

Hamar Greenwood, the brilliant Canadian member of the British Parliament, says H. J. Osborn is "one of the few Liberals who have travelled widely, and benefitted by their travels," while Rowland Whitehead, ex-M.P., and a leading King's Counsel, vouches for his "forceful oratory." A leading Good Templar, he is specially credentialled by Joseph Malins, the veteran World leader and by Tom Honeyman, International Secretary; and was endorsed by the late Frances Willard as "the most successful getter up of big things our great cause has produced." He expects, also, to float a second campaign in Canada, to begin next September, for E. Tennyson Smith, the talented English Temperance Orator, and fighter in many Local Option battles, in Great Britain Britain, Canada, the States, South Africa, New Zealand and Australia. Mr. Osborn will welcome correspondence, and can be addressed, care The Windsor Hotel, Montreal.

IN THE WORLD OF SPORT

Lacrosse Committee Is Meeting Encouragement On All Sides

Reports from several members of the lacrosse committee appointed last week to boost the game in Peterborough indicate that its re-establishment is not going to be as difficult an undertaking as some anticipated. The offers of financial assistance for the purpose of purchasing sticks for the school boys have been quite generous. No money has yet been accepted for the reason that the arrangements have not yet taken definite shape, but a meeting will likely be held this week, when the matter will be gone into carefully. The formation of a local team is another important item to be considered, and every lacrosse player or would-be lacrosse players are asked to watched for the announcement of the next meeting. If the game is to sprout again, its devotees must resolve that they will do all in their power to get it going. If a team could be formed here this summer, games could be arranged with surrounding towns and quite an interesting season may be expected if the matter is taken up with the necessary enthusiasm.

THE Y. M. C. A. HOCKEY TEAM ENTERTAINED AT FINE BANQUET

PLAYERS COMPLIMENTED

The Y.M.C.A. Junior City League hockey team were entertained at a most enjoyable banquet last night by Mr. Alonzo Hainsworth, the general secretary of the Y.M.C.A., in the Savoy. The affair was a great success, and Mr. Hainsworth's hospitality was thoroughly appreciated. Mr. Hainsworth presided and gathered around the tables were Walter Flowers, Alex. Darling, Roy Smyth, Howard Cranfield, Walter Jackson, Romeyn Stevenson, Harold Knapman, T. Quinn, E. Smyth, W. Moore, Bruce Hamilton, G. L. Galley, boys' secretary of the Y.M.C.A. and F. D. Craig, who coached the team.

A very attractive menu had been prepared by Mine Host Coleman, and the gathering did ample justice to the good things provided.

Afterwards Mr. Hainsworth thanked the players for the way in which they had worthily represented the Y.M.C.A. during the past winter. The Association were proud of their record and of their conduct.

Mr. Galley also paid a tribute to the manner in which the Y.M.C.A. team had played the game during the season. They had shown the proper spirit, had played hockey of a kind that earned the admiration of those who saw them play, and had been representatives of which the Y.M.C.A. might well feel proud. Mr. Galley referred to the effort being made by the Peterborough Athletic Club to revive lacrosse and urged those present to do everything in their power to help the club in its campaign. The matter would be taken up in the Boys' Department and he hoped the hockey boys would do their part.

F. D. Craig congratulated the Y.M.C.A. team on the clean, clever hockey they had played. They had sought no mean advantage in the City League race and when beaten had taken their defeat manfully and gracefully. The Association, he thought, should feel gratified at the showing of the wearers of the red and black.

Walter Flowers, manager of the team, thanked the players for the manner in which they had worked together for the success of the club, and Roy Smyth, the captain, also expressed his appreciation of the work of the players. He also took advantage of the occasion to express the hearty thanks of the team to Mr. Hainsworth for his hospitality.

After hearty cheers for Messrs. Hainsworth and Galley the gathering adjourned to the Y.M.C.A., where the evening's festivities were bound up with a lively basketball contest in which Barney Quinn's team defeated the aggregation led by Walter Flowers and Harold Knapman. The Flower's five were a bad third, thanks to the presence of a number of has beens on the line-up.

An Appreciation Of The Courtesies From The Curling Rink

With the conclusion of the curling season an appreciation of the courtesies of Mr. Felix Brownscombe, the secretary, and Mr. Angus McIntosh, ice maker and caretaker, is in order. The curling rink affords the press every facility for getting whatever news of the game is going, a condition that is much appreciated, and it is through the above mentioned gentlemen that the most of the news is obtained in regard to the activities around the rink.

Transferred To Sudbury

Mr. Dave Bradshaw, who has been accountant of the local branch of the Royal Bank for the past two years, has been transferred to the Sudbury Branch, and left for the north on Saturday. Mr. Bradshaw will be greatly missed in many circles in Peterborough, and especially by the hockey fans, who will remember his work with the Peterborough Intermediates this season.

Best Meeting In History Of Peterborough Curling Club

Mr. H. R. H. Kenner Elected President for the Ensuing Year—Seventy-five Members Present at Annual Meeting Last Night

BIG IMPROVEMENTS

The annual meeting of the Peterborough Curling Club, held last night in the Charlotte Street rink, gave numerous evidences of the enthusiasm with which the local knights of the broom regard the grand old game.

Seventy-five members were present, constituting the most largely attended meeting in the history of the club. On every hand were heard expressions of the utmost satisfaction with the games during the past winter. The inter-rink contests and local bonspiels produced splendid curling with fighting finishes in every case. Trophy competitions with outside clubs resulted in Peterborough getting a big share of the silverware, and the majority of the friendly games produced victories. The finances are flourishing, the membership is practically at the limited number, and the immediate future presents the most roseate prospects that have every loomed above the club's horizon. And the most encouraging feature of the present outlook rests in the fact that the bright promises show every indication of being reduced to material form before the gas jets are lighted next winter.

Mr. Harry Foote, president during the past year, occupied the chair, and in his opening remarks reviewed the season's play. The cup games were chalked off as follows:

The Waddell-Capon (Toronto) cup, won by 25 points to the good.

Neill-Sheppard (Orillia) cup, won by 43 points.

Peterborough-Lindsay cup, lost by 3 points.

District cup competition, won by 16 shots.

Ontario Tankard, lost by 12 points.

Won from Millbrook by 26.
Won from Norwood by 9.
Lost to Toronto Granites by 31.
Won from Keene by 4.
Won from Campbellford by 22.

Presentation of Prizes.

The presentation of prizes is always a pleasing feature, particularly to the fortunate and doubtless capable winners.

The Local Bonspiel.

The prizes to the winners were heavy cut glass berry bowls—A. P. McLean, W. H. Collier, Jas. Skinner, W. H. Taylor, skip.

To the runners up, umbrellas—L. A. Potvin, M. C. Tooley, Alex. Archibald, W. M. McCracken, skip.

Consolation Series.

The consolation series of the bonspiel was terminated on Saturday night, when Neill defeated Wightman. The victors received cut glass sugar and cream sets—W. J. Padgett, F. Bartlett, J. W. Firth, R. Neill, skip.

Vice Skips' Bonspiel.

Each member of the rink that won the ViceSkips' bonspiel received a suit case—G. A. Wood, W. J. Padgett, P. D. Fitzgerald, Geo. Hill, skip.

The runners-up were the recipients of cuff links—R. Dobie, T. H. Hooper, J. C. Read, W. G. Read, skip.

Election of Officers.

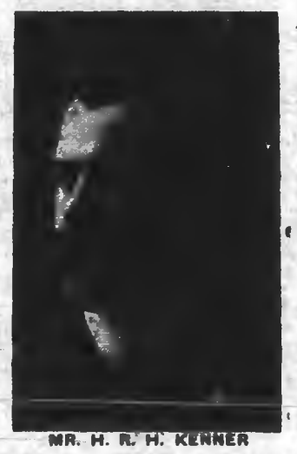
Hon. President—Harry Foote.
President—H. R. H. Kenner.

NEW PRESIDENT OF CURLING CLUB



MR. H. R. H. KENNER

Vice-President—J. E. A. Fitzgerald.

Management Committee — W. H. Taylor, W. G. Ferguson, W. D. Campbell, R. Neill.

Representatives to the Ontario Curling Association—W. G. Morrow and W. G. Ferguson.

In thanking the members for the honour conferred upon him, Mr. Kenner remarked that he had reached his majority as a curler, having first joined the Peterborough Curling Club twenty-one years ago. The members were indebted to the retiring president for the service he had rendered during the past year. Mr. Kenner also commented upon the co-operation and attention shown by the members of the Committee of Management, and promised to work for the best interests of the club during the coming year.

Other Business.

On motion of Mr. Keuner, seconded by Mr. T. Brightman, Section IX of the constitution was amended, providing for the selection of skips on or before "the third day" of December instead of "the first Monday" in that month.

Amendments to By-law No. 6 carried last night, provide that fees must be paid on or before the first day of December instead of the first Monday, and any member who does not comply with this provision automatically ceases to be a member.

By these changes a member is not required to submit his resignation. The neglect to forward fees before the appointed time is an ipso facto resignation. These alterations will give the Committee of Management two days during which the rinks can be drawn up. Formerly this was the work of one day and occasionally it happened that a man selected for a rink would decide not to curl. With the amendments now in force such an eventuality will be impossible. The committee will know exactly those who attend to play and the personnel of the rinks can be arranged at once.

It is understood that the Curling Rink Company will consider plans for the extensive improvements during the coming summer. This matter has to be decided at a meeting on Thursday night, but in the absence of Mr. Hicks last night Mr. Neill stated that if the changes under consideration are carried out the Peterborough Rink will be one of the finest in the Province. Provision will be made for the ladies, and everything will be done to foster the clean atmosphere that has prevailed at the Rink.

CITY BASKETBALL LEAGUE OPENS SATURDAY NIGHT

The opening game in the City Basketball League will be played Saturday night at 8. 30, when the Leaders will meet the Peterborough Athletic Club team. As a curtain raiser the P. C. S. team of Port Hope will meet the P. C. I. outfit in their annual game. This game will be called at 7.30 to enable the Port Hope boys to catch the 9 p.m. train.

ICE WAS REMOVED FROM BROCK STREET RINK TO-DAY

The hockey and skating season in Peterborough has come to and end. This morning a small army of workmen commenced to take the ice out of the Brock Street Rink, and by to-night the floor will be cleared. Last year the ice was removed on March 14, three days earlier. The season has been a good one, the steadiness of the cold weather once it set in, allowing the management to almost invariably provide good ice for skating and hockey.

BRITISH SOCCER RESULTS

Old Country Football.

LONDON, March 17—Cup, fourth round, replay, yesterday:

Sheffeld United 1, Manchester City 0.

Southern League — Millwall 1, Northampton 1.

BASEBALL

Baseball is a popular sport at Princeton University. The Tiger nine showed a net profit of more than $10,500 for the season of 1912-13.

"Lefty" Leifield, the former Pittsburgh heaver, has turned down an offer from the Federal League, and signed with the San Francisco team.

In his nine years in the National League Mike Doolan, the former Philly shortstop, now with the Federals, never had a batting average higher than .265.

Though Clark Griffith may fail to find anything choice in the flinging line among his young pitchers he will still have Johnson, first name Walter.

Young Riggert appears to be showing the real article in centre field for the Brooklyn Superbs. He has a lot of seed and a wonderful throwing arm.

Catcher "Red" Kuhn of the White Sox seriously injured his throwing arm in a recent exhibition game and it is feared he may not be able to play until well after the season opens.

CANADIAN LEAGUE NOTES

KEEP YOUR EYE ON CURLY.

Ottawa Free Press: Keep your eye on Curly Blount, Peterborough's new leader. He had a cracking good pitching staff left him, and a pretty fair outfield. He has managed in class B himself and is a swell ball player in the bargain.

Frank Shaughnessy says Doc Reisling, the London leader, can still pitch good ball, and vouches for the statement that the dentist will win several games on the mound this season. Shag says Reisling, at London, and Curly Blount, at Peterborough, are the pilots who will bear watching in the Canadian this year.

There will be a raft of ex-big leaguers drifting around the Canadian circuit this season. When Dummy Taylor mounts the rubber for Erie, one can't help but recall the great Giant twirling staff of Matthewson, Ames, Taylor, Wiltse and Crandall.

In 1910 Doc Reisling ranked next to Walter Johnson as Washington's leading pitcher. Johnson won 25 and lost 17. Reisling won 10 and lost 10.

Hamilton Herald: A glance over the dates will show that Hamilton has secured its share of the plums, for Saturdays and holidays are almost in every instance allotted to the club for its home games. Contrary to last year, the Hams will be home on almost every Saturday, and every holiday. The only drawbacks are that London appears in Hamilton only once during the season, and that Hamilton in turn plays only once in Toronto. However, in the case of the Queen City nothing better could be secured, as the International League dates would not permit of a clash. Otherwise the schedule is in every way satisfactory.

Hamilton Herald: Eddie Frick, one of the provisional directors of the local club, got back into Town the latter part of the week. On the arrival of Controller W. H. Cooper the grounds question will be settled. So far there has been no sign of yielding by either the Alerts limited or the ball club.

Manager Craven thinks he has a comer in a new acquisition to the St. Thomas roster in the person of Jack Thrailkill. Thrailkill is a former Texas Leaguer and has played on various teams thee fo the past couple of seasons. His signed contact was received by Midge Saturday morning and once more the Saints' stocks ascended a few notches. Thrailkill, while good at any infield position, is best at third base and he may fill the place vacated by Eddie Wright. The race for the third base position has narrowed down to two. Hess of Cleveland and Thrailkill. Dusty Bullock has accepted terms with Ottawa and will play with Shaughnessy again this season. It is possible that Manager Shag will consider the deal mentioned on Saturday involving the two St. Thomas pitchers. Howick and Clement, and Bullock and Dolan of Ottawa.

St. Thomas Journal:

It can be safely conjectured that Ottawa will not cop the pennant this year. At least not while the Saints are on the job.

It is rumoured that Jack Evans has been made an offer from the Church League.

Wouldn't it be nice if President Stanley presented the boys with a nice rubber-neck waggon for their tour of Michigan?

Or they could use it to convey the Cockneys off the field this summer.

Have you noticed that the smooth Londoners get off just a little better than the Saints on the mileage this year? London will travel approximately 4400 miles and the Saints 4830. Which is a difference of about $150.

Ed. Holly, who was slated for the management of the Toronto Canadian League team, came over from Rochester Saturday to confer with J. J. McCaffery, the owner of the club, but they were unable to come to terms, and Holly returned to Rochester last night. Both parties declined to say anything for publication. Holly, it is known, is naturally loath to leave the International League for an organization of lower classification.

Peterborough Players In Southland

Several of Peterborough's last year's ball team are already hard at work. Harry Brant is training with the Chattanooga, Tenn., team in the Southern Association, and has a hard battle on his hands, as Manager McCormick has a veteran at every point in the infield. Balenti, the Indian infielder, formerly with St. Louis, is likely to catch the shortstop job, while Brant has to battle two others for the third base position.

Dave Hilliard is with the Cleveland American Association club, which is doing its spring training at Americus, Georgia. In a letter to a local friend the big fellow says that he is going well and that he expects to make good in fast company.

It is said that Ray Caldwell, the Yankee twirler, is in bad with Manager Chance. Reports from Houston are to the effect that Ray fell off the waggon and was set back fifty bones in the way of a fine.

Third Baseman Whitted of the St. Louis Cardinals is doing some nifty clubbing this Spring. He is credited with four hits in a recent game against the Athletes, in which the Cards trimmed the world's champs 8 to 0.

BOXING

Young Jack O'Brien is to try his hand as a referee in Philadelphia. If he makes good he will most likely hang up the mitts and watch the other fellows box.

Promoter Jim Coffroth of San Francisco is going to take a whirl with the wrestlers. Jim believes the time is ripe for a few contests between the star grapplers.

Jimmy Johnston of New York, who is acting as agent for Promoter "Snowy" Baker, has signed Fred Hocks, Young Mike Donovan, Jackie Clarke, Howard Morrow and Young Brown to go to Australia.

Pitcher Vean Gregg, the famous southpaw of the Cleveland Naps, has been performing in fine style in the practice games with the Boston Red Sox at Hot Springs.

Apple Blossoms.

The pretty apple blossom effect shown in one corner of the south window of R. Fair & Co's. store is the handiwork of Mrs. G. Langley of Water Street. The natural combination of colours in the blossoms and the manner in which they are distributed over the tree twigs is creditable to this lady's skill in this class of fancy work, in which she excels.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Senator McHugh, of Lindsay, is in the City to-day.

The many friends of Mrs. J. E. Sullivan, Simcoe street, will regret to learn of her very serious illness.

Dr. Caruthers will reserve the afternoon of the 3rd Wednesday of each month from 3 to 6 p.m., at her office room, Bank of Commerce Building, Hunter street, for those who wish to make social calls.

Mrs. A. E. Skitch of Trenton, and little baby, Dorothy, who have been spending the last three weeks with Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Skitch, Lindsay, has returned to Peterborough, on her way home to Trenton.

Mr. Joseph Bell, of Vancouver, B.C., is home on a visit to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Bell, Water street. Mr. Bell states that business is very dull in the West, but there is every evidence that it will pick up soon.

A very interesting event forming a significant feautre of the celebration of St. Patrick's Day, took place at the residence of Mr. Arthur J. McClellan, "The Firs," 494 Gilmour Street. It was the christening of his younger daughter, born on March 17th, 1913, and very appropriately the name given in baptism was Patricia.

Appreciation Of Programme At The Royal

To the Editor, Examiner:

Sir,—Will you allow me space in your valuable paper for a few word of appreciation. I do not spend much of my time at theatres. However, being attracted by the notice of the "Dream Doll," I attended the show last night at the Royal Theatre. I wish to express my high appreciation of the cleanliness of the programme of last night, much to the credit of the management. I particularly admired the "Dream Doll," which is of such refined cast.

Little Miss Charity, with her pretty face and sweet voice, is a charm in herself. She renders her part admirably, in showing the influence and power of the pure child thought in overcoming the animal nature in the so-called Adam or dust man. The closing scene, "I shall forgive you we must forgive if we would be forgiven," must leave the impress of good on every intelligent mind elevating it to higher ideals than the carrying out of human will. This play might be given in any sacred or church concert with good results. While we are passing through this stage of incessant amusement, it would be well to have more of this class of vaudeville, where young men and young women can go in and listen with profit. Thanks for space.—Yours, etc., R. J. TODD.

Buried in Her Wedding Gown

Special Wire to The Examiner:

McKEESPORT, Pa., March 17.—Harry Price, a young Canadian, to-day was the chief mourner at the funeral of Miss Bertha Milligan, a Toronto girl, who was to marry him this afternoon. She died of pneumonia, rather suddenly. She was buried to-day in her wedding gown.

LOSES AN EAR IN ACCIDENT

Had Head Out of Window of Moving Train—Collided With Cattle Shed

HEARING NOT AFFECTED

HAVELOCK, March 17. — Mr. Earnest Goddard, C.P.R. engineer, met with a painful misfortune on Friday last on his return trip from Smith's Falls to Havelock. It was while passing through Central Ontario Junction, he had his head out of the window while going past the cattle pens, which struck him on the head, almost severing one ear. Dr. Holdcroft was summoned, who had him removed to Miss Foley's Hospital, where his injuries were attended to, but it was found impossible to save the ear. Mr. Goddard is doing nicely, and it is thought that the hearing will not be affected by the operation.

MR. J. R. BELL OPENS A NEW STORE

The building known as the old Noble Temperance House has undergone a complete transformation. Where once the straggling old hostlery stood, two modern and up-to-date stores have taken its place. One of these will be occupied by J. R. Bell, the well known Hunter Street Grocer. Work on the building was started in the Fall, but was suspended during the extremely cold weather.

Some twelve tons of steel have been used in the structure, which ensures an absolute safe construction. The interior will be furnished with Walkerbin fittings of Mahogany finish, which are manufactured in Berlin. These will arrive this afternoon, and will be immediately installed. The whole interior of the store is being painted white. Mr. Bell expects to occupy his premises on Thursday next. Above the stores, five apartments have been arranged.

Heating System.

The hot-water system of heating is used throughout the building, and will necessitate the installation of thirty-eight radiators, comprising in all some 17,000 feet of radiation. Hardwood floors have been put in, and all modern improvements have been made.

Mr. Bell intends to call his store the Sanitary Grocery Store. The accommodation is all that could be desired.

The Standard Woollen Mills will open a branch store in Peterborough under the management of Messrs. Hourigan and McLean, in the premises which Mr. Bell will vacate within the next few days. This is an old established Canadian firm, and are conducting no fewer than fifteen business houses throughout the Dominion.

King Supports The Government

Special Wire to The Examiner:

LONDON, Eng., March 17. — (Special cable.)—It is stated to-day in the various Liberal clubs, and is given publicity in the newspapers, that the King has greatly modified the attitude on Ulster and the Home Rule question and that he considers the concessions offered by Asquith are ample for H requirements, and will give the government full support in any measure which may be necessary.

COMPENSATION BILL IS NOW BEFORE HOUSE

Special Cable to The Examiner:

TORONTO, Ont., March 17. — The long promised Workmen's Compensation Bill was introduced as a government measure in the Legislature this afternoon. Some of the main provisions are as follows: The compensation for total disability will be a weekly payment of fifty-five per cent. of the average wage per week for the past twelve months. The employees will not be called on to contribute to the funds directly or indirectly. In case of death there will be burial expenses of seventy-five dollars and an allowance of $20 per month where the widow is sole dependant, and five dollars additional for each child up to 16 years.

Clerks are included in the provisions, but farm hands are not. Farmers are the only employers exempted from the operation of the bill. The fund is to be administered by a board of three members appointed for ten years each. There will be no accident compensation until the worker is off, due to accident, for seven days or more.

Refused The Port Hope Offer

PORT HOPE, March 17. — Port Hope is still without a Chief of Police. Although it had been arranged to pass a by-law last night, appointing Sergeant Brown of Peterborough at a salary of $1000, the latter refused the offer over the telephone, stating that he had been granted an increase by the Peterborough Commissioners.

WEDDING BELLS

WOOD—BLACK.

The marriage of Mr. J. E. Wood took place last evening to Miss Christina Black. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. H. J. Keith at the home of the bride's parents, Chamberlain street west. The bridal couple were assisted by Mr. Alfred Jack and Miss Dorris Julia Wood, respectively.

Mr. and Mrs. Wood will reside on Western avenue.

THE EMBLEM OF IRELAND

For more than seven centuries of years
A martyr nation's emblem, stained red,
Bedewed with ocean depths of bitter tears,
Yet thou wouldst not disown it, Drooping Head.

They sought to win thee from thy heart's true love,
With honeyed words they wooed thee, All in vain.
For thou hadst pledged thy troth to Him above,
And earthly nuptials treated with disdain.

They offered thee the kingdoms of the earth,
But thou preferred the Shamrock and the Cross.
Thou wouldst not place a stranger at thy hearth,
For all the world's wealth of golden dross.

For this we love this emblem of our race,
This symbol of your fealty to God.
E'en though we ne'er have looked upon thy face,
Or kissed thes acred soil our fathers trod.

And as to-day we sport the chosen leaf
Before the Altar Throne where Jesus reigns.
Fast breaks the dawn o'er Erin's night of grief.
Our hearts are glad—and, yet, we loved the strains.

Vicisti, Erin, victory is thine.
The Light of Freedom is upon thy brow,
Through devious ways thou sought the Godhead Trine,
So, mother Erin, may thou seek Him now.

LONDON, MARCH 18.—Today being the birthday anniversary of Princess Louise (Duchess of Argyll), who was born at Buckingham Palace, March 18, 1848, the bells of St. George's Chapel, at Windsor, pealed merrily in honour of the event, and the customary royal salute was fired in the Longwalk.

VALUE OF RHEUM FROM THE COURT

Judge Barhorst Was Relieved of Rheumatism After Doctors Failed

If you have tried many other remedies and doctors' treatments for Rheumatism and found they failed, do not be skeptical about trying RHEUMA. Read the testimony of Judge John Barhorst of Fort Loraine, O.:

"After treatment by three doctors without result, I have been cured of a very bad case of Rheumatism by using two bottles of RHEUMA. It is now two years since I used the remedy, and I am still as well as ever. Previously, I was a cripple, walking with crutches."

Council Meeting.

The Council met this day, pursuant to adjournment, members all present, the Reeve in the chair. The minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed. There were a few accounts presented for payment, and being examined by the Council were found correct, and on motion of Alderman Lamb and Scott, the Reeve and Clerk were instructed to issue orders on the treasurer for the same.

Moved by Alderman Scott, seconded by Alderman Lamb, that the Municipal Council of the Corporation of the Village of Omemee, record with deepest regret the burning and destruction of the armouries in the village of Omemee, which deplorable accident occurred on the morning of Feb. 24th. They desire to express to the Honourable, the Minister of Militia and Defence, how greatly the residents of the village and the surrounding district appreciate the beenfit and advantage which the provision of the splendid building conferred upon them, and to give expression to the keen sense of deprivation its loss has caused. The Council desires to respectfully and earnestly urge upon the Minister that the building and its equipment be restored as soon as the work of reconstruction can be undertaken. W. H. Kennedy, Clerk; R. J. Mulligan, Reeve.

On motion of Aldermen Scott and Magee, the Council adjourned until the first Wednesday in April at 7.30 p.m.—Carried.

HOTELS ARE BURNED

Two Perish in Toronto Blaze and Four in Brechin

MEN SOUGHT TO SAVE DOG

TORONTO, March 18. — Two men were burned to death, one man was probably fatally injured, two men were seriously injured and $150,000 loss was caused in a fire which destroyed the Woodbine Hotel, one of Toronto's best-appointed and most modern hostelries, between 7.30 and 9 o'clock last night.

In an effort to save a valued bulldog that Max Cohen and Fred Levenson, both of New York, went back to their deaths after having been led to safety by Mr. Arthur Lee. The three injured are: Edmund S. Giles, Montreal, (probably fatally hurt); C. E. Edwards, New York, and Wm. Gra , assistant manag r of the hotel.

Mr. Lee, of 13 West 119th street, New York, occupied rooms on the third floor. The three men were sitting in Co' n's room when the smoke was noticed issuing through the cracks around the door. Mr. Lee, who was familiar with the hotel, immediately hurried to the hall and broke down the door of room 304. His friends followed him to the fire escape. Mr. Lee continued down the escape, but Cohen and Levenson remembered the dog and returned for it. That was the last seen of them until a search was pursued after the fire was brought under control and the charred remains of Cohen were found amongst the debris of the third floor with those of the dog. The body was taken to the morgue, and the search continued for the remains of Levenson, but at an early hour this morning they had not been recovered. However, there is no doubt that Levenson perished in the flames.

The finding of the body of Cohen was the sequel to a frantic search. It was only when the firemen made their final round to assure themselves that the fire was out that the ghastly discovery was made. During this search the valuable jewelry of Miss Elsa Ryan, leading woman with the "Peg o' My Heart" company at the Royal Alexandra Theatre, which had fallen from the third floor, was discovered intact in the basement. Several members of the company lost their entire belongings.

Edmund S. Giles, of Montreal, may be a third victim of the fire, as the injuries he sustained when he jumped from a second storey window were very extensive. Both his legs were fractured, and his back is thought to be broken. Mr. Giles was found lying on Pearl street in a semi-conscious condition. He was dressed only in his underclothes, and had apparently been unaware of the fire until it had gained such great headway that he was cut off from the fire escape, a short distance from his room. He was taken to the General Hospital.

The fire broke out at 7.30, and had made considerable headway before the guests who were mostly at dinner were aware of it. When the alarm was given men and women surged through the rooms and passages, up the stairs, shouting, crying, one or two women fainting, and before anyone was aware of it the fire engines drove up with clanging gongs, the escape ladders were against the walls, the firemen were in the building dragging the lengths of hose along, while the frantic guests rushed from room to room, corridor to corridor, striving to save their goods and chattels.

Four Perish in Brechin.

BRECHIN, March 18.—Four lives were lost when fire early yesterday, destroyed the Brechin Hotel. That more did not perish is due to the bravery of a boarder, Vic or Adair.

The dead are: Mrs. Thomas McAuley, aged about 40; an infant child; her six-year-old boy; and Miss Josephine Callaghan.

Thomas McAuley and three children were rescued and two young women servants, the Misses McInerney and Crosby, saved themselves by jumping from an upper window.

Adair was the first to become aware of the danger. He managed to get out. Then he broke open a back door and made his way to the room on the ground floor occupied by the proprietor and his wife and baby. McAuley was saved, but his wife was suffocated.

Meanwhile, neighbors had been aroused, and were able to save three children a girl, aged two, and a boy of 10, children of McAuley, and a boy of 10 who was visiting them, and who were sleeping upstairs.

Heavy Loss In Sarnia.

SARNIA, Ont., March 18. — Fire yesterday afternoon totally destroyed the plant and contents of the John Goddison Thresher Co. The loss, which is covered by insurance, is in the neighborhood of $250,000.

The cause of the fire is not known definitely, but it is believed to have started from a spark from a locomotive on the company's private switch. The flames were noticed first in the early afternoon, and for several hours the firemen fought to keep them under control and prevent them spreading to adjoining buildings.

HEAD GOT BALD IN PLACES

Very Itchy. When Brushed, Dandruff All Over. Hair Came Out in Great Bunches. Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment Cured Head in Three Weeks.

15 Hallam St., Toronto, Ont.—"About two years ago the dandruff began. My head got worse and scabs formed on it which made it bald in places. It was very itchy and gave me a tendency to scratch it which made it worse. I always had to wear my hat whether in the house at work or out. Whenever I brushed my hair it sent the dandruff all over. The hair came out in great bunches until I was nearly bald and when it was at its worst it came out roots and all.

"I tried —— which made it worse than before. I tried several things after that but they were no good. After nine months like this I had hardly any hair left when one day I happened to see the advertisement of Cuticura Soap and Ointment in the paper. I straightway sent for a sample. After first washing with the Cuticura Soap I applied some Cuticura Ointment and I could feel a great relief. After finishing the sample I went and got a cake of Cuticura Soap and a box of Cuticura Ointment. In three weeks they had cured my head." (Signed) B. Horn, May 16, 1913.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment do so much for poor complexions, red, rough hands, and dry, thin and falling hair, and cost so little, that it is almost criminal not to use them. A single set is often sufficient. Sold everywhere. For liberal free samples of each, with 32-p. book, send post-card to Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Dept. D, Boston, U. S. A.

SICK, SOUR STOMACH, INDIGESTION OR GAS

Take "Pape's Diapepsin" and in five minutes you'll wonder what became of misery in stomach

Wonder what upset your stomach—which portion of the food did the damage—do you? Well, don't bother. If your stomach is in a revolt; if sour, gassy and upset, and what you just ate has fermented into stubborn lumps; head dizzy and aches; belch gases and acids and eructate undigested food; breath foul, tongue coated—just take a little Pape's Diapepsin and in five minutes you wonder what became of the indigestion and distress.

Millions of men and women to-day know that it is needless to have a bad stomach. A little Diapepsin occasionally keeps this delicate organ regulated and they eat their favourite foods without fear.

If your stomach doesn't take care of your liberal limit without rebellion; if your food is a damage instead of a help, remember the quickest, surest most harmless relief is Pape's Diapepsin which costs only fifty cents for a large case at drug stores. It's truly wonderful—it digests food and sets things straight, so gently and easily that it is really astonishing. Please, for your sake, don't go on and on with a weak, disordered stomach—it's so unnecessary.

Borden Turns Pollution Problem Over to a Committee.

OTTAWA, March 18.—The House spent the greater part of the afternoon considering a resolution proposed by Hon. J. D. Hazen, Minister of Marine and Fisheries, which provided for the appointment of a committee to investigate the pollution of navigable waters.

Mr. Hazen in support of his resolution said that the committee which had considered the subject at the last session had not had time to finish its work. A conference had been held last fall, at which representatives from the various provinces had been present. Experts at that conference had recommended further consideration of the matter and he was therefore asking for the appointment of a new committee.

Hon. George P. Graham said that the appointment of the committee would put Mr. Bradbury's bill off until next session. In his opinion the Government was endeavoring to sidestep this important matter.

The Prime Minister said the question was a serious one, involving as it did not only the pollution of tidal waters, but also the pollution of international waters, and, therefore, the Government did not intend to act hastily in the matter.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier, who followed the Prime Minister, said that in his opinion a committee of the House was unnecessary. Parliament was competent to consider Mr. Bradbury's bill, and turning it over to a committee was simply wasting time.

W. F. Maclean (South York) declared that he agreed with the Government that the pollution of streams was a matter for Federal control. If towns polluted streams they should be prohibited from continuing to do so.

Hon. J. D. Hazen said that the clause in Mr. Bradbury's bill forbidding the discharge of sewerage into streams should be carefully considered. As the clause now stood, it forbade the discharge of sewerage into the ocean which was absurd, as it could not possibly do any harm.

The resolution then passed, and both Mr. Bradbury's bill and the Senate bill was referred to the new committee.

"THE MAYOR'S WIFE"

By ANNA KATHARINE GREEN

"But Mrs. Packard? She may not be a superstitious woman, yet—"

"Don't be fanciful, Miss Saunders. You will have to look deeper than that for the spell which has been cast over my wife. Olympia afraid of of creeks and groans? Olympia seeing sights? She's much too practical by nature, Miss Saunders, to say nothing of the fact that she would certainly have confided her trouble to me, had her imagination been stirred that way. Little things have invariably been discussed between us. I repeat that this possibility should not give you a moment's thought."

"That's her voice," he cried. "Whatever her trouble may be she has forgotten it for the moment. Excuse me if I join her. It is such pleasure to have her at all like herself again."

I longed to detain him, longed to put some of the numberless questions my awkward curiosity demanded, but his impatience was too marked and I let him depart without another word.

But I was not satisfied. Inwardly I determined to see him again as soon as possible and gain a more definite insight into the mysteries of his home.

CHAPTER IV

LIGHTS—SOUNDS.

I am by nature a thoroughly practical woman. If I had not been, the many misfortunes of my life would have made me so. Yet, when the library door closed behind the mayor and I found myself again alone in a spot where I had not felt comfortable from the first, I experienced an odd sensation not unlike fear. It left me almost immediately and my full reasoning powers re-asserted themselves; but the experience had been mine and I could not smile it away.

The result of a conviction, which even reason could not dispel, that whatever secret tragedy or wrong had signalised this house, its perpetration had taken place in this very room. It was a fancy, but it held, and under its compelling if irrational influence, I made a second and still more minute survey of the room to which this conviction had imparted so definite an interest.

I found it just as ordinary and unsuggestive as before; an old-fashioned, square apartment renovated and redecorated to suit modern tastes. Its furnishings I have already described; they were such as may be seen in any comfortable abode. I did not linger over them a moment; besides, they were the property of the present tenant, and wholly disconnected with the past I was insensibly considering. Only the four walls and what they held, doors, windows and mantel-piece, remained to speak of those old days. Of the doors there were two, one opening into the main hall under the stairs, the other into a cross corridor separating the library from the dining-raam. It was through the dining-room door Nixon had come when he so startled me by speaking unexpectedly over my shoulder! The two windows faced the main door, as did the ancient, heavily carved mantel. I could easily imagine the old-fashioned shutters hidden behind the modern curtains, and, being anxious to test the truth of my imaginings, rose and pulled aside one of these curtains only to see, just as I expected, the blank surface of a series of unslatted shutters, tightly fitting one to another with old-time exactitude. A flat hook and staple fastened them. Gently rising the window and lifting one, I pulled the shutter open and looked out. The prospect was just what I had been led to expect from the location of the room—the long, bare wall of the neighboring house. I was curious about that house, more curious at this moment than ever before; for though it stood a good ten feet away from the one I was now in, great pains had been taken by its occupants to close every opening which might invite the glances of a prying eye. A door which had once opened on the alley running between the two houses had been removed and its place boarded up. So with a window higher up; the half-circle window near the roof. I could not see from my present point of view.

Drawing back, I reclosed the shutter, lowered the window and started for my own room. As I passed the front stair-head, I heard a baby's laugh, followed by a merry shout, which, ringing through the house, seemed to dispel all its shadows.

I had touched reality again. Remembering Mayor Packard's suggestion that I might through the child find a means of reaching the mother, I paid a short visit to the nursery where I found a baby whose sweetness must certainly have won its mother's deepest love. Lotty, the nurse was of a useful but commonplace type, a conscientious nurse, that was all.

But I was to have a further taste of the unusual that night and to experience another thrill before I slept. My room was dark when I entered it, and, recognizing a condition favourable to the gratification of my growing curiosity in regard to the neighbouring house, I approached the window and stole a quick look at the gable-end where, earlier in the evening I had seen peering out at me an old woman's face. Conceive my astonishment at finding the spot still lighted and a face looking out, but not the same face, a countenance as old, one as intent, but of different conformation and of a much more intellectual type. I considered myself the victim of an illusion; I tried to persuade myself that it was the same woman, only in another garb and under a different state of feeling; but the features were much too dissimilar for such an hypothesis to hold. The eagerness, the unswerving attitude were the same, but the first woman had had a weak round face with pinched features, while this one showed a virile head and long heavy cheeks and chin, which one must have been full of character, though they now showed only heaviness of heart and the dull apathy of a fixed gaze.

Two women, total strangers to me, united in an unceasing watch upon me in my room! I own that the sense of mystery which this discovery brought struck me as being fully as uncanny and as unsettling as the idea of a spirit haunting walls in which I was destined for a while to live, breathe and sleep.

However, as soon as I had drawn the shade and lighted the gas, I forgot the whole thing, and not till I was quite ready for bed, and my light again turned low, did I feel the least desire to take another peep at that mysterious window. The face was still there, peering at me through a flood of coalight. The effect was ghastly, and for hours I could not sleep, imagining that face still staring down upon me, illuminated with the unnatural light and worn with a profitless and unmeaning vigil.

That there was something to fear in this house was evident from the halting step with which the servants, one and all, passed my door on their way up to their own beds. I now knew, or thought I knew, what was in their minds; but the comfort brought by this understanding was scarcely sufficient to act as an anti dote to the keen strain to which my faculties had been brought. Yet nothing happened, and when a clock somewhere in the house had assured me by its own clear stroke that the dreaded midnight hour had passed, I rose and stole again to the window. This time both moonlight and face were gone. Contentment came with the discovery. I crept back to bed with lightened heart and was soon asleep.

Next morning, however, the first face was against the window, as I at once saw on raising the blind. I breakfasted alone. Mrs. Packard was not down and the mayor had already left to fulfil an early appointment down-town. Old Nixon waited on me. As he, like every other member of the family, with the possible exception of the mayor, was still an unknown quantity in the problem given me to solve, I allowed a few stray glances to follow him as he moved decorously about the board anticipating my wants and showing himself an adept in his appointed task. Once I caught his eye and I half expected him to speak, but he was far too well trained for that, and the meal proceeded in the same silence in which it had begun. But this short interchange of looks had given me an idea. He showed an eager interest in me apart from his duty to me as waiter. He was nearer sixty than fifty, but it was not his age which made his hand tremble as he laid down a plate before me with coffee and bread. Whether this interest was malevolent or kindly I found it impossible to judge. He had a stoic's face with but one eloquent feature—his eyes; and these he kept studiously lowered after one quick glance. Would it help matters for me to address him. Possibly, but I decided not to risk it. Whatever my immediate loss I must on no account rouse the least distrust in this evidently watchful household. If knowledge came naturally, well and good; I must not seem to seek it.

The result proved my discretion. As I was rising from the table Nixon himself made this remark:

"Mrs. Packard will be glad to see you in her room up-stairs any time after ten o'clock. Ellen will show you where." Then, as I was framing a reply, he added in a less formal tones: "I hope you were not disturbed last night. I told the girls not to be so noisy."

Now they had been very quiet, so I perceived that he simply wanted to open conversation.

"I slept beautifully," I assured him. "Indeed, I'm not easily kept awake. I don't believe I could keep awake if I knew that a ghost would stalk through my room at midnight."

His eyes opened, and he did just what I had intended him to do,—met my glance directly.

"Ghosts!" he repeated, edging uneasily forward, perhaps with the intention of making audible his whisper: "Do you believe in ghosts?"

I laughed easily and with a ringing merriment, like the light-hearted girl I should be and am not.

"No," said I, "why should I? But I should like to. I should really enjoy the experience of coming face to face with a wholly shadowless being."

He stared now and his eyes told nothing. Mechanically I moved to go, mechanically he stepped aside to give me place. But his curiosity or his interest would not allow him to see me pass out without making another attempt to understand me. Stammering in his effort to seem indifferent, he dropped this quiet observation just as I reached the door.

"Some people say, or at least I have heard it whispered in the neighbourhood; that this house is haunted. I've never seen anything myself."

I forced him to give a tragic start (I was half ashamed of my acts), and, coming back, turned a purposely excited countenance toward him.

"This house!" I cried. "Oh, how lovely! I never thought I should have the good fortune of passing the night in a house that is really haunted. What are folks supposed to see? I don't know much about ghosts out of books."

This nonplussed him. He was entirely out of his element. He glanced nervously at the door and tried to seem at his ease; perhaps tried to copy my own manner as he mumbled these words:

"I've not given much attention to the matter, Miss. It's not long since we came here and Mrs. Packard don't approve of our gossiping with the neighbours. But I think the people have mostly been driven away by strange noises and by lights which no one could explain, flickering up over the ceilings from the halls below. I don't want to scare you, Miss——"

"Oh, you won't scare me."

"Mrs. Packard wouldn't like me to do that. She never listens to a word from us about these things, and we don't believe the half of it ourselves; but the house does have a bad name, and it's the wonder of everybody that the mayor will live in it."

"Sounds?" I repeated. "Lights?"—and laughed again. "I don't think I shall bother myself about them!" I went gaily out.

It did seem very puerile to me, save as it might possibly account for Mrs. Packard's mental condition.

Up-stairs I found Ellen. She was in a talkative mood, and this time I humored her till she had told me all she knew about the house and its ghostly traditions. This all had come from a servant, who had lived in the house before. Ellen herself, like the butler, Nixon, had had no personal experiences to relate, though the amount of extra wages she received had quite prepared her for them. Her story, or rather the nurse's story, was to the following effect:

The house had been built and afterward inhabited for a term of years by one of the city fathers, a well-known and widely-remembered merchant. No unusual manifestations had marked it during his occupancy. Not till it had run to seed and been the home of decaying gentility, and later of actual poverty, did it acquire a name which it made it difficult to rent, though the neighborhood was a growing one and the house itself well-enough built to make it a desirable residence. Those who had been induced to try living within its spacious walls invariably left at the end of the month. Why, they hesitated to say; yet if pressed would acknowledge that the rooms were full of terrible sights and sounds which they could not account for; that a presence other than their own was felt in the house; and that once (every tenant seemed to be able to cite one instance) a hand had touched them or a breath had brushed their cheek which had no visible human source, and could be traced to no moral presence. Not much in all this, but it served after a while to keep the house empty, while its reputation for mystery did not lie idle. Sounds were heard to issue from it. At times lights were seen glimmering through this or that chink or rift in the window curtain, but by the time the door was unlocked and people were able to rush in, the interior was still and dark and seemingly untouched. Finally the police took a hand in the matter. They were on the scent just then of a party of counterfeiters and were suspicious of the sounds and lights in this apparently unoccupied building. But they watched and waited in vain. One of them got a scare and that was all. The mystery went unsolved and the sign "To Let" remained indefinitely on the house-front.

At last a family from the West decided to risk the terrors of this domicile. The nurse, whose story I was listening to, came with them and entered upon her duties without prejudice or any sort of belief in ghosts, general or particular. She held this belief just two weeks. Then her incredulity began to waver. In fact, she saw the light; almost saw the ghost, certainly saw the ghost's penumbra. It was one night, or rather very early one morning. She had been sitting up with the baby, who had been suffering from a severe attack of croup. Hot water was wanted, and she started for the kitchen for the purpose of making a fire and putting on the kettle. The gas had not been lit in the hall—they had all been too busy, and she was feeling her way down the front stairs with a box of matches in her hand, when suddenly she heard from somewhere below a sound which she could never describe, and at the same moment saw a light which spread itself through all the lower hall so that every object stood out distinctly.

Was Confined To His Bed For Four Months With Rheumatism.

Mr. W. H. Riley, Ruddell, Sask., writes:—"It is with the greatest of pleasure that I can recommend Doan's Kidney Pills to all suffering with rheumatism. I was so bad with this terrible disease, I was unable to get up from my bed for four months, and nothing seemed to relieve me until a friend recommended Doan's Pills. I had my doubts about them, but was so desperate I would try anything suggested to me. After taking half a box I was able to get up, and after taking two boxes could get around quite well. After taking six boxes I was completely cured, and able to work for the first time in five months, and have not had a touch of rheumatism since. Anyone who saw me then would not know me now, as I am strong and active since taking your valuable medicine."

Doan's Kidney Pills help the kidneys to flush off the acid and poisonous impurities which have collected, and thus clean out the kidneys, and dispel the rheumatism from the system.

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50 cents per box, or 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

If ordering direct specify "Doan's."

FREE OF ALL THREE DISEASES

"Fruit-a-tives" Brought Him Perfect Health

Avon, Ont., May 14th, 1913.

"I am younger since I have been taking "Fruit-a-tives". I was troubled very badly with Piles, Constipation and Stomach Disorder, but I found "Fruit-a-tives" was the panacea for the whole three.

Now I am free of all these diseases and enjoying perfect health, and able to work whenever I like. Five years ago, I started taking "Fruit-a-tives". I took two every night and they worked wonders for me.

No other medicine I could get was so good and I took lots of different remedies before I found out how good "Fruit-a-tives" were.

I keep "Fruit-a-tives" on hand all the time, and am never without them. I even take them with me when I go motoring, so I can have them handy. "Fruit-a-tives" are worthy of every good word I can say about them. The fact that they cured me of Piles, was something to be everlastingly thankful for"

To the Woman Who Realizes She Needs Help

You are nervous. You have "crying spells." You are dejected. You don't sleep well. You have backache. You have lost ambition for your work. You are beginning to feel old and look old.

These symptoms, more than likely, are produced by some weakness or derangement.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription

CLOSE ENOUGH TO SMELL.

A coloured man approached a fish stand kept by another coloured man and asked:

"Got any fresh fish?"

"Does I has. What you think I'm selling? shoes?"

"Oh, I knows you's selling fish, but is dey fresh?"

"O' 'cose' dey's fresh. Ryah! quit smellin' o' dem fish."

"Oh, I ain't a-smellin' 'em."

"What you doin', den?"

"I's just whisperin' to 'em, dat's all."

"An' what you whisperin' to dem fish?"

"An' what dey say?"

"Dey say it's so long since dey seen 'em dat dey forgits. Yah, yah, yah!"

Improve Yourself.

If a man cannot improve himself, how can he improve others? What we see noble men we should think of emulating them. When we see evil characters we should turn our look inward and examine ourselves. Only he who has the most complete sincerity under heaven can transform and inspire others.

These Girls of Ours.

Just what is meant by autonomy for the Congo lies beyond ordinary comprehension, unless it is something that follows the autopsy.

If Greece and Turkey are going to begin a naval building war there will not be much left of either country except the mortgages.

All discussion regarding sanitary finger bowls could be avoided by carefully polishing the rim with a clean napkin before drinking.

A New Yorker with nine wives is charged with nonsupport. Unless he's a millionaire we should think the accusation reasonable.

Upside down dinners are the newest London fad. Occasionally careless professional tangoists introduce them in New York restaurants.

Grandma Never Let Her Hair Get Grey.

Kept Her Locks Dark, Thick, Glossy, With Sage Tea and Sulphur

When you darken your hair with Sage Tea and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it's done so naturally, so evenly. Preparing this mixture, though, at home is mussy and troublesome. For 50 cents you can buy at any drug store the ready-to-use tonic called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy." You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning all grey hair disappears, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully darkened, glossy and luxuriant. You will also discover dandruff is gone and hair has stopped falling.

Grey, faded hair, though no disgrace, is a sign of old age, and as we all desire a youthful and attractive appearance, get busy at once with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur and look years younger.

The Vegetable Caterpillar.

New Zealand's vegetable caterpillar is not vegetable at all. It is a grub about the length of the finger which has its habitat in friable mold at the roots of the rata vine. In many instances this grub, known to New Zealanders delectable by its Maori name, aweto, is infested by the spores of a fungus, Cordyceps (Sphaeria) robertsii. While the mycelium of this fungus is invading the tissues of the aweto it sends up a spore bearing stalk to the height of from four to eight inches just between the head and the first ring of the body of the grub. By the time the spores are ready to discharge the animal dies, and the whole body is found filled with vegetal material. The same spot of ground is the theater of a second drama of vegetable ferocity. While the fungus is destroying the insect at its roots the rata vine grows upward by twining about some type of less rapid growth and in the end strangles its support and maintains thereafter a tree existence of its own.

Created Genius.

Once upon a time the city of London had to pay a county rate, but this was legally abolished many years ago. A certain attorney, who had at one time been connected with local taxation, hit upon the brilliant idea of reviving this obsolete rate and turning the proceeds to his own use. He got his proper demand notes printed, distributed them in the usual fashion and the recipients paid up like lambs. The swindler had a regular office, a collector and all the usual accompaniments. It is said that he made over $15,000 a year, and no one ever thought of questioning the legality of the rate. If the cracked genius had been satisfied with a couple of years' profit and then quietly discontinued the collection of the rate the chances are that no one would ever have been any the wiser. But he was greedy and kept on year after year, until by chance a demand note fell into the hands of some one who knew.—Pearson's Weekly.

One Man Applauded.

Camille Saint-Saens was present when Verdi's "Hymn of All Nations" was rendered for the first time at the opening ceremonies of the world's fair in London, and he gave this reason for the "failure" of the composition: "The hymn was arranged to introduce the national anthem of the various countries, and, not knowing that the 'Marseillaise' was at that time in bad repute, it was used as representative of France. The Emperor Napoleon when he heard the strains turned pale, and the knowing ones in the audience were so greatly embarrassed that no one in the great throng dared applaud. Yes, one man did applaud, and that was I. Napoleon arose in his box and directed his opera glass toward me, and I looked at him through my glass. After a few moments the emperor hurriedly departed."

Gave Him a Christian Name.

Even the polyglot Syrian interpreter at the general postoffice admits that there are languages which would stump him. How would he have solved the problem once presented at the Hampstead Green postoffice and recorded in Baines' "On the Track of the Mail Coach?" Two ladies wanted to send a money order to a foreign tradesman in Oxford street. "What Christian name?" inquired the clerk. "He is a Turk and has none." "We must have a Christian name," the clerk insisted. "But you can't. He will merely sign 'Kotzamolles.'" "Oh, very well," decided the clerk. "That will do. Cut his name in two and make the order payable to 'Kotza Mollen.'" Solomon could not have done better.—London Chronicle.

The Parson's Soft Job.

"There is a prevalent idea among the criminal classes that the clergy have nothing whatever to do."

The authority for this statement is the archdeacon of London, who has three large prisons in his archdeaconry. An old woman once said to a jail chaplain: "I wish you could find a job for my old man. He is not up to much and cannot do anything, but he wants a soft job like yours!"—London Globe.

Willing to Take a Tip.

"Look here," said the sophomore's father, "how do you expect to do any studying if you're going to be out tearing around every night until 11 to 12 o'clock?"

"Dogmed if I know, dad. I wish you'd put your mind to work on the matter and let me hear from you if you succeed in working anything out."

APPLE PANCAKES.

Make a batter same as for the usual griddlecakes; then add some apple chopped fine and serve them with butter and sugar.

CHICKEN WITH RICE AND PEPPERS.

Put a layer of cooked rice in a baking-dish, dot with bits of cold left-over chicken, and strips of sweet green peppers, cover with rice, and repeat till the dish is full, pouring over the whole at least a cupful of chicken gravy or stock. Sprinkle the top with fine buttered crumbs, and bake 30 minutes.

HERMITS.

One egg, one cup of sugar, browned on the fire, one-half cup of butter, chopped raisins, one teaspoon soda, one teaspoon each of cinnamon and salt. Flour to make soft dough. Mix, cut in squares and bake in a moderate oven.

MEAT LOAF.

Chop together 1½ cups fresh beef that has a little fat and one medium-sized onion. Add 1½ level teaspoons salt, a little pepper, a dash of cayenne, three-quarters cup bread-crumbs, soaken in three-quarters cup milk, one beaten egg. Bake 30 to 50 minutes.

Shiloh 25¢

NA-DRU-CO

TASTELESS PREPARATION OF COD LIVER OIL

The Wonderful Spring Tonic

If you have had a hard winter, Na-Dru-Co Tasteless Preparation of Cod Liver Oil will help you to recuperate quickly and avoid the coughs and colds so prevalent during the changeable spring weather.

In this preparation the nutritive and curative properties of the best Norwegian Cod Liver Oil are combined with Hypophosphites, Cherry Bark and Malt Extract in a form that is really pleasant to take and easily digested even by the most delicate.

Thus the great objection to Cod Liver Oil is removed, and every one who is run down or suffering from throat or lung troubles can take advantage of its unique medicinal and strengthening qualities.

Add to this the Tonic Hypophosphites, the healing Cherry Bark and the invigorating Malt Extract, and you have probably the finest food-tonic known.

Nerves in Terrible Condition Would fall to Floor from sheer Exhaustion

"Your Medicine Helped When Doctors Failed"

Mrs. Edwin Martin, Ayer's Cliff, Que., writes:—"Before I began taxing Nerve Food I was in a terrible condition, dizzy spells came over me, and I would fall to the floor, and I could not as much as sweep the floor without fainting unless they took me out in the air. Now I can wash and work a lot, and your Medicine helped me when the Doctors failed. I felt as though it was a God-send to me.

I hope you will use my name wherever you like so that if there are any others suffering as I have done, they may be benefited by using your Medicine for it will do all it claims to do. I think it is the best of Medicines. Dr. Chase's Ointment is the best that can be had for Piles."

Restores Wasted Nerves

Few people realize what an important part the nerves play in the condition of the health, and many doctors feel helpless when the nerves go wrong because they do not understand diseases of the nerves or their treatment.

If you read the letters which appear in this paper almost daily from people who have been rescued from discouraging and distressing nervous diseases by use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, you will soon believe in the efficiency of this treatment.

When headaches, sleeplessness, irritability and nervousness make your life miserable, be warned of the approach of nervous prostration, paralysis and locomotor ataxia, and restore the feeble, starved nerves by using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. No treatment is so certain to benefit you. 50 cents a box, 6 for $2.50. All dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Write for booklet.

STRAY TOPICS FROM LITTLE OLD NEW YORK

The wardens and attendants at the city prisons are acquainted with about all the tricks resorted to in the smuggling of opium, morphine and other forms of "dope" to the prisoners. But a new one was sprung on the gatekeeper at the Tombs the other day, when a woman called to see her husband, who was a prisoner. The woman's conduct excited the gate-keeper's suspicions and he called the matron, who took the woman to a private room and made a thorough search of her clothing. The search did not confirm the gatekeeper's suspicions, but as the woman was about to leave the matron noticed something peculiar about her hat-pin. It was found that a fountain pen cap had been placed over an ordinary black bead head. Removing this, the matron found inside a quantity of whitish powder, which the Tombs physician said was morphine.

Mrs. Emma B. Kennedy, widow of the multi-millionaire philanthropist, who gave so much of his estate to missions, has arranged to start ten days hence on a world tour of inspection of the various missionary enterprises in which she and her husband were so deeply interested. She has chartered the yacht Alberta for her cruise, which will last several months. The yacht will sail for the Mediterranean, and at Rome Mrs. Kennedy will visit the new Waldensian Church, which she recently gave in memory of her father. At Constantinople one of the longest stops will be made to visit Robert College, to which Mr Kennedy left $2,000,000, and the Bible House, which he also remembered. Mrs. Kennedy will visit the American Board School at Smyrna and the Syrian Protestant College at Beirut. She will be accompanied on the trip by a number of guests, among them Rev. J. H. Jewett, Pastor of the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church, and Mrs. Jewett.

This is the liveliest Lenten season New York has ever known. If society has made repouncement of the pomps and vanities of the world during the forty days of sackcloth and ashes, there certainly is little outward evidence of it. While formerly in some of the churches to dance during Lent was regarded as a sin, and many abstained from such gayety as religiously as a lesser number kept the fast days, the present season sees little apparent diminution in the dancing craze. Managers of tea dances and dinner dances and supper dances and cabaret performances report that their patronage has not fallen off because of Lent. The big hotels are continuing their dinner dances as usual right through the Lenten season, and in addition many of them have private dances and other entertainments booked for several nights each week.

A TRICK OF THE IMAGINATION

It's bleak enough from the winder here—
The fields an' medders a-rollin' white
Across the West an' stretchin' clear
Beyond my vision an' out o' sight;
Ferlorn an' dreary an' dark an' sad—
It's odd how beauty an' all forsakes it,
An' yit I suppose that it's good or bad
Dependin' on how a feller takes it.

Imagination can do a lot!
It puts your dreams an' your heart in tune.
Then close your eyes an', as like as not
The Winter's grey is the gold of June;
The lonesome white an' the barren trees
Are daisy patches an' beds o' roses—
The sighin' wind is the drone of bees
That wax their wings in the garden posies!

The old peg-latch on the door, that knocks
Against the sill when the blizzard plays,
Is nothin' at all but the hollyhocks
That brush the door in the summer days;
The harvest field is a-waitin' still—
To-morrow's hopes is in twilight's keepin'—
The snowbird humped on the winder sill
Is only a dadburned cricket "cheepin'."

It's bleak enough from the winder shore—
The fields an' medders a-rollin' white,
Yet good or bad, as I said before,
Dependin' on all a feller's sight;
Fergit your chills an' your swelled up nose
An' all of the winter ills that hound y'—
Jist set by the winder an' nod an' dose

For the Children

Two Merry Little Tots Make a Sled Do Double Duty.

© by American Press Association.

With the opening of the new year winter has come in earnest, and the young folks welcome it gladly—if not winter, at least the things that winter brings, skating and coasting and snowballs and good times in the nursery while rain and sleet beat upon the windowpane. Hardly any one likes the slush and sleet, but it isn't a very vigorous boy or girl who doesn't delight in the dry, bracing cold, the kind of weather that sends the red blood into your cheeks and makes you feel as though you could keep on romping and playing forever. That's the kind of weather we want, and that's the kind of weather that's good for us too. So the young people in the picture think, anyway, if the expressions on their faces is to be believed. The two are Rosemary Phelps Dodge and Henry B. Guthrie, Jr., and they were snapped the other day in Central park, New York city.

About the Flamingo.

Among the thousands of species of tropical and other birds noted for their beauty the flamingo is certainly the most curious and picturesque. The rosy plumage of the adult is magnificent, while the long neck, the legs and the beak are out of all proportion to the body.

The flamingo is the only member of the stork tribe which builds a mud nest. The foundation is often laid in fifteen inches of water, and the structure rises above the surface, a pile of no mean size. Some remote and desolate spot is chosen, and here hundreds of birds build their nests and rear their young. Most of the nests hold two eggs, some only one. The incubation of these is delayed so long that before they are hatched the water has dried up, leaving the nests as mounds of mud and fiber along the edge of the lake. On the top of the nest the parent sits with her long legs doubled up and projecting behind her for some distance beyond the tail. The egg, which has a greenish blue shell, is protected by an outer thick, chalky coat, which can be removed.

The plumage of the young flamingo is white with brown touches, and the bill is nearly straight. The characteristic crooked beak of the adult does not appear till the bird has almost attained maturity. Flamingos can walk, swim or fly, but they are never so happy as when wading knee deep in water. Equatorial Africa is the home of the grander variety of these birds.

Brewing Ale at Schools.

Not the least interesting feature of Winchester College, England, is the magnificent cellar in which are stored barrels of good home-brewed ale. At one time, says a correspondent of "Country Life," the beer was brought up into the hall in black leather jacks, and the college grew on what is now the playing ground its own hops, but never enough to meet the total demand. An authority of 1769 says that there were brewed yearly at Winchester College about 320 hogsheads of small beer, valued at the rate of 12s. 3d. per hogshead. Some idea of what was considered necessary space for the beer of the college in the days when beer was the only drink may be gathered from the fact that the cellar is 50 by 24 feet

HAD INDIGESTION.
Almost Despaired of Ever Getting Well.

When your food has not been properly digested, your body has not received the benefit it should. The exertions of the gastric juice have been confined entirely to removing the unmasticated, undigested portions of food, which they cannot properly digest as speedily as possible from the body, therefore only giving the blood a small percentage of nourishment with which to feed the tissues. No wonder then that Indigestion and Dyspepsia attack the stomach. No medicine can surpass Burdock Blood Bitters as a cure for this particular disease. It regulates the bowels, promotes perfect digestion, makes pure blood, tones the stomach, and thus restores perfect health to the debilitated system.

Mrs. Mary MacKay, Hunter's Mountain, N.S., writes:—"I was troubled with Indigestion for more than ten years. I tried several Doctor's medicines claiming the power to cure, but all without success. Having heard of the many cures effected by Burdock Blood Bitters, I decided to give it a trial. After taking two bottles I was completely cured. My appetite which was very poor, is now good, and I can eat most everything without any disagreeable feelings. I can strongly recommend B.B.B. to anyone suffering from Indigestion."

The Dinner Hostess.

It is imperative that the dinner hostess be ready and unruffled by haste, a little ahead of the time set for her guests to arrive. If civility counts at all, one's guests are usually on time. It is proper to wait a few moments for the late comers. The rule laid down by a clever hostess in London some years ago was: "To wait dinner five minutes for an earl and countess, ten minutes for a duke and duchess and fifteen minutes for the Prince and Princess of Wales. The king is never late." Which proves the great of the earth are punctual in keeping their engagements.

It is not kind nor proper to spoil a good dinner for many guests because of the late arrivals of the few. It is proper to announce dinner five minutes after the arrival of the last guest—unless we adopt the American fashion of having cocktails served in the drawing room before dinner. Then dinner is announced five minutes after that little ceremony is over. The conservative part of the world of fashion follow the foreign idea and omit the cocktail. The wines are usually very simple—a good white wine and champagne with the dessert and fruit. The men linger over the wines and nuts a very short time today.

The table linen may be as elaborate as the pocketbook permits. Yet the dictates of good form point to the less trimmed cloth, a fine damask or linen hemstitched with napkins to match. The napkins are large and square, with the initials embroidered in the center, and folded in three parts.

The decorations in glass and silver are less ostentatious. The glassware is now of rock crystal and the tumbler for water—cooled, not iced—has a tall, slender stem, the wine glasses and champagne glass the same shape in miniature.

The display of knives and forks is reduced to a mere nothing today. The old time bewildering glitter was too formidable—it spoiled our dinner by suggesting "too much for digestion's sake."

The number of plates is also reduced. A guest should never be without a plate before him. "The little aperitif" is on a small plate resting in a larger one, and when removed a dinner plate is at once placed in front of the guest and removed as the plate upon which the soup plate rests is put before the guest. Another plate is substituted for the entire course in the same way. It is very simple, and the only rule is there should not be a vacant place in front of the guest. A plate should always be there.

A little block of bread or "petit pain" is put by the napkin to be used as a convenience in managing wilful tidbits which evade the fork, with a gentle but decided coercion.

Finger bowls of rock crystal, with a little plate to match, and a pretty lace doily under the bowl are brought in with the dessert plates at a home dinner, and with the plates for fruits and bonbons at a more formal affair. The water in the bowls should be warmed just enough to take the chill off, and a bit of lemon should be added to the water, which should cover the first joint of the fingers.

Good Form in Posing.

Have you ever sat in a restaurant and looked around at the various tables occupied by pretty women and then dropped your eyes to the floor and scrutinized the position of their feet? What a shock awaits you, for the average woman assumes the most grotesque of positions when she sits herself down in a chair—or, rather, her feet take on the weirdest attitudes that any one could imagine. For instance, she may be sitting correctly from the waist upward—the acme of grace as far as the upper part of her body is concerned—but her feet are twisted and curled around the legs of the chair in a way that suggests a contortionist, or if this is not the case perhaps she has placed her pedal extremities on the floor with the toes turned in until one suspects her of being pigeon toed.

Why is it that so few women can make their feet behave? And why do the many who walk with the greatest amount of grace lose all their charm the minute they sink into a chair? The correct sitting position is not difficult, and any woman can learn to assume it with a little care and practice.

When sitting down, whether at a restaurant table, in an easy chair or in a public place, do not forget that the feet should be placed squarely on the floor, the heels touching or very nearly touching, the knees not too far apart. This position is just as comfortable as any of the grotesque attitudes assumed when crossing the knees, curling the feet around the rungs of the chair or one of the hundred and one other ungraceful modes of sitting indulged in by so very many women.

How often have you seen a pretty girl destroy all her grace and charm by slouching down into a chair. She was quite unconscious of the impression she was creating, and only carelessness was responsible for this awkward pose. And yet many girls are just as careless and just as awkward and willfully destroy all their repose [illegible]

Yearn For Food: Don't Spurn It

Unless you have a real hearty desire for food you should by all means take no chances of stomach trouble, for a loss of appetite means a signal of distress from a deranged digestion.

When the stomach wants food it signals the mind through the nerves, and these excite the taste buds in the mouth which at once secrete large quantities of saliva. This is called "mouth water," and all of us know when our "mouths water" we want food.

"There's an appetite that Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets gave me."

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets very quickly restore appetite by making the stomach want food. The stomach readily recovers from indigestion, dyspepsia, etc., as soon as it is enabled to digest food. Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets taken after each meal quickly digest that meal and thus wonderfully rest the stomach.

In a short time the digestion assumes its normal condition and then appetite—and a good appetite, too—is the natural consequence. One may, actually finding a few Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, place them in a glass tube with meat, grains, vegetables, etc., and these tablets will digest the contents of the tube without aid.

Just think then how quickly and efficiently they act when they are mixed with the food in one's system and what a great relief it is to the digestive apparatus to have its fluids so enriched.

Go to your druggist to-day and obtain a 50-cent box and make the actual test yourself after you have eaten a large and hearty meal.

THE UGLIEST MAN.

Lagunga is a Congo chief who is rated as the ugliest man on earth. But it is said that he might have had to with draw his claim to that distinction could he have met John James Heidegger London court favourite and manager of the opera, in the early part of the eighteenth century. Mrs. Delaney described him as "the ugliest make ever formed," and by way no proof of it she he challenged Lord Chesterfield to produce a more hideous face in London. A woman was found who ran him very close, but when Heidegger put on his head-dress he was unanimously pronounced to be the winner.

Home Face Peeling Becomes Popular

No complexion treatment yet discovered seems to have become so generally and so immediately popular as the mercolized wax process. Evidently the reason is that this method actually gets rid of a bad complexion, which can hardly be said of any other. To temporarily hide or bleach the defective skin with cosmetics, cannot compare with the effect of literally removing the skin itself. Mercolized wax takes off the offending surface skin in fine little particles, a little at a time, until there's none of it left. The new complexion that produced exhibits a healthy glow and girlish beauty obtainable in no other way. This wax which you can get at your druggist's, is applied at night in the same way you use cold cream, and washed off next morning.

Here is one thing that actually does remove wrinkles, removes them quickly and at trifling cost: Powdered saxolite, 2 oz., dissolved in ½ pt. witch hazel. Use as a face bath.

Britain Will Take Every Chance of Naval Holiday

MR. CHURCHILL ON DEFENCE

LONDON, March 18. — (Via Reuter's Ottawa Agency.) — Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, in his address accompanying the presentation of the naval budget, referred to the absence of three Canadian ships from the British naval program. He said that the Government proposed to place in the Mediterranean in 1915 a battle squadron of eight ships, six of which would be Dreadnoughts, or Lord Nelsons, centred on Malta. They would make the British forces in the Mediterranean eight ships and four large armored cruisers. He pointed out that in order to do this and maintain the indispensable margin of security in home waters it was necessary in the absence of three Canadian Dreadnoughts to accelerate three ships. That was sufficient to maintain the force he had mentioned from the end of 1915 to the middle of 1916. As the Canadian ships were not yet forthcoming, it was necessary to repeat, though on a smaller scale, the course adopted in 1912, and to begin two ships in the 1914 program so as to have them ready by the third quarter of 1916.

The Government was not without hope, however, that Canada would meet her share in naval defence. Canada was a great and wealthy community, with interests ever spreading more widely over the surface of the globe. She had to make some provision for her own naval defence. If the were enacted to the United States she would no doubt contribute, through taxation, to the upkeep of the United States navy. If she were independent, she would have to make provision at least equal to the most powerful American state. He did not wonder at all that Canadians of every party thought it was not consistent with the dignity and status of the Dominion that she should depend upon the British taxpayers, who was often much less well off than the average Canadian.

Mr. Churchill affirmed that on the general question of Canadian ships and the propriety and need for Canada, in common with other Dominions, to take an effective part in the defence of the Empire, there was nothing more to be said. The Admiralty view had been expounded in the Canadian memorandum, to which the Admiralty adhered, and the facts had been strengthened by the passage of time. They contain an absolute justification of the Canadian action thereafter.

In dealing with the naval estimates for 1914-15, amounting to $267,750,000, he said:

"Every delay, accidental or deliberate, by the next strongest power to Britain will be matched by us."

Admitting that the naval estimates were the largest that had ever been submitted to the House the First Lord gilded the pill by making the prediction that in the absence of any new departure the estimates for 1915-16 would be substantially lower than the present ones, which show an increase of $12,700,000 over those of last year.

Mr. Churchill reiterated that it was the policy of Great Britain to complete eight battle squadrons by the time Germany had established five, without calculating ships on foreign stations. He explained that the development of the German fleet had not been as rapid as had been anticipated owing to difficulties in manning the vessels. Great Britain, therefore, had been enabled to postpone the completion of her Gibraltar squadron, which now consists of only four battleships.

Simply get an ounce of othine, double strength, from your druggist, and a few applications should show you how easy it is to rid yourself of freckles and get a beautiful complexion. The sun and winds of February and March have a strong tendency to bring out freckles, and as a result more othine is sold in these months. Be sure to ask for the double strength othine, as this is sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove the freckles.

EARL NEARLY DIED

Made Strong by Vinol.

So many cases like this are coming to our attention for the benefit of fathers and mothers of weak, sickly, ailing children in this vicinity, we publish the following letter:

Mrs. J. P. Weatherford, Litchfield, Ill., says: "We have had an invalid child for the past nine years and until we began using Vinol, we sometimes thought there was little hope for him. He would have terrible coughing spells at night, and they would leave him so exhausted. We tried everything, but to no avail. At last some one suggested that we try Vinol, and we noticed a change in him from the very first. The coughing spells ceased and he gained in strength right along. We would not be without it and would advise parents who have frail and weakly children to try Vinol."

This is because the child needed the strengthening cod liver elements and the tonic iron that Vinol contains. No oil, delicious taste. Children love it. We give back your money if Vinol does not benefit. McDermid & Jury, druggists, corner George and Charlotte Streets; also Payne's drug store, corner George and Simcoe Streets.

BILL IS INTRODUCED.

Workmen's Compensation Measure Very Little Changed.

TORONTO, March 18.—The Workmen's Compensation Bill was brought down in the Ontario House last night and given its first reading. Hon. I. B. Lucas, M.P.P., its sponsor, explained that while some of the bill's machinery might be open to criticism, its principles could not, and it was a measure whose necessity had long been realized in Ontario.

"The bill is too serious a matter to be made a political issue in this House," said Mr. Lucas. "We are now taking the plain path of duty in presenting this bill. I think labor and manufacturing interests have alike agreed that the present protection of workers is inadequate.

"The vital point of the whole bill is that these risks should be compensated by the interests, and it is not a question of personal negligence. The risks must be paid for. That, I think, is recognized by all."

Mr. Rowell then spoke. "We are able to agree to a remarkable degree with the Government upon this bill. We think it is one of the most important measures that has ever come before this Legislature, and certainly concur heartily in the proposal that it should be considered entirely free from political bias."

The demands of the C. M. A. on the one hand and those of the Labor men on the other will be practically compromised in the bill although the measure follows closely the draft bill submitted to the Government several months ago. The clause in the bill covering permanent total disability calls for a weekly payment to the injured, equal to a percentage of the average weekly earnings for the previous twelve months, or for a lesser period under the employer. The rate fixed is 55 per cent. Deduction of part of wages as premiums to insure against liability is, at the demand of the labor men, made illegal. The only employers exempt from the bill are farmers.

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES.

The latest estimates of loss of life in the storm over the Sea of Azov places the casualty list at 1,200.

The Duke of Connaught has no intention of visiting the Yukon this year, as reported in English newspapers.

Elizabeth Ruth, Countess of Devon, died yesterday at Cholteenham. The countess celebrated the century of her birth on March 12.

A violent storm broke down the embankment along the River Scheldt, near Termonde, Belgium, yesterday, and the greater part of the city was flooded.

The visit to England of Sir Lionel Carden, the British Minister to Mexico, was not in any way due to representations on the part of any foreign power, said Sir Edward Grey.

Advices from Alaska report that Rev. Harry Fo., the Anglican missionary, had been in touch with Stefansson's white Eskimos. There are two Catholic priests also there.

Senator Townsend, of Michigan, yesterday addressed the U. S. Senate advocating a deep waterway from the Great Lakes to the Atlantic through the Welland Canal and the St. Lawrence river.

Two hundred and fifty Wellesley, Mass., students and 100 other persons, including members of the faculty and maids, fled for their lives when fire destroyed College Hall. The loss is $1,500,000.

Yoshida, said to have been the intermediary between officials of the German electrical firm of Siemens and Schuckert Co. and Japanese naval officials, committed suicide in Tokio in prison yesterday.

Hundreds Were Tortured.

PEKIN, March 18.—Reports have been received from missionaries describing the ravages of White Wolf's band. Fifteen hundred inhabitants of Lao Howchow, Hupeh Province, have been killed, and four hundred subjected to tortures to compel them to disclose hidden treasures. Many women and girls have been mutilated or murdered. Property to the value of millions of dollars has been looted.

Death Lurked in Lights.

CALGARY, Alta., March 18.—Extra high voltage caused the deaths of two men in different parts of the city, and created a small panic, allayed only by the closing down of the high voltage lines, putting a portion of the city in darkness.

The dead are: William Woods, stableman, married, aged 40; Charles Cotter, baker, aged 20.

The injured are: James Thomas, baker's helper, hand burned; Robt. Taylor, boy, hand and foot burned, may be maimed for life.

ONE CAN'T CALCULATE.

Beauchamp Arrested in Church—Tragedy in Foucault's Home.

MONTREAL, March 18.—Fashions have changed since mediaeval days, when a church meant sanctuary to a fugitive from justice. Yesterday morning Joseph Beauchamp, alleged leader of the three bandits sought for the last six days for the murder of Constable Gourdeau and the attempted murder of Constable Guyon, crept from cover, footsore and starving, into St. Vincent de Paul Church, where he joined the mourners at an early funeral service, not to pray, but to rest. Here, with a serious charge hanging over him and a price of $1,000 on his capture, he was recognized and, unsuspecting, was seized, disarmed and handcuffed by Constable Choquette, who had come to attend the obsequies of his niece.

Beauchamp, who was taken by surprise, but too weak to resist, had two loaded revolvers on him. He said he had had nothing to eat since Thursday but a handful of chestnuts.

The fact that the infant child of Foucault was dying, the police thought, would attract the wanted man to his home. It was tipped off to the police that he had visited the child, and a rush was made to the house. When the police broke in they found Mrs. Foucault walking the floor with the child in her arms, and when it was examined it was found to be dead. No sign of Foucault was to be found.

MAY HAVE TO RESIGN.

French Ministry In Sore Straits Because of Murder.

PARIS, March 18.—The fall of the French Cabinet is generally regarded as likely to be brought about by the assassination Monday night of Gaston Calmette, editor of The Figaro, by Madame Caillaux, wife of the Minister of Finance.

Premier Doumergue conferred with President Poincare at the Palace of the Elysee, and a Cabinet Council was called for later in the day. It was then decided to remain in office despite the resignation of Caillaux.

It was conceded by members of all parties who discussed the situation yesterday in the lobbies of the Chamber of Deputies that the shooting of M. Calmette would probably have far-reaching effects on French politics. It was recognized that M. Caillaux had been the creator of the present French Cabinet and was its guiding spirit. As he had offered his resignation, it was pointed out, the Cabinet was no longer in a position to uphold its announced policies.

KELPHALDOL

CURES PAIN; BUT DOES NOT AFFECT THE HEART.

First of all it may be well to mention that "Kephaldol" is the prescription of one of the world's greatest nerve specialists — the famous Herr Doctor Stohr of Vienna, Austria.

He has used "Kephaldol" in his private practice and hospital clinics, in thousands of cases of Headaches, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Sciatica, Neuritis, La Grippe and other forms of Nerve Exhaustion.

The mere fact that Dr. Stohr originated "Kephaldol" is the only recommendation needed by most physicians and surgeons to commend the formula to their attention.

"Kephaldol" is the only pain-relieving remedy used by Dr. Stohr, because it is the only one that does not affect the heart or other organs, and may be taken with perfect safety until a complete cure results.

"Kephaldol" Tablets may be obtained at most drug stores in 50 cent tubes, or they will be sent on receipt of price by Kephaldol Limited, 31 Latour Street, Montreal.

HOMESEEKERS' EXCURSIONS; COLONIST FARES AND SETTLERS' TRAINS TO THE WEST.

Those taking advantage of above excursions, should bear in mind the many exclusive features offered by the Canadian Pacific Railway in connection with a trip to the West. It is the only all-Canadian Route. Only line operating through trains to Western Canada. No change of depots. Only line operating through standard and Tourist sleepers to Winnipeg and Vancouver. All equipment is owned and operated by the Canadian Pacific Railway, affording the highest form of efficiency.

Colonist fares, (one way second class) to certain points in Alberta, British Columbia, California, Montana, Oregon, Washington, Arizona, Idaho, etc., in effect March 15th to April 15th.

Homeseekers' fares will be in effect each Tuesday until October 27th, inclusive, and round trip second class tickets will be sold via the Canadian Pacific Railway from Ontario points (Azilda and East) West at very low fares, for example, from Toronto, also west and north of Toronto to Winnipeg and return, $35, to Edmonton and return, $43. Other points in proportion. Fares from points east of Toronto, will be slightly higher. Return limit two months.

Each Tuesday until April 28th, the Canadian Pacific will run Settlers' trains to Winnipeg and West, and for the accommodation of settlers travelling with live stock and effects, a colonist car will be attached to the settlers' effects train. This car will leave Toronto on regular train at 10:20 p.m. and on arrival at West Toronto, it will be attached to Settlers' effects train, as mentioned above.

For those not travelling with live stock and effects, special Colonist cars will be attached to regular trains from Toronto, running through to Winnipeg without change. No charge is made for accommodation in Colonist cars.

Tourist Sleeping cars are also operated on regular trains leaving Toronto to 10:20 p.m. daily.

FORCE FOR FORCE.

Redmond Promises To Meet Ulster With Her Own Weapons.

LONDON, March 18.—John Redmond, leader of the Irish Nationalist party, presided over the Irish Nationalist banquet here last night, and in responding to the toast, "Ireland, a Nation," said: "In a few short weeks in the absence of a political earthquake the Home Rule Bill will be a law of the land, probably in precisely the form in which it now stands."

"Speaking for myself and my colleagues, and I believe, the Irish nation," Mr. Redmond continued, "these principles are our last word. Beyond them one inch we cannot, and we will not go. If force is interposed, that force will be met with force. The party of the democracy of this country will be all the stronger because Nationalist Ireland has shown that it has been willing to make great sacrifice for peace."

How To Destroy The Dandruff Germ

BY A SPECIALIST.

That the dandruff germ is responsible for nearly all the diseases to which the scalp is heir, as well as for baldness and premature grey hair, is a well known fact, but when we realize that it is also indirectly responsible for many of the worst cases of catarrh and consumption, we appreciate the importance of any germ that will destroy its power. We, therefore, particularly pleased to have herewith the prescription which we believe ourselves states has found for repeated tests, to completely destroy the dandruff germ in from one to three applications. It will also almost immediately stop falling hair and in from in numerous cases produced a new hair growth after years of baldness. This prescription can be made up at home or any druggist will put it up for you: 4 ounces Bay Rum, 2 ounces Lavoris to Compound, one-half drachm Menthol Crystals. Mix thoroughly, and after standing half an hour it is ready for use. Apply night and morning, rubbing into the scalp with the finger-tips. If you wish it perfumed, add 1 drachm of your favourite perfume. While this preparation is not a dye it is unequalled for restoring grey hair to its original colour.

FRUIT LAXATIVE, IF COSTIVE, BILIOUS, HEADACHY—"CALIFORNIA SYRUP OF FIGS"

Best liver and bowel regulator for mamma, daddy and children

If you're headachy, constipated, bilious or stomach is disordered, and you want to enjoy the nicest liver and bowel cleansing you ever experienced, take a tablespoonful of "California Syrup of Figs" to-night and in the morning all the constipation poison, bile and clogged-up waste will gently move out of the system without griping and you will feel splendid.

Every member of the family should use this fruit laxative as occasion demands. It is just as effective for grandpa as it is for baby. It simply can not injure. Even cross, sick, feverish children just love its pleasant taste and mothers can rest after giving it, because it never fails to effect a good "inside cleansing."

For thirty years "California Syrup of Figs" has been recommended by physicians as the ideal stomach, liver and bowel cleanser. Millions of families who are well informed use nothing else, but recently there has come a flood of spurious fig syrups, so we warn the public to ask plainly at drug stores for a 50 cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," and see that it is prepared by "California Fig Syrup Company." We make no cheaper size. Hand back any "counterfeit" with contempt.

SETTING FIRE TO RACE TRACKS.

Trouble Over Poolroom Information Given as Cause.

BALTIMORE, March 17.—In an official report by State Fire Marshal Meyers on the fire which wiped out the Havre de Grace race track stands he states that incendiarism was the cause.

The report declares that in 1907 the Chicago opposition to certain interests furnishing information to poolrooms arose between rival parties in Chicago and New York. As a result the Hamilton, Ont., stand was dynamited and set fire to because persons sending out race news were arrested.

Two attempts were made on the Jacksonville, Fla., track in 1910, Buenos Vista was destroyed at Salt Lake City in 1911 and Anaconda, Mont., burned in 1913 and dynamited and fire were used at Havre de Grace in the same year.

The Ohio and Pennsylvania League has been reorganized and the name changed to the Pennsylvania and West Virginia League. McKeesport, Beaver Falls, Butler, Connellsville, Uniontown and Charleroi, in Pennsylvania, and Fairmount and Clarksburg, West Virginia, form the new circuit.

CLOGGED NOSTRILS OPEN AT ONCE, HEAD COLDS AND CATARRH VANISH

In One Minute Your Stuffy Nose and Head Clears, Sneezing and Nose Running Cease, Dull Headache Goes.

Try "Ely's Cream Balm."

Get a small bottle anyway, just to try it—Apply a little in the nostrils and instantly your clogged nose and stoped-up air passages of the head will open; you will breathe freely; dullness and headache disappear. By morning! the catarrh, cold-in-head or catarrhal sore throat will be gone.

End such misery now! Get the small bottle of "Ely's Cream Balm" at any drug store. This sweet, fragrant balm dissolves by the heat of the nostrils; penetrates and heals the inflamed, swollen membrane which lines the nose, head and throat; clears the air passages; stops nasty discharges, and a feeling of cleansing, soothing relief comes immediately.

Don't lay awake to-night struggling for breath, with head stuffed; nostrils closed, hawking and blowing. Catarrh or a cold, with its running nose, foul mucous dropping into the throat and raw dryness is distressing but truly needless.

Put your faith—just once—in "Ely's Cream Balm" and your cold or catarrh will surely disappear.

MAGNETITE ARC LAMPS FOR LARGER SECTION IN THE HEART OF THE CITY

Power Committee Economical But Desires to Progress—Use Half of Present Lamps for the Extension But Remove None of the Standards.

SECTION TO BE SERVED

The extension of the central part of the City lighted by magnetite arc lamps is one of the works which the Power Committee of the Council proposes to undertake in the near future.

The area in which it is planned to erect the "white lights" is as follows:

One side of Charlotte to Park Street and east to Water Street, five lights.

Murray, from Water Street to the Armouries, 3 lights.

McDonnel, from Water Street to the Collegiate Institute, 3 lights.

This makes a total of 49 lights to be distributed within a zone in the heart of the City. On Water and Aylmer Streets there would be two lights to each block and one side of the street. This sytem would be similar to the lighting of George street as it is done now after midnight.

Ald. Johnston stated that the present system is being "staggered," that is, only the alternate lamps are lighted, in order to economise until the Hydro-Electric situation is straightened out. In other words only half the 98 lights are being used. In the meantime the service could be extended as proposed by Mr. Greer's method, given above, and 100 lights could be used, the exact number would probably be 98, and the cost would amount to the original cost of lighting the lamps now in position.

Aldermen Favour It.

Ald. Duncan favoured the distribution of the lamps over the new system, but he would not remove the present standards not in use. Leave them in position and when the power matter is settled the main streets could be lighted as originally intended.

Mayor Buller said it would be several months before the power matter was settled and nothing can be done until then. In the meantime the committee could work out the extension of the system. He wanted to see the business section well lighted.

Ald. Duncan — "The area blocked out is a good one."

Ald. Langford—"The lighting bill for that area would be $4,000 over the old system."

Ald. Johnston—"For a year, yes. But this would be reduced to some extent."

Question of Standards.

Ald. Anderson"—"Is it your intention to remove the posts of the lights not in use now?"

"Ald. Johnston—"If the Committee considers it wise to do so, the matter might be taken up."

Ald. Anderson—"I am not in favour of moving any of them. We said our main streets were the best lighted in the Dominion and we should try to retain them in that way."

Mayor Buller—"For the present we are trying to cut the bill."

Ald. Anderson—"Leave the standards as they are until we take over the whole lighting system and then we can have them all going."

The Committee will go into the question and decide just what they will do. The present system will be staggered, but it has to be decided whether new standards will be purchased for the extended system, or whether half the present posts will be transplanted. This latter course met with general disapproval last night and it is likely that new standards will have to be purchased and charged to the original account.

CANADA'S PART IN THE DEFENCE OF THE EMPIRE

LONDON, Eng., March 18. —Canada and Canada's part in Imperial defence is one great factor of comment in the greater British newspapers this morning concerning Churchill's naval speech in the Commons. The question is asked what will happen to the Mediterranean squadron if Canada's offer of dreadnoughts is not revived. The London Times says he only postpones facing this real emergency. The Manchester Guardian says: So far as we can see this year's estimates may commit the house next year to replace these lapsed Canadian ships at our own cost. The Daily Chronicle welcomes Churchill's speech as showing he is converted to the idea of local fleet units from the Dominions like Australia has already provided. In the meantime Winston Churchill's star seems to be in the ascendant, and his speech is regarded as a great personal triumph. The younger ministerialists are to-day discussing him as the next Liberal leader.

ALDERMEN SHOW SIGNS OF SPIRIT

Last Night's Power Committee Uncovered a Decided "Peterborough" First Feeling—Mayor Buller and Ald. Gordon Would Start Something

THE INDICATIONS

The Power Committee showed signs of adopting their own initiative last night, when upon the suggestion of Ald. Gordon, they refused to pass a cut-and-dried motion submitted by the Association of Western Ontario Municipalities. The motion was dressed with much verbiage expressing confidence in Hon. Adam Beck, and appreciation of his work. Ald. Gordon was in favour of a resolution for this purpose, but urged that it be drawn up to represent Peterborough's appreciation, and also that it include a mild claim for the municipalities of Eastern Ontario.

"We do not have to blindly pass Mayor Buller's (Berlin) motion," said Ald. Gordon. "It looks as if some one is trying to make a good fellow of himself. We can draw up a resolution for the same purpose, but let it be strictly a Peterborough resolution."

City Clerk Armstrong was instructed to draw up the resolution to be presented at the next meeting of the Council.

cussion regarding Peterborough's representation in the big delegation that will go to Ottawa to oppose the construction of the Georgian Bay Canal scheme.

Mayor Buller said he was not sure just what should be done. He felt that Peterborough was interested in so far as the Trent Canal would be affected, but the Council was asked to donate $25 toward the expenses, and there would be the cost of sending a representative or two.

Ald. Gordon said he felt that Mayor Buller should go to Ottawa and lend assistance to the member for West Peterborough in advancing the interests of the Trent Canal.

"If you want to get the attention of the Government you must let them know we are doing things." He believed it would be in the interests of this City to not only join the delegation, but also have a voice, a Trent Canal voice at that, in opposing the Georgian Bay scheme. The idea expressed was that if "we don't get out and let the rest of the country know we are alive and alert, we will never get any attention." The matter was left with Mayor Buller.

Successful Concert At St. Andrew's

The Lecture Room of the St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church was crowded last night, the occasion being a concert and social, given under the auspices of the Daughters of Erin of that Church. The room was beautifully decorated with green and white. The following was the programme:

Chairman's remarks—Mr. Rollins.
Instrumental—Mr. H. Treneer.
Trio— Messrs. Flemming, Lee and Downey.
Solo—Mr. Thorpe.
Violin solo—Mrs. Boyd.
Reading—Mr. J. John.
Solo—Miss Emmerson.
Banjo solo—Mr. Frank Clarke.
Solo—Mr. Morphet.
Solo—Miss Howe.
Reading—Mr. J. John.
Solo—Mr. Jones.

Dainty refreshments were served during an interval, and altogether a most pleasing and successful evening was spent.

Much credit is due to Miss Curry who was responsible for the arrangements.

A GOLDEN WEDDING

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Payne of Lakefield, Celebrate Fiftieth Anniversary of Marriage

RELATIVES GATHER

An interesting and happy event took place in Lakefield on Monday, March 16th, when Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Payne celebrated the anniversary of their golden wedding at their beautiful residence on Queen street.

Mr. Payne, who is the eldest son of the late George Payne, of Dummer, was born in Dummer on November 1st, 1838. In his father's family there were ten children, five girls, and five boys, all of whom are living.

Mrs. Payne, (nee Miss Mary Jane McCracken), is the daughter of the late Wm. McCracken of Dummer, and was born in Dummer on April 6th, 1847.

Mr. and Mrs. Payne were married on March 16th, 1864, by Rev. G. F. Colwell, Bible Christian Minister of Peterborough. After their marriage the happy couple settled on a bush farm on the Third Concession of Dummer, where by their thrift and industry, they carved for themselves a home, in which they lived till April 25th, 1899.

Mr. and Mrs. Payne then retired from the active duties of farm life to their present comfortable and beautiful residence on Queen Street.

To this union four children were born, all of whom are spared to see the anniversary festivities. The children are Mrs. Everett Garbutt of Dummer, Mr. Jacob Henry Payne of Lakefield, and Mr. Wm. Alfred Payne of Smith, the eldest.

Mr. and Mrs. Payne have always been staunch members of the Methodist Church. Mr. Payne is a Liberal in politics and has always been a strong supporter of the temperance cause. For the past thirty years Mr. Payne has been a subscriber to the Peterborough Examiner.

Mr. Payne has always been an enthusiastic sportsman and still takes a keen interest in fishing and hunting. Both Mr. and Mrs. Payne enjoy good health at the present time.

The couple received many gifts and congratulations from their many friends. Mr. and Mrs. Payne have the best wishes of the community that they may enjoy many more years of wedded life.

The celebration was saddened by the funeral of Mrs. Frankish, the mother of Mrs. J. H. Payne. Mrs. Frankish was laid to rest in Little Lake Cemetery, Peterborough, on the morning of the anniversary.

DARK LANTERN FOR "BOB" ROGERS SAID ALDERMAN GORDON

In discussing the use of the Magnetite Arc lamps last night, Alderman Duncan stated that every lamp should be turned on when any distinguished visitors come to Peterborough, or on any special occasion.

Alderman Gordon—When Bob Rogers comes you'd better turn all of them off and lend him a dark lantern.

Mayor Buller—We are proud that such an able gentleman is coming to Peterborough. We should illuminate the streets so we can see those prominent men.

Alderman Anderson—Are you rehearsing your speech?

Alderman Gordon—That's just the introduction.

Mayor Buller—We don't need to rehearse it, we've got it always on tap.

Mayor Buller—It won't cost the city anything, Alderman Gordon.

Alderman Gordon replied to the effect that there had been a proposal for a civic entertainment which had been dropped sometime after it had been broached in Council or committee.

"No Further Concessions will be Made" — Premier Asquith in his speech before the House of Commons on March 16th. The above sketch by Harry Moyer gives an excellent idea of how the Premier looks to-day. The Premier is facing a crisis. Few British Premiers have been weighted with as many cares of administration and sometimes his most intimate friends say he grows weary when his motives and actions are misunderstood.

INCREASE IN PETERBORO'S TAX RATE

Will Be Difficult to Keep the Rate Below Twenty-six Mills—The Tax Rate in Other Cities

ON THE INCREASE

It is practically a foregone conclusion that this year's tax rate will exceed twenty-five mills. It will be a week or two yet before the estimates are finally decided upon, and when they are, the "notorious" ratepayer may expect to receive notification of an increase in the tax rate. The increase will amount to at least one mill, bringing the tax rate up to twenty-six mills. This despite the fact that the assessment increase exceed a million dollars. The Board of Education garnisheed the increase to the extent of eight thousand dollars. This with the departmental increase will more than eat up the remainder.

Berlin Tax Rate.

Berlin, March 18.—The City Council last evening, after considerable discussion, fixed the tax rate for the year at 23 3-4 mills, an increase of 1 1-2 mills. The increase is due to the change in the system of collecting payments for garbage privileges, which has been extended throughout the city and will be paid for out of the general fund, and will cost about $7,800. The maintenance of an additional fire hall and the proposed purchase of a motor truck, the increased cost of education and police protection also increase the expenditures for the year.

Toronto's Tax Rate.

TORONTO, March 18.—The Board of Control is off to a good start towards reaching a 19 1-2 mills tax rate. Items totalling $2,700,000 were either cut out or transferred to capital account. Another $800,000 cut-off or transferred to capital account to-day will make certain the aforementioned tax rate and the happiness of the citizens generally.

CROSS CAPITALIZATION

It is not without interest to note that the gross capitalisation of the C.P.R. per mile is greatly below the average which other big systems show in the United States. The fixed charges of the C. P. R. are under $18,000 per mile, as against an average of $39,000 per mile. The lines compared are the Atchison, Topeka, Great Northern, Northern Pacific and Union Pacific.

As to the balance-sheet value of the railway and equipment per mile the average for the lines indicated for 1913 was $72,000 per mile, while for the C.P.R. it was only $35,000 per mile. If the equipment of the C. P. R. be taken as of equal value with the average of the lines named, there would be assets representing the ordinary of $800, per ordinary $100 share without allowing anything at all for land.

DISTRICT OFFICER OF HEALTH IS IN THE CITY

On an Informal Visit—Will Meet the Board of Health This Afternoon

THE WATER SUPPLY

Dr. George Clinton, District Officer of Health, is in the City to-day. This morning Dr. Clinton was met by Dr. Amys, Chairman of the Board of Health, and Dr. A. W. McPherson, Medical Officer of Health. After a brief conference it was decided to call a meeting of the Board of Health, at 3 o'clock this afternoon, also a meeting of the Water Commissioners. The object of the meeting is to discuss ways and means of improving the public health and, it is understood that some mention will be made regarding the pollution of the Otonabee River.

Dr. Clinton, accompanied by Dr. McPherson, made a casual trip around the City this morning and incidentally visited a number of places concerning which the health authorities are interested.

EFFORT OF GOVERNMENT TO SAVE FERGUSON

ENTERS SUIT FOR $2,200 DAMAGES

Mr. John Harper, of North Monaghan, Seeks to Recover Fire Loss of Last Summer

BLAMED ENGINEER'S SPARK

Mr. John Harper, of North Monaghan, has issued a writ against the C.P.R. for $2,200 damages in connection with the fire that swept through his woods and fields last August. It will be remembered that the fire was seen to burst into flame in the grass a few moments after a C.P.R. train had passed by, and in spite of heroic efforts to stop its progress it blazed a wide path and did extensive damage in the woods. The C.P.R. have had a number of representatives over the ground since last fall. The writ has been issued through S. T. Medd.

Ferguson White-washer White-washed

TORONTO, March 18.— It was 4.45 o'clock this morning when the deadlock in connection with the Bill indemnifying G. Howard Ferguson, M. P.P. for Grenville, for his connection with the Trent Valley Canal investigation was broken, by a forced division which resulted in a government majority of 61 to 17. Thus the Bill was carried through its three stages in one sitting and provided not only for Mr. Ferguson, but other members who might be in a similar position in the ture. Leader Rowell's compromise offer that the bill apply to Ferguson alone was lost. Just before the division, Allan Studholme, the Labour member declared that the government's tactics were a deliberate attempt to whitewash Ferguson.

Local Council Of Women To Meet

An executive meeting of the Local Council of Women will be held in the Public Library building on Friday, March 20th, at 3.30 p.m., after which, at 4 o'clock, a public meeting will be held, at which Mrs. Rollins will give a report of the Social Service Congress at Ottawa, and Mrs. Middleton her paper on "Supervised Play-grounds." It is especially hoped that the representatives and members of all affiliated societies will be present. The convenors of the committees are requested to be present and bring reports.

New Nose Made From His Rib

BALTIMORE, Md., March 18.—With a new nose made from one of his ribs strapped to his face, which was denuded of features in a saw mill accident three years ago, Ross Allen, of Peterborough, is recovering from a remarkable operation at an hospital here.

It was the most important of a series of skin grafts which has ever taken place and which has given back to him new lips and now a new nose, covered with skin taken from the man's forehead. This last operation was completed a week ago and is considered a success by the surgeons. Allen was said to-day to be doing well.

Two years ago Allen was terribly disfigured as a result of a saw mill accident which occurred while he was working back at Hall's bridge. Following the accident Allen was removed to St. Joseph's Hospital.

a necessity for the government to assent to the act, as he understood that there were several other members who might unwittingly be in the same position.

If that was the case, said Mr. Rowell, it might be better to adjourn until Wednesday and hold a conference to ascertain the real facts.

Mr. McGarry then undertook to reply, stating that Mr. Ferguson would not be a supplicant for favors from the Opposition, and the offered compromise was rejected.

From Losing Seat After Working for Ottawa Government Avenues to Opposition and Sharp Struggle Follows.

GAG RULE RESISTED

TORONTO, March 18. — An effort on the part of the Government to jam through, without opportunity for discussion, a bill indemnifying Mr. G. Howard Ferguson, member for Grenville, from forfeiting his seat for services that he performed for the Dominion Government in investigating conditions on the Trent Valley Canal, was resisted with remarkable spirit by the Opposition in the Legislature yesterday. The proceeding was characterized by Mr. Rowell as "gag," "closure," and an invasion of the rights of the members of the House. For over several hours the Government struggled to force the bill through, but the Opposition was determined.

Attorney-General Foy, as leader of the House, moved that the bill to amend the Legislative Assembly act be introduced and read a first time, and that rule 21, with reference to the customary two days' notice, be suspended. Mr. Foy explained that it was a privilege extended to members of the Government and leader of the Opposition to suspend the rules in this respect under certain circumstances.

Mr. Rowell pointed out that he had already intimated to the Attorney-General that so far as the first reading was concerned he was quite prepared to waive the two-days' notice. But without consulting his colleagues he could not consent to the bill passing through all the necessary stages at one sitting.

Mr. Foy replied that the rules should not be suspended except under exceptional circumstances, as in the present case. In the session of 1903 an amendment had been made to the Legislative Assembly act enabling a member of the Legislature to take temporary employment from the Dominion Government. This was done to cover a similar case that came up at that time, and when the matter was explained to him by the then Prime Minister and Sir John Gibson the legislation was agreed to.

The bill now before the House enabled a man to take temporary work from the Dominion Government, "requiring professional skill or special qualifications, without his forfeiting his seat."

Mr. Rowell then went into authorities. He quoted Bourinot to show that the rules could not be suspended without an opportunity for discussion. If the Government would adopt the ordinary procedure there would be no objection from the Opposition.

"Whatever may be said about the first reading of the bill, the motion to suspend the rules must be a debatable question. We intend to discuss it until we have presented our position to the House and the country. We on this side will resist by such encroachment upon our rights and privileges that the rules of the House give us. It is a question far beyond the merits of this particular bill. It is now a question of the rights of the minority in this House under the privileges given them by the rules of this House."

The Speaker then ruled that the motion should be divided and the Opposition demanded the right to discuss the motion first. When finally a division of the House was ordered there was a wrangle over the exact nature of the motion. At last T. W. McGarry rose and took the attitude that under the ruling of the House there was now before them the first reading of the bill and there could be no debate on that.

The Speaker thought Mr. McGarry's point was well taken, which drew from Mr. Rowell a remark about the introduction of the "gag" and the "closure."

Called to order by the Speaker Mr. Rowell withdrew the particular expression and the hubbub went on until recess for dinner.

When the House resumed the motion to give the indemnity bill a second reading was called by the Speaker. This gave the Opposition an opportunity to raise another point of order, that the rules provide for printing, distribution and notice.

Mr. Rowell moved the adjournment of the House.

We are doing nothing less than our simple duty in attempting to preserve the dignity of the House, he said.

The debate proceeded with several Opposition members discussing the action of the Speaker, and the motion was declared lost.

Coming to the second reading, Mr. Rowell, offered on behalf of the Opposition that if a bill was introduced indemnifying Mr. Ferguson directly it would not be opposed.

Mr. Hanna, who replied for the Government, complained that there was

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 18, 1914

MR. FERGUSON, INVESTIGATOR.

The investigator should be investigated. Mr. G. Howard Ferguson, M.P.P., who was commissioned to unearth "graft" on the Trent Canal, is guilty of much more monumental "graft" on his own account. According to the law he was ineligible for the position. As a member of the Legislature, he had no right to conduct such an investigation. The law of Ontario on this point is clear. It is set forth in chapter 11, section ten of the Revised Statutes of Ontario—it took the Whitney Government seven years to revise the statutes and they must be right. Translated into plain English the section provides and means:

That any person who "accepts or holds any office, commission, or employment, permanent or temporary, in the service of the Government of Canada, to which any salary fee, wage or allowance, or profit of any kind is attached," shall thereby be ineligible to be a member of the Legislature or sit or vote therein. And section 16 provides that any person thus made ineligible or disqualified to sit in the Legislature, shall be subject to a fine of $2,000 for every day he sits or votes in the Legislature after he has become disqualified.

On the principle of the saying, "set a thief to catch a thief," Mr. Ferguson's selection as Trent Canal investigator was a good one. Who would be so well qualified to discover "graft" as a "grafter" under a penalty of $2,000 per day? This is assuming that Mr. Ferguson accepted pay for his work as investigator, and it is very probable he did so; for with all his faults no one would accuse him of being a philanthropist to the point of working for months for the Dominion Government for nothing. Reasons against this are the fact that he is a politician and a lawyer, and a lawyer that would work for nothing would, ipso facto, be disqualified.

Not only was Mr. Ferguson so qualified, but from a party point of view, he was a happy selection to conduct an ough-paced partizan who would hit the "Grits" every time he had a chance or if he hadn't a chance would make one. From a party point of view he was a haply selection to conduct an investigation, whose primary object, judging by subsequent developments, and by the attitude of the Conservative party in power towards the application of the spoils system—to provide vacancies for the faithful of the party by removing "Grit," or even "Tory" officials, who by long feeding at the official crib, had had more than their share. Mr. Ferguson had qualified himself by his intense partizanship. He was chairman (with no right to his seat) of the Public Accounts Committee at the last session of the Legislature, and ably led the committee in stifling investigation into a serious charge against a Minister of the Crown. This minister had accepted a contribution of $500 to the Conservative "corruption" fund, from a contractor who had a claim against the Government, and whose claim was settled very much in the contractor's favour after he had contributed his handy $500. There is no doubt this money was paid; for Sir James Whitney in virtually acnowledging its payment said that Mr. Hanna had done wrong in accepting it. But when investigation was attempted to discover whether the minister had solicited this money, or whether the $500 was the only contribution, Mr. Ferguson led and sustained the Public Accounts Committee in evading investigation, refusing to call the minister, who, if he had been innocent in the matter, could have cleared himself. It was no doubt argued that a lawyer M.P.P., who could thus stifle investigation into the suspicious handling of election funds and cover a minister's tracks in alleged wrong doing,—and thus make allegation fact—was the man to uncover alleged "Grit" wrong-doing which is quite another matter. As a thorough-paced partizan Mr. Ferguson filled the bill. Any one reading his report will see evidence of his party bias, and of his desire, not so much to detect wrong-doing as, to connect the Liberal party with it.

Mr. Ferguson must be regarded as a valuable man for his party. There must be something more of crookedness to be stifled in the Public Accounts Committee. Mr. Ferguson having disqualified himself, by acting on the Trent Canal Commission, from sitting as a member, and his services being needed as chairman of the Public Accounts Committee, the Whitney Government in the Legislature last night attempted to jam through a bill to whitewash Mr. Ferguson to relieve him from the penalty of his disqualification. A brazen and barefaced attempt was made to force through such a bill and without discussion—to apply the gag, to effect the purpose of "whitewashing" the whitewash him, deprives the ex parte Liberals fought every inch of the way and when the report closed at one o'clock the fight over a glaringly and indecently hasty legislation to subvert justice was still on.

Taking all the circumstances together—Mr. Ferguson's intense partizanship in conection with the canal, together with this hasty attempt to whitewash him deprives the ex parte findings of his investigation of a great deal of weight.

Trent Canal Funds Were Not Milked For Benefit Of Liberal Party Funds

Partizan Deductions, From Incomplete and One-sided Investigation, Not Convincing

The report of the investigation of Mr. G. Howard Ferguson, M.P.P., into Trent Canal matters has been some time before the public and, so far, no reputable or other Conservative newspaper has ventured to editorially discuss the most serious feature of the report—the insinuation that a prominent Liberal was associated with the diversion of the funds of the canal in the interests of the Liberal party. As far as the association of the name of Hon. J. R. Stratton with such an insinuation is concerned, The Examiner is in a position to absolutely deny that he ever made the statement attributed to him by the Superintendent as to the Trent Canal being good for from $5,000 to $6,000 election funds, or that he ever benefitted in a party, or any other, sense, from one penny of diverted canal funds.

Even the commissioner himself, anxious as he may have been to discredit the Liberals, is not sure of his ground to the point of positive assertion. His attempt to show that the diverted funds, of whose diversion documentary evidence is given, were devoted to the Liberal campaign funds, rests, according to his report, upon the explanation of the Superintendent, in respect to certain cash—that "he is unable to account for it," and that he "may have left it with the accountant to be handed over to the Liberal campaign fund," and to his admission that "large sums of money that should have gone to Ottawa were contributed to the Liberal election fund."

Here we have as foundation for a tremendously serious insinuation, the bare statement of a man whom many "Tories" say they wouldn't believe on oath, "or trust with two cents," accepted as gospel truth to the point of innuendo and hint, but never to the point of direct statement—"it is supposed"—"it is believed"—"it is presumed"—"it is thought"—that the diverted money went to the Liberal campaign funds. Even Mr. Burnham himself won't go any further than saying, in an interview with The Toronto World, that "it is believed that immense sums, etc."

Apart from the positive denial that is hereby made of the existence of any foundation in fact for the insinuation made, there are no charges or assertions—as to the Liberal party funds benefitting from the canal funds—diverted no doubt to personal uses; there is no proof, no testimony that would be accepted as evidence in a court of law on any charge. There is no proof in the bare statement of a man who, when confronted with his own wrong doing, feels that he can gain the favour of the party in power, by throwing the responsibility upon the "Grits."

This would be consistent with his playing the role of the Vicar of Bray, who in all political changes, turned up as a supporter of the party in power. The padding of the pay rolls to finance the pleasure voyages of the Bessie Butler, as the facts show, was very largely done in the interest of the entertainment of good Conservatives, whose friendship and favour might "come in handy" in case of a change of rulers; and upon the actual change of government the reported assertion that "I have always been a Tory at heart, should have been a sure passport to retention of place. What is then more natural that in the confusion of the moment, with no other exit from the corner in which he was placed, another way to favour with the party in power should have been selected by throwing the onus upon the Liberal party, to the delight of the party whose servant he was.

To such a hypothesis, the only tenable one in view of the fact that the person charged with complicity in this matter was utterly unconnected with it, additional strength is lent by the one-sided and unfair character of the so-called investigation. It was known that only one side would be heard and so serious charges could be smuggled through the report of the investigator, and without timely opportunity of denial or examination, be used to influence the public mind against a former prominent Liberal and the Liberal party as a whole. The meanest person charged with wrong doing is given fair trial; opportunity is given for both sides being heard, as was not done in the Trent Canal investigation.

The names of innocent persons, without their knowledge or consent, were placed upon the pay rolls and thus subjected to suspicion of wrong doing, of which they were entirely innocent. If the investigation had been fair, if the truth at all costs was to be brought out, the investigator would have heard both sides—called as witnesses those whose names were dragged into the matter in connection with serious charges or insinuations. If the real facts had been brought out, it seems in many cases it would have been shown that such persons were misrepresented and unfairly treated in Mr. Ferguson's investigation and report.

If the matter were inquired into before the Public Accounts Committee,or some parliamentary committee,with the object and effect of eliciting all the facts, many statements, especially in regard to the insinuation that Liberal party funds benefitted, would be disproved. And an investigation of a certain personal bank account might possibly show that not one dollar of the diverted canal funds went into the treasury of any political party. The matter should not be allowed to rest in its present misty shape of insinuation or innuendo. The facts should be brought out as they have not yet been brought out.

Why Sergeant Brown Was Not Appointed

Committee Reported and Was Ready to Proceed, But Their Appointee Backed Down

EXISTING CONDITIONS

The Port Hope Council assembled in regular session last Monday evening. His Worship Mayor Bush occupied the chair and the members were all present.

A policeman was not appointed, but it was not the fault of the police committee. The committee on Saturday had practically engaged Sergeant Brown of Peterborough at $1,000 a year, and there were two reasons why this appointment did not go through. First, Mr. Brown had 'phoned on Monday that he had decided not to accept the position, and second, Mr. Chislett and Mr. Smith, while probably favoring the appointment, objected to the large increase in salary. Mr Reaveley thought the salary too high, and Mr. Patterson and Mr. Strong favored a local man. Consequently, had a vote been taken on Mr. Brown's appointment it would have resulted 5 to 3 against, only the members of the Police Committee supporting him.

Interest centred on the report of the Police Committee and after the reading of this quite a lengthy discussion followed. The report was as follows:

The Report.

Your Police Committee in recommending a Chief Constable at a salary of $1,000 realize that the unfortunate and dangerous conditions existing in Port Hope's police department to-day are the direct result of drifting indifference and false economy of penuriousness on the part of former Councillors, and we further believe that true economy and efficiency are only obtainable in police circles by engaging the best possible men and paying them salaries upon which they can live respectably without having to depend upon pecuniary assistance from any source other than that paid by the town, we take this step that the results obtained may add honour and dignity to the men who to-day do and to-morrow may rule in public affairs.

Trusting that the members of this Council will unanimously support your Police Committee in their purpose to establish within our municipality a system of Police Government that will be creditable to your good judgment and obliterate from our town's good name the conditions that exist to-day, when men openly and defiantly break the law.

There is existing in Port Hope to-day, a perfect system of criminal bribing whereby the liquor men of the town are paying regular weekly sums ranging from five dollars and upwards that they may run open bars Saturday nights and Sundays without police interference or else there has been a vile and determined attempt of blackmailing with the object of ruining the reputation and destroying the influence of our present policeman.

Acting Chief.

Regarding our Acting Chief of Police there have been a great many rumours and stories, and all that have come to our attention have been thoroughly investigated and we have found them untrue; at the same time we find that his lack of knowledge of the law and of the duties and rights of a policeman have greatly handicapped him in the performance of his duties and has left him at the mercy of a body of unscrupulous men who would stoop to almost any depth to gain their own ends, and we believe that he has been more sinned against than sinning.

We have in our possession to-night four sworn declarations by liquor men or tools of theirs; they are all in a class with the one from Cobourg read in open Council here two meetings ago; we cannot accept them as evidence, for they are not, in our estimation, true, but mainly fabrications of hatred and spite.

Your committee, with the able assistance of His Worship the Mayor, have placed their hands to the task of breaking up this defiance of the law and are determined that the law shall be strictly enforced and adhered to and that our town shall no longer be known as a wide open place.—Port Hope Guide.

The young folks of Town enjoyed a dance in the Armouries on Tuesday evening from eight to half-past 11 o'clock.

STEADINESS PERSONIFIED.

Mike Reagan applied to Mrs. Stone for position as chauffeur, and gave the name of a friend as reference.

Mrs. Stone sought the friend and asked:

"Mr. Brady, your neighbour, Michael Reagan, has applied to me for a place as chauffeur. Is he a steady man?"

"Steady!" cried Brady. "Indade, mum! If he was any steadier he'd be dead."

IT IS NOT A BIT TOO EARLY TO THINK ABOUT YOUR PAINTING

Thrifty property owners use SWP because it makes their property more valuable. It protects their buildings from the rain, the sun and the frosts. It works a wonderful improvement in the appearance of their homes, and increases their pride and prosperity.

Cheap shoddy Paint is as poor a bargain as cheap shoddy clothes. It soon chalks, blisters, cracks or peels off, leaving your building unprotected and looking shabby, neglected and uninviting. But it is easy to prevent these undesirable conditions—paint with SWP. The best paint you can buy is the cheapest in the end by far.

Sherwin-Williams Paint is made of pure lead, pure zinc and pure screw-pressed linseed oil, properly combined according to scientific formulas with the necessary colouring pigments and driers. It covers more surface than other paints, including hand-mixed lead and oil, because it is ground very, very fine and smooth, in powerful mills designed by The Sherwin-Williams Co. It looks better and lasts longer than cheaper paints, including white lead and oil, because it is made from the best quality materials, thoroughly combined to make a tough, elastic coat that is unaffected by the weather for five, six or more years, depending on how well the paint has been applied. SWP gives maximum satisfaction in appearance and wear at a minimum expense per year—made in 50 attractive shades. Ask us for colour card.

As announced recently, we are Agents for S-W Paints and Varnishes in Peterborough and vicinity—look over the following Sherwin-Williams products we have in stock. It will soon be "Brighten Up" time and you will need them to make your home bright and fresh after your house-cleaning.

IN DEFENCE OF THE BESSIE "B"

I note in your worthy paper
A poem no doubt writ,
By some dash ginged Tory
Or surely not a grit.

He vilifies our Bessie
The governmental yacht,
He thought he should have been along
But I guess not.

Its just this kind of men we find
Who get so peeved and sore,
When Bessie ships her anchor
And he is left on shore.

He kicks about the wine and beer
Astore down in the hold,
Well—what kind of ballast would be expect
For forty warriors bold?

He wouldn't expect a croquet set
Or a bag of new golf clubs,
Well if he did he's off the scent
We were not his kind of dubs.

The men who sailed before the mast
On the good old Bessie B.,
Were a sort of a mixture of Tories and Grits sir
Dwelling in harmony.

There were men of high rank and fortune
Emerson, Graham, et. al.,
And lastly, but not less important
F. Cochrane—Chief of Canals.

These men were sent on inspection
Of channel, dams, locks and such,
And how anyone can take exception
Certainly beats the Dutch.

The Bessie B. "B" stood for Butler
Until the last general vote,
When things were turned topsy turvy
Which of course changed the name of the boat.

To-day is called Bessie Burnham
A good, clean, sea-faring ship,
But pending investigations
Lies tied up at her slip.

If Briton can only forget it—
And be real good until spring,
He can sail out to sea on the good Bessie B.
With the rest of the crew by ging.

El Capitan.

Dehorn Your Cattle

Buyers Discriminate Against Cattle Wearing Horns With Sharp Tips

By a resolution of the Toronto Live Stock Exchange, passed over a year ago, a regulation will come into effect on the first of April next, docking all cattle wearing horns $2.00 per head. This in a way sounds remarkable, but when it is considered that the slaughterers of cattle have to stand annually, losses from a quarter to half a million dollars on account of conceded bruises, the regulation does not seem to be such a hardship. However,, a movement has been on foot to possibly postpone the rate this regulation is to come into effect, and several prominent buyers interviewed on this subject, express themselves as not being desirous of working, what might be considered a hardship on the farmers and drovers, by this regulation. At the same time they point out the enormous losses which their houses have to stand, which is traceable directly to horned cattle. However, there seems to be a fair opinion that if some other method can be employed to prevent these bruises, that they would be agreeable to postpone this regulation. One idea suggested, and it seems good to us, is that the farmer or drover procure a fine tooth saw, a small meat or mitre saw is good, costs very little, and cut off the sharp tips on the horns before thel leave the farm, and at least before they are mixed with strange cattle.

This tipping is absolutel painless, easily done and prevents the beast from inflicting pain upon his fellows. Only about one inch or an inch and a half of the hard tip of the horn is sawed off, care being taken not to cut into the quick. Does not set the cattle back.

It is clearly evident that if the Humane Society would see some of the bruised carcasses and torn hides on the cattle they would in themselves enforce the regulation throughout our fair province to require handlers of live stock to at least fit the animals in such a way that they could not damage each other.

THE LID ON NIGHT LIFE

Special to The Examiner.

BERLIN, March 18.—As a result of the recent agitation against the increasing gaiety of "night life" in Berlin, the lower house of the Prussian diet has adopted a motion requiring the Government to employ all lawful means to check 'the growing immorality'' especially in Berlin and the larger towns. The motion refers especially to the alleged indecency of some of the pictures shown in the moving picture theatres and to the dancing and other exhibitions given in cabarets and all-night restaurants.

Most women wouldn't want their own way if they could have it.

"THE DREAM DOLL"

Much Appreciated and Drawing Good Houses

Continued interest is maintained in the charming setting, "The Dream Doll," by the Clare family, introducing Gladys George as the doll, now running at the Royal Theatre. All who appreciate a representation of the kind from which a good moral lesson can be drawn should not miss it. The following is a brief synopsis of "The Dream Doll":

A young business man, somewhat selfish and altogether unworthy of the affection of his wife, to whom he denies all the little pleasures that make a woman's life happy—has received a present of a speaking doll from his friend, an inventor. His wife gets a letter from an old schoolmate, advising her to resent man's interference and suggests a "treatment" for selfish husbands. After a "scene" with her lord and master she takes her friend's advice and shows the spirit of an injured woman, with the proper result. The husband finally reads the letter, and upon discovering this the wife threatens to leave him. He falls asleep, the speaking doll appears, and after a couple of musical numbers and a real "doll" dance, teaches him a lesson in charity that brings to the surface all the latent good in him, with the result that he begs his wife's forgiveness and all ends happily.

A NEW DEPARTURE

The construction of a couple of tank cars, specially equipped for fire fighting, is a new departure on the part of the C. P. R.. They are, in general, of the standard construction. They have ben built to the designs of the company by the American Car Company; and the idea is to operate them in pairs. Apart from the end arrangement of the auxiliary equipment, they are of identical construction. Each car carries a tank of 8,438 imperial gallons, and on the end of each car there is a 20 by 10 inch duplex fire pump, using steam from the locomotive boiler. The corresponding end of the other car has a rack construction on which can be arried 6,000 feet of fire hose. The car is designed for weight capacity of 160,000 pounds, so standard fifty-ton trucks are employed. These tank cars have done good service in the United States.

SUGAR SNOW

The downfall of snow on this 18th day of March is called "sugar snow" and is regarded as a forerunner of good "sap weather." If this is the case we may expect great activity among the farmers who are the happy possessors of a few or many maple trees, and before long we may expect the appearance in the streets of the maple syrup man in his house-to-house visitations.

Stray Shots From the Firing Line

The 57th Regiment held the second recruiting session of the season last night at the Armouries. There were present in the neighbourhood of one hundred recruits and some thirty were sworn in before Col. Clegg.

Practically all the company officers were present last night.

Capt. McPherson entertained his company, No. 8, to a progressive euchre party in the recreation room. This was greatly enjoyed by some twenty members of the company, which was considered a fairly good attendance for so early in the year.

Every Tuesday night is kept open to receive recruits, and before the recruiting season ends, it is expected that the regiment will be able to report full strength.

The recruit instruction will hereafter take place twice weekly, under the supervision of Sergt. Instructor Dunkerley. It will be impossible for him to supervise all the work and the responsibility of the training of the greater part of the regiment will rest with the company officers.

It is now confirmed by official circles that the camp will be held at Petawawa for a period of five days, and the 57th will be allowed to go to camp with a full complement.

The cavalry is still very active. Classes under the instruction of Sergt. Instructor Spalding of the Cavalry Barracks, Toronto, are making splendid progress. Sections A and B of the training course will have been completed when the time arrives for the men to go to Toronto to qualify.

The work at the last class, held on Monday evening, was most practical, mutual work. Several of the men who are taking the classes will qualify for N. C. O.'s and one will become a lieutenant, and much practical experience in the matter of handling a body of men, is being gained by all.

There will be another class held tonight at eight o'clock in the cavalry quarters at the Armouries, and it is hoped that any young men who are interested in cavalry work will turn out and give the troop some aid. The subject for to-night's lecture will be the protection of troops on the march, and some more practical work will be done.

The movement to organize a City squadron has not fully materialized yet, but rapid strides are being taken in the right direction.

Orders have been issued prohibiting jumping on horseback at camps of instructions. Camp commandants will be held responsible that these instructions are adhered to. This order is no doubt promulgated to prevent accidents that often happen at cavalry games for which one-half day in each camp has been allowed. It is not many years since two horses were killed and two officers seriously injured in these games.

Lt.-Col. B. W. Gregory, who succeeds to the command of the 1st Cavalry Brigade, at one time commanded the 2nd Dragoons, but retired some years ago. He was a good cavalry officer and served on the staff of Lord Dundonald when that officer was in command of the Canadian Militia.

Cast Enjoyed A Banquet

After performing their respective parts to such advantage last night at the Opera House, the cast of the Dramatic Section of the St. Peter's T.A.S., wended their way to the K. & R. Grill room, where an excellent banquet had been prepared for them. The management, conscious of the occasion, had prepared souvenir menus, in the style of green harps, which were presented to each, and which were greatly appreciated.

The following toasts were made:

The King—Mr. Sam Houlihan.
The Cast—Mr. Vincent McCabe.
The Ladies—Mr. Eleric White.
The K. & R.—Mr. William Collins.
The Play—Mr. Gerald McFadden (critic).
Dramatic Section—Mr. J. J. Hanrahan.
The Gentlemen—Miss L. Simons.

Solos were rendered by Miss A. Simons, Mr. E. Hanrahan and Mr. William Collins.

Appropriate selections of Irish airs were played by Miss Marian Gorman, who presided at the piano.

Mr. J. J. Hanrahan acted as chairman.

Special Services At Murray Street

The spacious school room of Murray Street Church filled last night by those desiring to hear Rev. C. G. Smith, who is conducting special services for five evenings. His subject was handled in an attractive and telling manner. The singing is led by the choir of the church. There is nothing sensational about Mr. Smith's methods, but he has a vein of humour and a decided magnetism which makes the hour seem all too brief. To-night his subject will be "The King's Supper," when he will describe his experience as a guest of King Edward VII at a banquet which cost $250,000. The public are invited—not to the banquet—but to hear the story of it.

NOTED GUESTS AT AERO DINNER

Examiner Special:

NEW YORK, March 18.—Many men of wide fame will gather about the board at the annual dinner of the Aero Club of America in this city to-morrow night and listen to addresses telling of the progress in the science of aviation and forecasts as to its future development. Count von Bernstorff, the German ambassador at Washington, will be the guest of honour at the dinner and among others who have accepted invitations to be present are Rear Admiral Robert E. Peary, U.S. N. retired; Charles D. Walcott, secretary of the Smithsonian Institution, and Rodman Wanamaker of Philadelphia, who is one of the promoters of the proposed transcontinental flight.

First it rains and then it snows,
In comery March!
Then some clouds, an' so it goes,
Through stormy March!
The first you know the sun'll shine
For just a spell, then go behin'
A dad-burned cloud fer mortal's heart
Will drop 'bout twenty-six below,
Then sudden-like it gits a start
An' shines again before you know—
That's ornery March!

Eaves a-dripping' all day long—
That's ornery March!
Allus seem there's somethin' wrong,
That takes the starch
Plum out o' livin', shucks to me!—
Laughs an' tears alternately!
It 'pears to me, as I observe,
It's on the line 'twixt hay an' grass—
A leetle late for canned preserve,
An' just too soon for garden sass!—
That's ornery March!

HOME CIRCLE RATES ARE DISCUSSED

HAMILTON, MARCH 16.—The result of the convention of the Canadian Home Circle just completed is being freely discussed by the leaders of the various fraternal societies. It appears that the action of the Home Circle is quite unique among fraternal orders. The reports of the society showed a membership of 19,100, and total payments to date for various benefits of five and a half millions. The chief interest at the convention, which prolonged its sessions for another day, was the recommendation of the officers that the rates of all members should be so altered as to meet the standard set by the Government. The chief reason urged in support of the proposed change was the necessity of providing stability for the twenty-five millions of insurance carried by the members.

An officer of the Canadian Fraternal Association, discussing the result, said: "It is remarkable, for by one step and by the unanimous vote of the convention the society has become absolutely solvent, and has provided a means of supplying insurance at cost and at the same time adding stability to the institution. This officer pointed out that this question of rates is receiving the consideration of practically all the societies, and that only last year the Canadian Fraternal Congress had requested the Government to introduce legislation to compel all societies to adopt the rates now selected by the Canadian Home Circle. Such legislation was introduced in Quebec this year, but held over for a year, and it is expected that similar legislation will be enacted in Ontario next year.

The Home Circle convention opened with a strong opposition to any proposed change, but after a thorough consideration of the plan as presented by Prof. M. A. Mackenzie, M. A., of Toronto University, and by the officers, the opposition decided to unite with the management in making the complete change unanimously. Their decision not to await legislation to compel this course will place the society in a very formidable position, whether or not the Government pass such an Act.

The officers are to-day receiving the congratulations of other fraternal societies on the strong stand they have taken, for it is felt that the result is an object lesson to other societies to reach actuarial solvency without legislation. One prominent officer of a sister society to-day said: "It will have far-reaching effects, for there are several other societies whose officers are considering changes in their rates, and this result will strengthen them in their efforts to reach actuarial solvency."

The new scale of rates is based on the National Fraternal Congress table as accepted by the Ontario and Dominion Governments. All members will pay the new rates at their present ages.

The chief officers, who were all re-elected, are: Leader, Rev. Dr. H. T. G Boyle, Dean of Trinity College; Past Leader, Dent Dalton; Vice-Leader, R. W. Hawkins; Secretary, J. M. Foster, B.A.; Solicitor, Norman Somerville, M.A.; Medical Examiner, Dr. A. T. Hobbs; Treasurer, W. H. Weston.

M. O. S. Matchett represented Peterborough Circle, No. 193 at the convention which, he states, was a great success.

LAST OF THE DE LUXE BOOK FRAUD CASES

Special to The Examiner:

BOSTON, Mass., March 18. —After dodging the law for more than two years four of the book agents who were indicted in 1912 for complicity in the alleged "de luxe" book frauds were placed on trial to-day in the suffolk superior criminal court. Several of those alleged to have been the prime movers in the "de luxe' book swindle have been convicted in New York and with the disposal of the cases now on trial the Government believes that it will have put an end for all time to one of the most gigantic frauds ever perpetrated in America.

It is believed that the "de luxe" swindle netted its promoters more than $5,000,000 within a few years. The fraud was first brought to the attention of the authorities in 1912, when a rich widow of Salt Lake City brought a civil action and obtained a verdict of nearly $50,000 on alleged "rare" volumes which she had purchased from the promoters of the scheme. The disclosures made during the trial of this suit led to an investigation and subsequent indictments and arrests.

Book experts testified that the books sold by the gang were worth only one-fifteenth to one-twelfth of the prices charged. The alleged fraud consisted in the deception of persons with more money than knowledge of books who wished to buy their libraries ready made. They were approached by representatives of the gang and informed that they could purchase some rare volumes exquisitely bound which would be a pride to any book collection, but must, of course, be prepared to pay a very high price. It was represented that the books were works of great rarity and of limited editions, and in some cases that they were autographed by their authors. As a matter of fact, there was nothing at all extraordinary in the books themselves, and though their bindings were expensive they cost but a small part of the prices placed on them.

One method adopted by the salesmen was to make prospective customers believe that a millionaire was in active negotiation for the set under consideration, and that unless the bargain was closed at once the books must go to complete a library of a well-known book lover. This usually worked well with the person who was buying his library by the yard, and ordinarily was quite sufficient to clinch the bargain.

Many well known people throughout the country are said to have fallen victims to the swindle. Mrs. James A. Patton of Chicago, wife of the wheat and cotton operator, is said to have paid $30,000 for some of the "rare" volumes. Mrs. Durand, wife of the founder of Wellesley College, gave up $100,000 to the book agents, and a wealthy man of Greensburg, Pa., is said to have been victimized to the tune of $150,000.

The four agents placed on trial here here to-day are said to have been in charge of the New England territory. Among their alleged victims were a number of wealthy men and women of Boston and other cities of Massachusetts. Though the indictments were in Europe and only recently re-accused men have had their trial delayed by the fact that some of them were in Europe and only recently returned to the jurisdiction of the court.

BRITTON'S NEW BOAT.

KINGSTON, March 18.—Ralph B. Britton's handsome new canoe, Tomahawk, with which he purposes during the coming summer to try to wrest the international canoe sailing trophy from the New York Canoe Club, present holders of the prized silverware, has been finished, and is a handsome one, 16 feet in length over all. Every screw, rivet, bolt, etc., was made in his home town of Gananoque.

PASSENGERS ARE SAFE.

Those on Board Wrecked Steamer Little Worse For Experience.

HALIFAX, March 18.—The little coasting steamer Rosemary, Captain McPhee, arrived in port at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon from Sambro with 41 of the passengers and crew of the ill-starred Liner City of Sydney on her decks. The captain, Second Mate Scanlan, Third Mate Chapman, boatswain and two of the engineers were not on board the ship when the Rosemary sailed for Halifax, but they arrived later on the tug Togo. Little of the cargo was saved, and the ship was abandoned.

The eleven passengers of the steamer, four of whom are women and one a little girl of four years, did not appear greatly disturbed by the somewhat trying experience they had undergone. They stated that although the ship was heaving with the seas and she was on the rocks, the waves did not break over her decks, and before they took to the boats they were fairly comfortable in the music room on the upper deck.

SPLENDID PRODUCTION OF "KATHLEEN MAVOURNEEN"

By Dramatic Section of St. Peter's T.A.S.—Opera House Packed to the Doors, and Many Turned Away—A Good Performance.

THE CAST

The dramatic section of St. Peter's Total Abstinence Society, which has made good productions to Peterborough audiences many times before to great advantage, eclipsed all former performances last evening, by a most clever performance of the romantic Irish comedy drama, "Kathleen Mavourneen." The audience was perhaps the largest which has been seen in the Opera House this season, not one seat being vacant, and many people from outside points could be noticed.

It may be said, without any exaggeration, that all former efforts by the dramatic section were surpassed last night, and the hearty applause which was prevalent at very frequent intervals left no doubt as to the feeling of the audience. For some weeks past the cast has been hard at work under the direction of Mr. Vincent McCabe, together with Miss L. Simnos, and the manner in which all must have attended to their respective parts, was plainly evident throughout last evening's performance.

The whole production was very capably staged, and nothing whatever interfered with the success which was attained.

So well did all carry out their parts, and that with great ease, that it was hardly possible to define the company from a professional one. Those taking part put their whole heart and interest into the part which it was their lot to interpret, and any awkward gesticulations which generally interfere with a brilliant production, were conspicuous by their absence.

Long before the curtain rose, the audience were delighted with the popular Irish airs, which were rendered very effectively by the Opera House Orchestra.

"Kathleen Mavourneen" proved a very appropriate entertainment for St. Patrick's Day.

It is a comedy of the conventional Irish type, and while the source of it is dramatical, the comedy which is interspersed, allows of no dull or wearisome moments.

The villain and his evil machinations are at work, but in a dream, as though under a veil, and as is usually the case, all ends well.

The story is shortly this: David O'Connor lived with his daughter Kathleen. The latter was in love with Terrence O'Moore. One day the Squire(Bernard Kavanagh, and his sister, Miss Dorothy, visited old David and his daughter. Bernard falls in love with Kathleen, and decides he must marry her. The squire and his sister take their departure, after he has acquainted her with the fact that he is in love with her, and that he would call the following day to receive his answer. Kathleen does not like to throw Terrence over, but has the desire to be a rich lady. Perplexed with thought, she [illegible] and falls asleep, and the curtain goes down, and runs asleep, and the following tells of what she dreamt:

She is married to Bernard, and for a time has all that she requires, but soon his love for her begins to wane, and she soon confesses herself to be miserable. Kavanagh is in monetary difficulties, on the brink of ruination, and desires to be rid of his wife, so that his path might be clear to wed a rich young lady, whom he knew.

He thinks that Kathleen is not his lawful wife, as at the time of the marriage he hired a villain to perform the ceremony. This particular scoundrel, at the last moment, falls suddenly ill, and is cognizant of the fact that he will not recover. Desirous of leaving this world in a right manner, he goes to Father Cassidy, and tells him of the plot. This worthy priest decides to take his place, and in the dead of night, in the pale light of the silvery moon, he unites Bernard and Kathleen in marriage. Just at the time Kavanagh is denouncing his wife, and telling her that she is not his lawful wife. Father Cassidy appears on the scene with the exclamation, "Yes, Bernard Kavanagh, Kathleen O'Connor is your lawful wedded wife. Heaven, and this certificate, signed by your hand, are my witnesses."

Foiled at this attempt to get rid of his wife this way, he resorts to more desperate means, and arranges with three ruffians to kill her. This plan is foiled by Terrence who appears on the scene just as the fatal deed is about to be perpetrated. He slays Kavanagh, is arrested, and sentenced to death. The last parting takes place at the cell door. Kathleen awakes to find that she has experienced a horrible dream, and is united to Terrence, after the squire, who promises to call for an answer the following morning, had done so, but had been refused.

There were a number of thrilling moments and scope for very clever acting.

Miss Lillian Simons, Mavourneen, a very charming little colleen and Mr. V. McCabe, as Bernard Kavanagh, are deserving of much credit, for the great success of the evening, for to them was assigned the leading roles, and they carried out their parts in a very creditable style.

Billy Button Cap, who in other words was Mr. Echert Kelly, was a "scream." His was a role full of opportunities for fun, and he extracted the last drop of merriment bearing the audience convulsed with laughter all the time he was on the stage.

Miss Lillian Simons showed histrionic ability to a marked degree in her work, and the same may be said of Miss Annie Simons, Miss Josephine Collins and Miss O. Tangney. Mr. William Collins was a hero last year, and he was a hero this year, a manly hero, and carried off the difficult role splendidly.

During the play some very pleasing, romantic, and at the same time most appropriate specialties were introduced, by Mr. Eddie Hanrahan, Mr. William Collins and Miss Annie Simons.

Mr. Eddie Hanrahan, possesses a fine bass voice, and he used it to advantage last night. Mr. Collins, too, singing some Irish melodies, scored a great success. Miss Annie Simons made a hit when she sang "Take off your hat to old Ireland," the chorus of which had to be repeated.

The following was the cast and synopsis:

David O'Connor—Mr. Ed. Hanrahan.

Kathleen O'Connor—Miss Lillian Simons.

Bernard Kavanagh—Mr. V. McCabe.

Miss Dorothy Kavanagh — Miss Josephine Collins.

Meg Marslogh—Miss O. Tangney.

Mr. McCubbin—Mr. James Costin.

Soldiers—Messrs White, Scully and Hickey.

SYNOPSIS.

Act 1. (Interior of David O'Connor's Farmhouse). David: "There's nothing like a good fire to warm the heart of a traveller; and this is St. Patrick's Eve, and as His Honour is coming, I'll be wanting everything to look in apple pie order."

Act 2. (An Apartment in the Mansion of Bernard Kavanagh). Father O'Cassidy: "Yes, Bernard Kavanagh, Kathleen O'Connor is your lawful wedded wife. Heaven, and this certificate, signed by your hand, are my witnesses."

Act 3. Scene 1 — A Wild Rocky View. Scene 2—The Black Crag. Bernard: "With ruin staring me in the face, there is no other path for me to take but that which leads to her destruction."

Act 4. Scene 1—Interior of Prison. Terence: "Then I'll call you my sweetheart to the last, and we'll hope to meet again, where we'll never be called upon to part, my own Kathleen." Scene 2—Interior of David's Cottage. Kathleen: "Oh, sure it's dreamin' I've been all this time, and it's not true. Oh, thank heaven, thank heaven."

YOUR BABY'S SKIN

Is the most delicate fabric in the world. You may cause it permanent harm by using poisonous mineral ointments for the little rashes and eruptions that every baby suffers from occasionally. Don't take any chances. Use Zam-Buk, the baby's best balm.

Zam-Buk is made from fine herbal extracts, and is free from any harmful poisonous colouring matter. Like the grasses and the flowers, nature has coloured it green. It is nature's own healer.

Most ointments and salves have, as their foundation, various animal oils and fats. Zam-Buk does not contain one atom of animal substance. Most ointments and salves are too coarse to be absorbed by the tender delicate skin of a baby, and remain on the skin as irritating scabs. Just put a little Zam-Buk on baby's skin, and see how soon it is absorbed, showing conclusively that the pores of the skin are greedy for it.

Zam-Buk should also be used for cuts, burns, scalds, eczema, piles, ulcers, etc. All druggists and stores sell at 50 cents box, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price. Refuse harmful substitutes and imitations.

SUBSCRIPTIONS ASKED.

Strathcona Memorial Fund Will Be Opened This Week.

LONDON, March 18.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Public appeal for subscriptions to the Strathcona memorial will be issued here this week. The general committee includes Premier Asquith, Lord Chancellor Haldane, the Duke of Argyll, and every other former Governor-General of Canada, Bonar Law, Sir Charles Tupper, Colonial Secretary Harcourt, Bishop Perrin and many others. The executive committee is drawn from those immediately concerned with Canadian business in London.

Needles Thrust in Brain.

EDMONTON, March 18. — The death occurred a few days ago of a four-year-old negro girl named Lowe, who lived with step-parents at 449 Gallagher street.

Coroner Dr. Ogrin made a post-mortem examination and found that there were five needles thrust into the brain through the skull.

The child carried heavy life insurance.

BELLEVILLE VICTIM OF THE FIRE

TORONTO, March 18.— It is now thought that three lost their lives in a fire which destroyed the Woodbine Hotel here last evening, the third victim being Charles Wilmott, the well known horseman of Belleville. The remains found this morning were identified by friends. Another body in the morgue is thought to be Max Cohen, whose friend, Fred Levenson, is also believed dead. Two others are also missing, making five in all, but there are hopes that they escaped safely, though they cannot be found this morning. The Woodbine was of recent construction and thought fire proof. It is causing much comment that lives should be trapped and lost therein, especially at such a busy hour as seven-thirty p.m. on a main street of a great city. There will likely be a

The Four S's Of Salvation

At the Park Street Baptist Church, last evening, Evangelist Pugsley gave a vivid address on the four S's of Salvation—surrender, separation from sinners, service of self, and sacrifice in service. In connection with the first point the Evangelist said that surrender of will must be man's choice. There were only two classes—the saved and the unsaved, those who surrender and those who did not. It was not possible to serve God by proxy. Service must be a personal one.

In referring to the last point of sacrifice in service, Mr. Pugsley instanced the case of the rich young ruler who would not forsake his riches to serve the Lord and who went away sorrowful.

Three people professed conversion.

Mr. Mulligan of the Gospel Hall sang a very enjoyable solo.

Mutineers Are Killed

Special Wire to The Examiner:

MEXICO CITY, March 18.—With acquiescence of President Huerta, 148 mutineers were taken from jail today, lined up against a wall and shot.

Stock Markets

To-morrow will probably reflect further cross currents in the stock market, with the best interests exhibiting strength. While specific selling may occur elsewhere, selling of stocks in certain parts of the stock market reflects in a number of cases manipulation, rather than long stock or liquidative pressure. It is evident the large interests are accumulating the best issues while existing selling pressure in parts of the market, where vulnerability is apparently presented for the bear element. The best quality of buying has been found by floor observers in Reading, but the fear of an unfavourable coal rate decision keeps the outsiders away. The buying of Union Pacific could hardly be better. We are favourably impressed by the absorption of Great Northern and Atch. Our reports are friendly in steel. Boston advises suggest the purchase of good coppers. C.P.R. was strong and should be a purchase at present levels. The low priced stocks are down to a buying point and could be taken on with safety.

NOBODY WAS HIT.

But Mexican Papers of Both Sides Claimed Naval Victory.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 18. — A story of the first naval engagement of the present Mexican revolution is brought by the crew of the U. S. collier Justin. The engagement was fought at Topolobampo, between the recently acquired rebel gunboat Tampico and the Federal gunboats Guerrero and Morelos.

The guns have a range of about 15,000 yards, and for about two hours a heavy bombardment was kept up, the shells falling several thousand feet short of their marks. After firing several hundred shots, the Federal craft withdrew to Mazatlan.

Big Battle Going On.

JUAREZ, Mexico, March 18.—Heavy fighting, with the rebels hard pressed, was reported here last night. A force of Federals is said to have met Villa's army at Escalon, an important railroad town, 100 miles north of Torreon, and both sides have been reinforced, and the battle is said to have raged fiercely all day yesterday.

Pleads Guilty To Bigamy.

BRANTFORD, Ont., March 18.—Gordon May, formerly of Oshawa, pleaded guilty to bigamy and was remanded for sentence.

He was married on June 4, 1908, to Ruby Lane of Oshawa and lived with her for two years, they having two children. Then he sold the household and furnishings and said he was going to Chicago. He landed in Uxbridge and lived with Lata Anderson until her father ejected them and then they came here and were married.

Warned Against the Theatre.

BACHELOR! HERE'S SOME COFFEE FOR YOU

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—Allow me a little space in your paper to say a few words in reply to Bachelor, and anyone who likes a good cup of coffee. There is scarcely anything more interesting to almost everybody than the subject of preparing coffee for the table; yet how few understand it. The "way mother used to make it" is satisfactory to most housekeepers, because there is a sentiment about it. The most important thing necessary in making a good cup of coffee is a high-grade coffee, perfectly roasted, and properly ground, and should be kept in tins that are airtight; never make coffee in metal pots, because the metal forms "tannate of iron," which is the tannin eating the metal, an ink, so to speak, and if left standing over night, makes a very fair writing fluid. In American hotels they usually allow the following quantities.

In making breakfast coffee twelve ounces to a gallon of water, while for after-dinner coffee, which is generally served en-demitasse, sixteen ounces to a gallon of water. A good way for any one that only needs a small amount is to measure three tablespoonfuls to a pint of water. Have your coffeepot warm, put in the coffee the moment the water reaches the bubbling point, pour on about a cupful at first to open the pores of the coffee and get it ready to receive the remainder, which is to be added, little at a time, until all the good and none of the bitterness (tannin) is extracted. If too strong it can easily be diluted when in the cups, which should be warm. First put in sugar, then warmed milk, then coffe, and if you can afford it, put on the top a teaspoonful of whipped cream and there you have the best cup of coffee you can get, with all its delicate aroma. Yours truly,

A Chef.

Coffee Receipt—For the Bachelor.

Allow one dessertspoonful of coffee for each cup, and one for the pot. Mix into a paste with egg which has been stirred, but not beaten. Add enough cold water to cover well, stir and put on the stove where it will come slowly to a boil, then add sufficient boiling water and let boil hard for 5-6 minutes. Do not stir while boiling. Set back to settle and strain. Heat again if cooled in straining. Made in this way the coffee ground will be suspended in the coagulated egg and the coffee will be quite clear.

Turkey has given English capitalists contracts to reorganize the naval arsenals and dockyards with all the latest appliances known to naval construction.

IN THE WORLD OF SPORT

TWENTY-ONE PLAYERS HAVE BEEN SIGNED BY MANAGER CURLY BLOUNT

Exhibition Games Will be Arranged With Big League and Minor League Teams During Training Season.

LIST OF RECRUITS

That Manager Curley Blount has not been idle in his efforts to build up a pennant possibility in Peterborough is evidenced by the fact that he already has twenty-one players signed up. Some of these recruits are experienced ball players, and others are very promising youngsters. Out of this squad, which will be augmented by several pitchers for whom Blount is angling, the 1914 leader will pick the club that will represent Peterborough this season. The squad will report for Spring training at Youngstown, O., on April 15th, and Manager Blount is arranging a series of exhibition games. Among the most important of these will be a game with Chicago White Sox or the Cleveland American League team at Youngstown on April 24th. The Independants of Pittsburg will also play the Petes and altogether some six or seven exhibition games will be played in the training season. A number of minor league teams are slated to meet the Petes.

Pitcher Bob Sterling, Outfielder Swartz and Thirdbaseman Joseph A. Byrne of last year's team, have not yet signed, but their contracts are expected at any time. Manager Blount's squad, including the hold-outs, is as follows:

Catchers.

E. Chapdelaine.
M. Ryberg, 21 years of age; 5 ft. 11 in. in height, and weighs 175 pounds.
Elmer McClure, 20 years of age; 5 ft. 9 in.; weight, 175 pounds.
F. O. Kelly.

Pitchers—

Bob Sterling,
Knut Belting,
Ken Tracey,
Stan Cresswell,
Louis Schettler.

Infielders—

Jos. A. Byrne,
Eddie Price.
George Miller,
E. Flanagan,
Lawrence Buckclew,
Frank Fox.

Outfielders—

Curley Blount,
Willie Swartz,
John R. Bane,
Paul Dawson,
John J. Gaffney.

In addition to these there is a big first baseman whose contract Blount has not yet sent on.

The Petes will have a classy home uniform this year. The haberdashery they will wear at Riverside Park will be of cream coloured flannel, with a narrow black stripe, like the New York Giants' uniforms, with a V neck and blue facings. The trousers will be piped with blue, and the caps and stockings will be of the same colour, with a large blue P on the breast of the shirts. Instead of sweater coats the Petes will use Norfolk jackets, either blue or wine coloured.

Of the new players the most promising perhaps is Pitcher Louie Schettler, who won twelve and lost three games with the Erie Inter-State League team, last season. He would never have got away from Erie if the Erie people had been aware of the fact that they were to have a franchise in the Canadian League. Blount got in ahead of them and signed the big pitcher. He should be a consistent winner with the Petes.

ATHLETIC CLUB MEETING AT Y. M. C. A. TO-NIGHT

The Peterborough Athletic Club will meet in the Y.M.C.A. to-night at 8 o'clock. This is a general meeting for all members and all who wish to join, and it is desired that there shall be a large attendance as a number of important matters will be settled at this meeting. Every member should make it a point to be on hand to-night.

BASEBALL

TORONTO, March 18.—According to a statement made by President J. P. Fitzgerald of the Canadian Baseball League, which was turned down by the Board of Arbitration in its application for Class B rating, he will make an appeal from the above decision and in the event his organization is again made to be satisfied with remaining a Class C circuit, his alternative is to approach the Federal League with the view of becoming their minor circuit for the development of players for the outlaw organization.

Several recent decisions handed out by organized ball arbitrators have given the Canadian League grounds for a strenuous kick and unless the board conceded to the rightful claim for Class B rating, there is every reason to believe that the Canadian circuit will fall in line with the Federal League for the purpose of developing their players, which would more than repay the local organization since drafts and sales of players to the major and higher classification of organized league clubs would end by taking the above steps.

At the present time the Federal League is giving organized ball more concern than will be readily admitted in the latter's quarters, with several test cases coming up in the courts regarding the jumping of major league players, who had accepted money for signing and then reported to their respective organized club training quarters.

From the manner in which matters are shaping, it would not be surprising to see the Federal League given its place in organized ball as a third major organization and therefore the Canadian League, in that event, would not be taking any great chances.

JIMMY CALLAHAN 40 YEARS OLD

Examiner Special:

CHICAGO, Ill., March 18.—"Jimmy" Callahan, manager of the Chicago White Sox and one of the most popular men in baseball, reached his fortieth milestone to-day, having been born March 18, 1874, in Fitchburg, Mass. Callahan has spent just half of his forty years in baseball. In 1894 he was given a tryout by the Philadelphia Nationals. The next season he played with the Springfield Eastern league team, and in 1896 with the Kansas City team of the Western League.

From Kansas City he came to Chicago Nationals in 1899 and remained with that team until the American league started in 1900, when he jumped to the White Sox. In 1906 he left the big league and started an independent club in this city. In 1911, after an absence of five years from organized baseball, he returned to the White Sox and showed that his batting eye was just as keen as ever. In 1912 he became manager of the team.

"Cal" was one of the managers of the recent globe-girdling trip of the Giants and White Sox. Immediately after his arrival home he left to join his players who were training in California and is now accompanying the team on the journey eastward.

BASEBALL

The Brooklyn Nationals have returned Pitcher Herbert to the Toronto Club of the International League. He was drafted by the Superbas last fall.

After giving "Rabbit" Maranville the "once over" Johnny Evers declared that the Braves' shortstop is destined to be one of the greatest performers in baseball.

Manager Jack Hayden of the Louisville Colonels will take a team of fourteen Class A players to Cuba immediately after the close of the championship season.

At the age of 25 Walter Johnson is the veteran pitcher of the Washington team. Doehling, Engel and Gallia, the other heavers, are barely out of their teens.

Arthur Declin, former New York and Boston infielder, and now manager of the Oakland Pacific Coast League team, has decided to play third base for his team this year.

The Philadelphia world's champions have 16 pitchers under contract. It's a cinch that several of these flingers will never perform for the Mackmen.

The Chicago White Sox have knocked off training at Paso Dobles, Cal., and started for home. The regulars are in charge of Kid Gleason, while Billy Sullivan is piloting the No. 2 show.

Larry Lajoie, who has been detained in Florida, several weeks by the illness of his wife, has joined the Cleveland Naps at Athens, Ga. The great second sacker looks to be in tip-top shape.

Pitcher Geddy, who is showing considerable speed, is the only southpaw with the Phillies at the present time. Eppe Rixey, the Phils' star left hander, will not report until June.

Miller Huggins, manager of the Cardinals, is tackling a big job in trying to develop a new infield. The outlook is far from bright, with Konetchy and Mouroy gone and Hauser unable to play.

There may be two Class B championship series next fall. The Eastern Association and New England league have arranged post-season series and the New York State League will probably meet the Canadian League in a similar series.

Manager "Lefty" Davis of the Winona team is up against it in trying to sign his players. Davis won the Northern League pennant last season and now every man on the team is holding out for what "Lefty" calls a big league salary.

BOXING

Jimmy Clabby and Billy Murray have been matched to box in San Francisco on April 2.

"Bis" Mackey, the Cleveland featherweight who broke his arm in a recent bout with Joe Mosher, in England, is returning home.

Jack Britton has turned down an offer of $6,000 from Promoter Baker of Australia. Britton says that Baker must raise the ante to $10,000 before he will consider a trip to the Antipodes.

AN OLD STORY OFTEN REPEATED

"I don't see why the Lord should send this sickness to me! He must think I'm pretty bad and need punishing!"

You have heard that said more than once, and maybe have yourself wondered how it could be that so much suffering should come to one who might have done so much good in the world and who was so sorely needed at home. Just now these very words are ringing in my ears. They came from the lips of a farmer's wife, a woman of kindliest impulses and far more than ordinary intelligence.

But, may I whisper it in your ear? I don't honestly think the Lord had a single thing to do with that woman sickness, only as He made certain laws which you and I must live up to if we do not want to pay the penalty. I'll tell you how that dear woman came to be sick.

For months she had been working too hard. So many farmers' wives do just that thing. Their husbands do not notice it; they are busy with their work out on the farm and they do not see the tired look on the face of their dear one until it is too late. And she kept right on, day after day. Day after day she sat down to the table and ate with the rest. Sometimes she "had no appetite;" seemed to her she just could not swallow a mouthful; but they all put in such a plea for mother to come and eat with the rest that she had to come.

She did not know that every mouthful she took when in that condition was just so much poison. The poor body was too tired to take the food and properly digest it and it became waste in the bowels, to make her suffer still more; perhaps lying awake half the night, to get up next morning and go on the same way another day. The grey look in her face increased. She was weak and fairly staggering about the house. Then came the crisis—the bed, the doctor, the long sickness. And that is how we get sick. How do I know? Because I have been right there, through it all, and I know from bitter experience. Now, how do we get well?

The road back is many times a good deal longer than the road down to the bed of pain. But there is a good deal more pleasure in it, after all. It is worth while to climb the hill back to health cheerily and with a heart ready to see all the bright things there are along the way.

The doctor can help—if he is a man of sense. Just a few things he will do. The first thing he will say, "Now, let's stop eating a little while and drink." And he will give the poor, tired digestive apparatus a rest for which it has been longing and crying out for months. If there is good pure water to be had, he gives that very freely. In our own home we have for a good many years used a little water-still, which takes any kind of water and turns it into the softest, purest liquid imaginable. This always sits on the kitchen stove and we all take a hand in keeping the splendid apparatus supplied with the water as it comes from the well, and we all share in drinking it. Sick or well, we plan to drink all the water we want from this still. To make it taste better we set it away and cool it, stirring it now and then to let the air through it.

And this the doctor does for the sick woman. Then he says, "We need every bit of the pure air we can get in your room. So let's raise the window high, as high as we can get them. Yes, night, as well as day. It is not true that night air is dangerous as some folks used to think. Get all you can of it. And breathe it clear down to the bottom of your lungs. When you take in a breath, just lift your abdomen up as high as you can. Then slowly let it out. This will rest you and make your blood clean and pure. It will take time to do this, but we will win out all right. There is life in rest, pure water and all the fresh air we can use."

"But aren't you ever going to give her anything to eat?"

The friends about the bedside press that question until it gets to be a burden. They feel that the dear one is going to starve to death. It is the old, old notion that when we do not eat we will die. There is one thing I believe as firmly as I believe anything in all this world, and that is that nature knows when we ought to take nourishment better than any of our friends do, no matter how well they love us. It is absolutely wicked to press food on a person whose body is too sick to take care of it. Let's write that down in big letters and keep it where we can see it all the time. The dear one will not starve. Every moment food is kept away from her she is gaining something and getting just so much nearer back to health. Just wait and don't worry.

There will come a time when the system has worked off the dead matters of the food which has been taken in those days so long ago that you have almost forgotten them. Through the bowels, the kidneys, the pores of the skin and the lungs the impurities have been slowly gathered up and passed out. Rest, pure air, water and full breathing are the greatest remedial agents known to man. They beat the doctor all hollow, and he knows it, if he is fit to practice his profession.

And the day will come when the sick one will say, "I am hungry now!" Grand! Now the way is clear! Carefully, at first, for the poor body is weak, but hopefully, now we may begin to give the sick one food. Nothing hard to digest, but the simplest possible and not too much of it. Better a little and have that turned into good pure blood, than much, to become a clog on the digestive apparatus.

And this is the way up again.—Successful Farming.

POULTRY DISEASES

A disease common in poultry flocks is dysentery. This disease is due to different causes, the most common being improper feeding. Another frequent cause is chilling or overheating, especially in young chicks. The droppings are watery and sometimes streaked with blood.

To eradicate this disease from the flock mix a tablespoonful of raw bone to a pint of soft food and feed three times a week to all the chicks, whether affected or not. Another remedy is to boil two ounces of ginger and one of copperas in a gallon of water and moisten the feed with this liquid. Boiled rice is also good food. Avoid feeding corn.

When treating limber-neck in chicks, caused by eating putrid animal matter, either the decayed flesh or maggots, a good remedy is to put a tablespoonful of borax in a pint of water and feed three times a day, or give a pill of asafoetida the size of a split pea, night and morning. When affected with this disease the fowl cannot hold their heads upright and stagger, twisting them around.

When fowl are suffering from apoplexy they have a peculiar motion of the head and frequently fall from the perch. This disease is caused by a ruptured blood vessel due to too heavy feeding or violent exertion. It is generally useless to seek to effect a cure for this disease, but if noticed in time it may be checked by applying ice to the head and giving two teaspoonfuls of castor oil.

If the poultryman has a fair conception of the symptoms, causes, and treatment of various diseases that may affect his flock it may be the means of saving dollars for him.

"Ha! I paid a quarter apiece for the eggs. They made full-grown geese by Thanksgiving, but they didn't lay the next spring nor the next, nor the next, and if I don't have a big flock another year, I'll chop their heads off."

The irate woman gazed balefully anent her beautiful Black Africans taking a bath in her wash-water, then sent a barrel stave at the nearest swan-like neck.

It was exasperating to pay a dollar for four goose eggs, and waste the vacation of her biggest White Wyandotte to sit on them four weeks, then wait four seasons for the second generation of goslings. The trouble was, she hadn't acquainted herself with goose habits, or she would have known that mature geese are much more profitable than young ones, and that their productivity increases with age. That trio of geese and their gander would by another year yield her an income to exceed that of her best scrub cow, for each goose, instead of being allowed to sit, could be forced to lay a second and third clutch of eggs for home to incubate, and once goslings are out of the shell they call for little care and after the third week little short of crushing can kill one. The goslings, as she said, would bring Full-goose prices by the holidays, and in most places they could be marketed unplucked for target practice.—Kimball's Dairy Farmer.

OBITUARY

MRS. J. FRANKISH.

The funeral of the late Mrs. Jemima Frankish, of Lakefield, who died on Saturday last, took place on Monday afternoon at two o'clock to the Little Lake cemetery. Rev. Johnston, of Lakefield, performed the last rites.

Mrs. Frankish, formerly Miss Jemima Chamberlain, was born in Otonabee, some 71 years ago. Eight years ago, she removed to Lakefield, where she resided till the time of her demise. Her husband predeceased her ten years ago. The immediate cause of death was apoplexy, caused by a stroke, with which she was taken, and from which death ensued, almost immediately. The late Mrs. Frankish was a Methodist in religion.

The sisters and brothers are: Mrs. J. A. Fife, Smith; Mrs. J. H. Taylor, City; Mrs. D. Kelly, Otonabee; Mrs. Fred Reynolds, Douro; Mrs. John Dixon, Otonabee; Mr. W. E. Chamberlain, Douro; Mr. T. D. Chamberlain, Otonabee.

The late Mrs. Frankish was widely known, and highly respected by all who knew, and were acquainted with her, and her death will be a distinct loss to the whole neighbourhood, where she has for so long resided.

MUNICIPAL ASSOCIATION FOR EASTERN ONTARIO

(MAYOR BULLER)

Mayor Buller proposed a suggestion at last night's meeting of the Power committee which, if it ever materializes should be productive of numerous benefits to the eastern part of the province. Briefly, he recommends that steps be taken to form an association of municipalities in the eastern part of the province similar to that which exists in Western Ontario. Mayor Buller is so convinced of the necessity of such an organization that if no one else starts the ball rolling he will take the first steps himself.

If this Midland section of the province is to secure any attention the municipalities will have to get together and let the rest of the province and the Dominion know they are on the map. If any power, radial railway or other facilities are to be secured for this section of Ontario, they will not be obtained by silence and the inactivity of the dead. Too long, says the Mayor, have Peterborough and the neighbouring counties been dormant while west of Toronto there is a strong and decidedly active municipal association.

Will Others Help.

Mayor Buller feels that this work should be undertaken by the Boards of Trade, and believes that if some one would take the initial step it should only be a matter of time until there would be a vigorous association, ever alert in the interests of this section of the province. It will possibly follow that if the Mayor wishes to see this idea take form he will have to get behind it himself, approach the Mayors of surrounding towns and secure their co-operation.

POWER COMMITTEE WILL ASK FOR $4000 FOR MAGNETITE LAMPS

At a meeting of the Power Committee of the City Council last night it was decided to ask the Finance Minister for $4,000 for the maintenance of the Magnetite Arc lighting system for the present year.

The estimate presented by Mr. Johnston Greer of the cost of running 100 Magnetite lamps was as follows:

Lower electrodes	$ 420
Upper electrodes	136
Globe renewals	79
Rent	150
Coal	30
Sundries	100
Power	408
Int. and sinking fund	1500
Operating salary	1500
	$5163

This estimate is based on 100 lights being utilized by June 1st of this year.

From Jan. 1 to Feb. 23	$218
From Feb. 23 to May 31	190
	$408

Alderman Johnston explained that on Feb. 23 the lights were first staggered, and after midnight only every alternate lamp on one side is lighted. The committe desired to curtail expenses as much as possible until the Hydro situation was cleared up.

By the proposed extension of the lighting system referred to in another column, the number of old type arc lamps to be thrown out of use. The present system has cut out 12 arcs and two incandescents, the former cost $5 each a year, and the latter $12 each. Mr. Greer deducts this saving from the above $5,163.00.

Thus for one year the 12 arcs and 2 incandescents will save $624, and the proposed extension of the system will save 19 arcs and 7 incandescents, but only for seven months, as it is not expected that the extensions will be completed before June 1. These latter lights represent for seven months a saving of $603.19. The total is as follows:

12 arcs, 2 incan.—12 mos.	$ 624 00
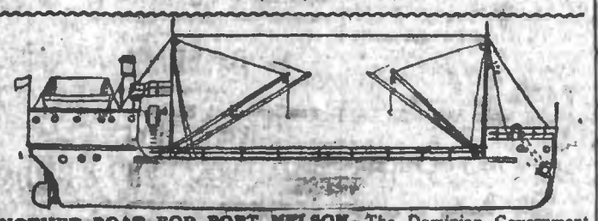
	$1227 19

This sum deducted from the $5,163 leaves $3935.81, or in round numbers $4000.



ANOTHER BOAT FOR PORT NELSON—The Dominion Government has ordered this third steel lighter, which is to be used to transfer cargoes at Port Nelson. It will cost $55,000, and is equipped with derricks for handling heavy cargoes.

ANOTHER GRANDSON FOR KAISER

FATE OF "KARLUK" CAUSES ANXIETY

Special Wire to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, March 18.—There is reason for the gravest anxiety regarding the fate of Steffanson, Steamer Karluk and crew which is indicated by a message received from Steffanson, who is himself safe on the mainland. A memorandum was sent from Mackenzie, Delta, on January 28th, and has just been received here. He says, "If only we had a wireless now at Herschell, the Karluk would also have wireless and we would know her whereabouts, to know which I would give anything."

TOM MANN

The noted British labour leader who is taking a deputation of labour leaders back to South Africa to proceed with a campaign on behalf of organized labour. They hope to take the places and do the work of the men who were deported. It is questionable if the South African Government will allow him to land.

CONSERVATIVES WERE IN CAUCUS

Special Wire to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, March 18.—The Conservatives were in caucus this morning from ten o'clock until after one, members from both chambers on the Conservative side being assembled on the question of C.N.R. aid. The caucus was by no means united, and insurgent members made themselves heard in no uncertain manner. Tariff matters were also under discussion and on this question there was considerable divergence of opinion. As a consequence of expression of opinion it is believed here that Mr. White's budget sheets will provide for some reduction in duties on implements and measures of aid from iron and steel men.

MAY BE A ROYALIST DEMONSTRATION

Special to The Examiner:

PARIS, March 18.—The funeral of M. Calmette, shot by Madame Caillaux, will be held Friday, and it is likely that the royalists will attempt to make it the occasion of a big demonstration similar to that which occurred at the funeral of Victor Moir, a noted French journalist, who was shot by Prince Pierre Bonaparte in 1870.

SKATES LEFT AT BROCK STREET RINK

A number of boots and skates have been left at Brock St. Rink, and Manager Thirtheck would like the owners to take their property away as soon as possible. The rink will be open every day this week and in the early part of the evenings.

CARE OF TURKEYS

During the winter season the stock turkeys should be fed and watered twice a day. Only sufficient food should be given to keep them in good healthy condition. When winter is over it is advisable to feed them a small amount of grain each evening to encourage them to return to their roosting quarters and thus prevent them from wandering away with other flocks.

The following ration is a good one for the springs: Mix equal parts by weight of corn or barley, oats and wheat screenings, and in addition to this grain feed should be supplied once a day. For this purpose mangels, cabbage, or clover leaves are the best. Grit and water should be supplied at all times.

NURSERY CORNER

To return to my nursery corner, after my fungus report, I use my last year's hot-bed for this year's cold frame, simply digging up the earth, and transplanting into it the lettuce and sowing radish seed. Cover with frames as in the case of the hot-bed, water daily and on cold nights cover the sashes with carpet or something of the kind.

Do you know the white "Icicle Radish?" It is the king of radishes, grows quickly in fine soil, is crisp, mild and transparent. The tops are small, but the bottoms are a constant surprise. I grow them in the early spring. During a dry, warm season, they grow too rapidly to seed, and I sow the seed in the autumn. Last November and until December I gathered splendid bunches of crisp beauties.

This is merely an introduction to gardening, but when the spring rouses in us a desire for the green, the hot-bed and cold frame, asparagus bed, and first of all the garden cress and winter onions, they give us a supply of Nature's tonic, better than all chemists nauseous mixtures.

Just a word about tools—light tools for women. Besides the necessary garden hoe and rake, have a digging fork and a light shovel for digging up roots and lifting soil. A potato hook is an excellent tool for loosening the earth. And last, but not least, buy an E-z one-wheel cultivator, plow, scuffler, hoe, banker and all combined. This is so light and does the work so quickly, you wonder if the work is not play. It pays for itself in one season, and is a woman's tool. Order it with your seeds from the seed-house. You'll not regret the outlay.

NEW MOTOR CLUB FOR LINDSAY.

Mr. W. W. Digby, first Vice-President of the Ontario Motor League, yesterday addressed a meeting of Lindsay motorists, with the result that a club was organized to work in the interests of securing new roads and road signs, and the welfare generally of motorists in the Lindsay district.

Stranger—Did a pedestrian pass this way a few minutes ago?

Granger — No, sor. I've been right onter this tater patch mor'n a hower, and notter blamed thing has passed 'cept one solitary man, an' he was trampin' 'erlong on foot.

BEST RESULTS

I know from experience that a flock of well bred birds of one variety will always do better than a flock of mixed breeds running together. If possible I always select my best layers to breed from. These generally are hens with long necks, deep bodies and full fluff.

It is generally conceded that the male bird is half the pen, hence it is essential to pick out a strong bird—one that has good stout legs, well set apart, quick action, good crow, bright red comb and wattles and cloak, glossy plumage. Eight or 10 hens mated to such a cock bird should make fertility a surety. To ensure fertility birds should not be too fat.

"Generally run down, sir" queried the druggist: "slightly seedy and want a good toning up?"

The pale-faced customer nodded.

"Well, I've the very thing for you, Jenkins' juvenator. Three dosen a day and more if necessary. Fifty a bottle."

"No, thanks," said the pale patient.

"But, my dear sir, it's the rage of the day. Jenkins' juvenator is the greatest discovery of modern science. It's the rage of the season. Everyone is rejuvenating, you might say."

"Yes, but I think I'd rather try something else," replied the customer.

"Nonsense," pressed the druggist, "I tell you Jenkins rejuvenator will have more effect on you in a single day than any other medicine could have in a month. It cures everything from coughs to corns. What is your objection to it?"

"Why, nothing, only I'm Jenkins."

PATERSON IS DEAD

The Former Minister of Customs Passes Away

HAD LONG PUBLIC CAREER

PICTON, Ont., March 19. — Hon. William Paterson, ex-Minister of Customs, is dead at the home of his daughter here at the age of 75 years. He had been in ill-health since his retirement from politics in 1911, and acutely ill throughout the winter. He passed away at his apartments, Johnston street, in the presence of his wife and daughter. Surviving members of the family are: William F., of Brantford; Charles G., professor of church history in Presbyterian College in California, and Mrs. Dr. M. E. Branscombe, Picton. The funeral will probably take place in Brantford on Saturday.

Hon. William Paterson was born in Hamilton in 1839. When he was ten years of age his parents died from cholera and he was adopted by the late Rev. Dr. Ferrier and taken to Caledonia, Ont. Educated in Hamilton and Caledonia, he in 1862 entered into partnership in Brantford as a biscuit manufacturer, and in 1876 became sole owner of the business.

His public career began when he served as deputy reeve of Brantford (1869-71) and as mayor (1872-3). He represented South Brant in Parliament from 1872 (when he defeated Sir Francis Hincks) until 1896, when he himself was defeated, but his opponent was also unseated later for the corrupt practices of his agents. Meantime Mr. Paterson was seated for North Grey. From 1900-4 he represented North Wentworth and Brant, and he sat for Brant 1904-11.

When the Laurier Government was formed, Mr. Paterson became controller of customs, and as such had much to do with framing the tariffs of 1897 and 1907. In 1897 he was sworn in as Minister of Customs, and frequently acted as Finance Minister in the absence of Mr. Fielding, with whom he acted in framing the reciprocity pact of 1911.

In 1903, he was one of the Canadian delegates to the Imperial Conference in London; he was a member of the Tariff Commission of 1905; in 1909, he was appointed by King Edward to act on the royal commission to report on trade relations between Canada and the West Indies. With Mrs. and Miss Paterson he was present by invitation at the coronation of the late King Edward, and was subsequently presented to the King and Queen, as well as to their present Majesties.

PARIS IS EXCITED.

Mob Charges Politicians With Sending Wives to Kill.

PARIS, March 19.—Mme. Caillaux seems to have become a popular heroine amid all the turmoil. Among the crowds of excited, gesticulating people her name is heard constantly. She is talked of as the victim of her love for her husband, and as his instrument in committing the crime which has robbed the press of a prominent writer and the French Cabinet of its leading spirit.

The crowds have adopted as their own the assertion of Deputy Delahaye in the Chamber Wednesday night that Cabinet Ministers nowadays use their wives to kill those obstructing their path.

The excitement among the populace is worked upon by the many sensational newspapers among the daily publications of Paris. These exaggerate, invent and hint at things, and the vendors yell the insinuations among the crowd, exciting the people still further.

BILL PUT THROUGH

Ferguson's Seat in Legislature Saved by Government

DEBATES THAT ARE DELAYED

TORONTO, March 19.—By sheer weight of superior numbers the Government has forced the suspension of the rules of the Legislature and in an all-night session saved the seat of George Howard Ferguson (Con., Grenville), which was forfeited under the rules on account of his having taken a remunerated position under the Dominion Government.

At 4.35 yesterday morning, when the daylight was peeping in at the Legislative windows, the Foy resolution to amend the Assemblies Act was put through its third reading and declared carried, on a division of 51 to 17. G. Howard Ferguson and others who have served the Federal Government for pay were thereby indemnified from forfeiture of their seats in the Legislature.

The debate on the rules went on during the night and eight divisions were taken on successive amendments offered by the Opposition in its effort to stay the suspension of the House rules in order to pass the indemnifying measure. The Government members slept for the most part in the smoking-room, only appearing in the chamber when the division bell rang.

Sir John Gibson appeared in the House for a few moments yesterday afternoon to approve its adoption and the measure became law amid cheering and desk-pounding from the Conservative benches.

In approaching the orders of the day, Mr. Rowell took exception to the Speaker's calling them out of the order in which they appeared on the order paper, referring particularly to Mr. Elliott's proposed amendment to the Municipal Act, allowing the vote to married women who were property owners. He said that question had now been before the House for a year and had been renewed at the beginning of the present session. If it was not the Government's intention to set a definite day to take the matter up, he would have recourse to rule 23 and have the order called.

Hon. Dr. Pyne, for the Government, stated that there were a number of bills dealing with the same subject and the Government wanted time to consider the matter thoroughly. In response to Mr. Rowell's renewed protest, he promised that the matter might be taken up by Tuesday or Wednesday of next week.

Mr. Rowell took objection again that the second reading of Mr. Anderson's bill, requiring the publication of contributions for political purposes, was being overlooked.

Hon. W. H. Hearst replied that Premier Whitney during the last session had had two such bills, one dealing with prohibition and the other with publication, up for consideration, and that the information necessary to an intelligent consideration of the matter by the House was still being gathered. He thought that this matter also might be taken up some time during next week.

The Opposition again recorded support of the bill to do away with the necessity of persons desirous of bringing damage action against the T. & N. O. having to first receive a fiat from the Attorney-General.

W. E. N. Sinclair (Lib.) argued that it was working a great hardship on the people, and that with the new subsidy in hand the railway was entitled to the same treatment accorded to others. Delay had been experienced by those living at a distance from the railway lines.

Hon. Mr. Foy replied that there was no reason for the bill. There never had been a delay in fiat issuance. Since January, 1913, only two applications had come, and one by letter had been answered in four days. Close attention was always paid to such cases, he said.

Mr. Rowell, supported by Messrs. Elliott and Magean, took up the argument by claiming that it was contrary to all legislation that people should get a fiat from the parties they were suing. The motion, however, was lost on a vote.

Texas Bandit Held Up Train.

BEAUMONT, Texas, March 19.—A lone robber held up the express messenger on a Santa Fe Railroad train near here yesterday and is reported to have secured $14,000. The robbery occurred on northbound train No. 202 at Helbig, fourteen miles north of here. Deputy sheriffs from Beaumont started in pursuit of the robber, who is said to have disappeared in a thickly-wooded country.

Asquith Promises Enquiry.

LONDON, March 19. — Premier Asquith promised an Irish deputation which interviewed him yesterday that he would appoint a committee of enquiry to investigate the question of the abandonment of the Port of Queenstown by the big steamships plying between England and the United States. The deputation was headed by the Lord Mayor of Dublin and the Lord Mayor of Cork.

Mayor Hit Reporter.

NIAGARA FALLS, March 19.—An apology from Mayor Wm. Laughton to E. Gooding, whom his worship assaulted Saturday, was the signal for the quashing of a warrant sworn out by Gooding, a newspaperman, yesterday. The apology was made public and appeared in the paper on which Gooding is employed.

BUXTON THE CHIEF.

Krafchenko Incriminates Man Who Assisted In His Escape.

WINNIPEG, March 19.—The story told on the witness stand Tuesday by Jack Krafchenko for the defence in the Hagel-Westlake case, and not printed then by the newspapers, at the request of the court, was published yesterday afternoon, permission being granted with the locking up of the jury at Morden.

In substance, Krafchenko's story relieves Hagel and Westlake of all complicity in his escape, and points to Buxton as the chief actor in this phase of the prison drama, and Reid as an active assistant. Krafchenko acquits Westlake, who is charged with harboring him after his escape, by saying that it was Buxton who was to meet him at the Burriss block, and when he found a strange man there he held him up and kept him practically a prisoner. This man was Westlake. Throughout his several hours of examination and cross-examination, Jack stuck to his story in a most ingenious manner, and related the exciting incidents in a most plausible manner.

Thousands Were Drowned.

LONDON, March 19.—A St. Petersburg despatch to The Times says: "It is estimated that between 1,500 and 2,000 persons perished in the storm, and that 150 boats were sunk in the Black Sea.

TESSIER IS RETURNED.

Sir Lomer Gouin's New Minister Has Majority of 800.

THREE RIVERS, Que., March 18. —A hotly-contested provincial bye-election, following the appointment of Hon. J. Tessier to the new portfolio of Minister of Roads in the Gouin Cabinet closed yesterday, the Government retaining the seat over J. A. Dery, Conservative, by a majority of 803.

The Opposition speakers vigorously denounced the Government for not instituting a more thorough investigation into accusations made during the recent graft enquiry. It was argued, among other things, that some members were in the habit of receiving big legal fees for putting measures through the House, and that these fees were really bribes. Mr. Tessier's conduct as mayor of Three Rivers was also assailed.

GRAND LODGE OPENS.

Ontario East Orangemen Begin Session at Lindsay.

LINDSAY, Ont., March 19. — The twenty-eighth annual session of the Grand Chapter of Ontario East Royal Black Knights of Ireland came to a close at noon yesterday with the election of officers. A signal honor was conferred on a Lindsay knight in the election of Sir Knight William Warren to the position of grand master of the Grand Chapter of Ontario East.

The Grand Orange Lodge of the Province of Ontario East opened in scarlet degree in the town hall yesterday afternoon, with R. W. Grand Master F. W. Fards of Ottawa in the chair.

The session promises to be the largest ever held under the auspices of the grand lodge, already nearly 400 delegates being in attendance.

One More Airman Killed.

METZ, March 19.—Lieut. Bongard, a German military aviator, died here yesterday from a fractured skull, caused by an aeroplane accident on Tuesday night. The aviator, while trying to glide to the landing place, turned the machine too sharply downward, causing it to turn over and crash to the ground.

SALTS FINE FOR ACHING KIDNEYS

We Eat Too Much Meat Which Clogs Kidneys. Then the Back Hurts

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, get sluggish and clogged and need a flushing occasionally, else we have headache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness and all sorts of bladder disorders.

You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean, and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good drug store here, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is harmless to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity. It also neutralizes the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is harmless; inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everybody should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean, thus avoiding serious complications.

A well-known local druggist says he sells lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming trouble while it is only trouble.

"THE MAYOR'S WIFE"

By ANNA KATHARINE GREEN

She did not think of the ghost at first, her thoughts were so full of the child; but when a board creaked in the hall floor, a board that always creaked when stepped on, she remembered the reputation and what had been told her about a creaking board and a light that came and went without human agency. Frightened for a minute, she stood stock-still, then she rushed down. Whatever it was, natural or supernatural, she went to see it; but the light vanished before she passed the lower stair, and only a long-drawn sigh not far from her ear warned her that the space between her and the real hall was not the solitude she was anxious to consider it. A sigh! That meant a person. Stejking a match, she looked eagerly down the hall. Something was moving between the two walls. But when she tried to determine its character, it was swallowed up in darkness,—the match had gone out. Anxious for the child and determined to go her way to the kitchen, she now felt about for the gas-fixture and succeeded in lighting up. The whole hall again burst into view but the thing was no longer there; the space was absolutely empty. And so were the other rooms, for she went into every one, lighting the gas as she went; and so was the cellar when she reached it. For she had to go to its extreme length for wood and wait about the kitchen till the water boiled, during which time she searched every nook and cranny. Oh, she was a brave woman, but she did have this thought as she went upstairs: If the child died she would know that she had seen a spirit; if the child got well, that she had been the victim of her own excitement.

And did the child die?

"No, it got well, but the family moved out as soon as it was safe to leave the house. Her employees did not feel as easy about the matter as she did."

CHAPTER V.

THE STRANGE NEIGHBOURS NEXT DOOR.

When I joined Mrs. Packard I found her cheerful and in all respects quite unlike the brooding woman she had seemed when I first met her. From the toys scattered about her feet I judged that the child had been with her, and certainly the light in her eyes had the beaming quality we associate with the happy mother. She was beautiful thus and my hopes of her restoration to happiness rose.

"I have had a good night," were her first words as she welcomed me to a seat in her own little nook. "I'm feeling very well this morning. That is why I have brought out this big piece of work." She held up a baby's coat she was embroidering. "I can not do it when I am nervous. Are you ever nervous?"

Delighted to enter into conversation with her, I answered in a way to lead her to talk about herself, then, seeing she was in a favourable mood for gossip, was on the point of venturing all in a leading question, when she suddenly forestalled me by putting one to me.

"Were you ever the prey of an idea?" she asked; "one which you could not shake off by any ordinary means, one which clung to you night and day till nothing else seemed real or would rouse the slightest interest? I mean a — a religious idea," she stammered with anxious attempt to hide her real thought. "One of those doubts which come to you in the full swing of life to—to frighten and unsettle you."

"Yes," I answered, as naturally and quietly as I knew how; "I have had such ideas—such doubts."

"And were you able to throw them off?—by your will, I mean."

She was leaning forward, her eyes fixed eagerly on mine. How unexpected the privilege! I felt that in another moment her secret would be mine.

"In time, yes," I smiled back. "Everything yields to time and persistent conscientious work."

"But if you can not wait for time, if you must be relieved at once, can the will be made to suffice, when the day is dark and one is alone and not too busy?"

"The will can do much," I insisted. "Dark thoughts can be kept down by sheer determination. But it is better to fill the mind so full with what is pleasant that no room is left for gloom. There is so much to enjoy it must take a real sorrow to disturb a heart resolved to be happy."

"Yes, resolved to be happy. I am resolved to be happy." And she laughed merrily for a moment. "Nothing else pays. I will not dwell on anything but the pleasures which surround me." Here she took up her work again. "I will forget — I will—" She stopped and her eyes left her work to flash a rapid and involuntary glance over her shoulder. Had she heard a step? I had not. Or had she felt a draft of which I in my bounding health was unconscious?

"Are you cold?" I asked, as her glance stole back to mine. "You are shivering—"

"Oh, no," she answered coldly, almost proudly. "I'm perfectly warm. I don't feel slight changes. I thought some one was behind me. I felt — Is Ellen in the adjoining room?"

I jumped up and moved toward the ajar, but Ellen was not behind it. door she indicated. It was slightly ajar, but Ellen was not behind it.

"There's no one here," said I.

She did not answer. She was bending again over her work, and gave no indication of speaking again on that or the more serious topic we had previously been discussing.

Naturally I felt disappointed. I had hoped much from the conversation, and now these hopes bade fair to fail me. How could I restore matters to their former basis? Idly I glanced out of the side window I was passing, and the view of the adjoining house I thus gained acted like an inspiration. I would test her on a new topic, in the hope of reintroducing the old. The glimpse I had gained into Mrs. Packard's mind must not be lost quite as soon as this.

"You asked me a moment ago if I were ever nervous," I began, as I regained my seat at her side. "I replied, 'Sometimes'; but I might have said if I had not feared being too abrupt, 'Never till I came into this house.'"

Her surprise partook more of curiosity than I expected.

"You are nervous here," she repeated. "What is the reason of that, pray? Has Ellen been chattering to you? I thought she knew enough not to do that. There's nothing to fear here, Miss Saunders; absolutely nothing for you to fear. I should not have allowed you to remain here a night if there had been. No ghost will visit you."

"No, I hear they never wander above the second storey," I laughed. "If they did I should hardly anticipate the honour of a visit. It is not ghosts I fear; it is something quite different which affects me,—living eyes, living passions, the old ladies next door," I finished falteringly, for Mrs. Packard was looking at me with a show of startling alarm. "They stare into my room night and day. I never look out but I encounter the uncanny glance of one or the other of them. Are they live women or embodied memories of the past? They don't seem to belong to the present. I own that they frighten me."

I had exaggerated my feelings in order to mark their effect upon her. The result disappointed me; she was not afraid of these two poor old women. Far from it.

"Draw your curtains," she laughed. "The poor things are crazy and not really accountable. Their odd ways and manners troubled me at first, but I soon got over it. I have even been in to see them. That was to keep them from coming here. I think if you were to call upon them they would leave you alone after that. They are very fond of being called on. They are persons of the highest gentility, you know. They owned this house a few years ago, as well as the one they are now living in, but misfortunes overtook them and this one was sold for debt. I am very sorry for them myself. Sometimes I think they have not enough to eat."

"Tell me about them." I urged. Lightly as she treated the topic I felt convinced that these strange neighbours of hers were more or less involved in the mystery of her own peculiar moods and unaccountable fears.

"It's a great secret," she announced naively. "That is, their personal history. I have never told it to any one. I have never told it to my husband. They confided it to me in a sort of desperation, perhaps because my husband's name inspired them with confidence. Immediately after, I could see that they regretted the impulse, and so I have remained silent. But I feel like telling you; feel as if it would divert me to do so—keep me from thinking of other things. You won't want to talk about it and the story will cure your nervousness."

"Do you want me to promise not to talk about it?" I inquired in some anxiety.

"No. You have a good, true face; a face which immediately inspires confidence. I shall exact no promises. I can rely on your judgment."

I thanked her. I was glad not to be obliged to promise secrecy. It might become my imperative duty to disregard such a promise.

"You have seen both of their faces?" she asked.

I nodded.

"Then you must have observed the difference between them. There is the same difference in their minds, though both are clouded. One is weak almost to the point of idiocy, though strong enough where her one settled idea is concerned. The other was once a notable character, but her fine traits have almost vanished under the spell which has been laid upon them by the immense disappointment which has wrecked both their lives. I heard it all from Miss Thankful the day after we entered this house. Miss Thankful is the older and more intellectual one. I had known very little about them before; no more, in fact, than I have already told you. I was consequently much astonished when they called, for I had supposed them to be veritable recluses, but I was still more astonished when I noted their manner and the agitated and strangely penetrating looks they cast about them as I ushered them into the library, which was the only room I had had time to arrange. A few minutes' further observation of them showed me that neither of them was quite right. Instead of entering into conversation with me they continued to cast restless glances at the walls, ceilings, and even at the floor of the room in which we sat, and when, in the hope of attracting their attention to myself, I addressed them on some topic which I thought would be interesting to them, they not only failed to listen, but turned upon each other with slowly wagging heads, which not only revealed their condition but awakened me to its probable cause. They were between walls rendered dear by old associations. Till their first agitation was over I could not hope for their attention.

"But their agitation gave no signs of diminishing and I soon saw that their visit was far from being a ceremonial one; that it was one of definite purpose. Preparing myself for I knew not what, I regarded them with such open interest that before I knew it, and, quite before I was ready for any such exhibition, they were both on their knees before me, holding up their meagre arms with beseeching and babbling words which I did not understand till later.

"I was shocked, as you may believe, and quickly raised them, at which Miss Thankful told me their story, which I will now tell you.

"There were four of them originally, three sisters and one brother. The brother early went West and disappeared out of their lives, and the third sister married. This was years and years ago, when they were all young. From this marriage sprang all their misfortune. The nephew which this marriage introduced to their family became their bane as well as their delight. From being a careless spendthrift boy he became a reckless, scheming man, adding extravagance to extravagance, till, to support him and meet his debts, these poor aunts gave up first their luxuries, then their home and finally their very livelihood. Not that they acknowledged this. The feeling they both cherished for him was more akin to infatuation than to ordinary family love. They did not miss their luxuries, they did not mourn their home, they did not even mourn their privations; but they were broken-hearted and had been so for a long time, because they could no longer do for him as of old. Shabby themselves, and evidently ill-nourished, they grieved not over their own changed lot, but over his. They could not be reconciled, to his lack of luxuries, much less to the difficulties in which he frequently found himself, who was made to ruffle it with the best and be the pride of their lives as he was the darling of their hearts. All this the poor old things made apparent to me, but their story did not become really interesting till they began to speak of this house we are in, and of certain events which followed their removal to the ramshackle dwelling next door. The sale of this portion of the property had relieved them from their debts, but they were otherwise penniless, and were just planning the renting of their rooms at prices which would barely serve to provide them with a scanty living, when there came a letter from their graceless nephew, asking for a large amount of money to save him from complete disgrace. They had no money, and were in the midst of their sorrow and perplexity, when a carriage drove up to the door of this house and from it issued an old and very sick man—their long absent and almost forgotten brother. He had come home to die, and when told his sisters' circumstances, and how soon the house next door would be filled with lodgers, insisted upon having this place of his birth, which was empty at the time, opened for his use. The owner, after long continued entreaties from the poor old sisters, finally consented to the arrangement. A bed was made up in the library, and the old man laid on it."

"Were there ghosts in those days?" I lightly asked.

Her answer was calm enough.

"Not yet, but the place must have been desolate enough for one. I have sometimes tried to imagine the scene surrounding that broken-down old man. There was no furniture in the room, save what was indispensable to his bare comfort. Miss Thankful expressly said there was no carpet,—you will presently see why. Even the windows had no other protection than the bare shutters. But he was in his old home, and seemed content till Miss Charity fell sick, and they had to call in a nurse to assist Miss Thankful, who by this time had a dozen lodgers to look after. Then he grew very restless. Miss Thankful said he seemed to be afraid of this nurse, and always had a fever after having been left alone with her; but he gave no reason for his fears, and she herself was too straitened in means and in too much trouble otherwise to be affected by such mere whims, and went on doing her best, sitting with him whenever the opportunity offered, and making every effort to conceal the anxiety she felt for her poor nephew from her equally poor brother. The disease under which the brother laboured was a fatal one, and he had not many days to live. She was startled when one day her brother greeted her appearance with an earnest entreaty for the nurse to be sent out for a little while, as this was his last day, and he had something of great importance to communicate to her before he died.

"She had not dreamed of his being so low as this, but when she came to look at him, she saw that he had not misstated his case, and that he was really very near death. She was in a flurry and wanted to call in the neighbours and rout her sister up from her own sick bed to care for him. But he wanted nothing and nobody, only to be left alone with her.

"So she sent the nurse out and sat down on the side of the bed to hear what he had to say to her, for he looked very eager and was smiling in a way to make her heart ache.

This Home-made Cough Syrup Will Surprise You

Stops Even Whooping Cough Quickly. A Family Supply at Small Cost.

Here is a home-made remedy that takes hold of a cough instantly, and will usually cure the most stubborn case in 24 hours. This recipe makes 16 ounces—enough for a whole family. You couldn't buy as much or as good ready-made cough syrup for $2.50.

Mix two cups of granulated sugar with one cup of warm water, and stir two minutes. Put 2½ ounces of Pinex (fifty cents' worth) in a 16-ounce bottle, and add the sugar syrup. This keeps perfectly and has a pleasant taste—children like it. Braces up the appetite and is slightly laxative, which helps end a cough.

You probably know the medical value of pine in treating asthma, bronchitis and other throat troubles, sore lungs, etc. There is nothing better. Pinex is the most valuable concentrated compound of Norway white pine extract, rich in guaiacol and all the natural healing pine elements. Other preparations will not work in this formula.

The prompt results from this inexpensive remedy have made friends for it in thousands of homes in the United States and Canada, which explains why the plan has been imitated often, but never successfully.

A guaranty of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this recipe. Your druggist has Pinex, or will get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

Next To Consumption.

There Are More Deaths From PNEUMONIA Than Any Other Lung Trouble.

Pneumonia is nothing more or less than what used to be called "Inflammation of the Lungs."

Consumption may be contracted from others, but as a rule pneumonia is caused by exposure to cold and wet, and there is only one way to prevent pneumonia, and that is to cure the cold on its first appearance.

Dr Wood's Norway Pine Syrup will do this for you if you will only take it in time.

Mrs. Wm. M. Steeves, River Glade, N.B., writes:—"Please allow me to express my gratitude for the presence of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup in the house, for I believe it saved our little boy's life. Three years this fall we were in the lumber woods, and it was very hard to get a doctor to us, and our little boy got pneumonia, and was very ill. The only relief he could get was to take Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, and with the combined use of the Syrup, and your British Troop Oil Liniment, he soon got better, and was around in a couple of weeks. It certainly is a great remedy."

Price, 25 and 50 cents.

Be sure and get "Dr. Wood's" when you ask for it. Manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

How often is this true of hundreds of us. We're not really sick, but feel sluggish, out of sorts, our keenness and activity are impaired. The chief cause for this is constipation. When you feel that way, take

"While on a trip with a survey party in Northern Ontario two years ago, I contracted rheumatism through exposure and sleeping in damp clothes. When I returned home I was very bad and the pain in my joints was something awful. I was advised to try Wesden's Kidney Pills, and after taking four boxes my rheumatism was entirely gone. Last year I was up on the survey party again, but I was never without a box of Wesden's Kidney Pills, and have never had the slightest return of it.

EFFECTIVE SPRING TONIC OVERCAME WEAKNESS

System Was All Run Down—Could Not Attend to Work—Lasting Cure Effected by Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

The cold, changeable Canadian winter is a severe strain on all who are not in robust health. This is proved by the many deaths, particularly of aged people, which occur about March, and the very many people who find themselves weak and run down in the Spring.

The overeating of heavy foods and living in stuffy rooms, where the air is laden with poisons, leave the blood impure in the spring. You must have something to restore vigour, and, as stated in this letter, Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is the most effective spring tonic.

If you have any doubt on this point just read the letters that are appearing daily in this paper from persons who have proved the efficiacy of this great food cure. No medicine ever aroused so much enthusiasm in those who have used it.

Mr. A. Sicard, Dana, Sask., writes: "When I began to use Dr. Chase's Nerve Food my system was so much run down that I was weak and exhausted, and could not attend to my work. The effect of the Nerve Food was almost like magic, for in a few days the weakness wore away, and I found strength and vigour being restored to the body. That cure was effected three years ago, but I generally use the Nerve Food in the Spring as I can find no treatment so effective as a spring tonic."

You can avoid the headaches, the depression, the indigestion and tired, wornout feelings this spring if you begin at once the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. This great prescription enriches the blood, and there is no germicide so effective as pure, rich blood. Fifty cents a box, 6 for $2.50. All dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

NEWS AND GOSSIP OF THE WEEK FROM LONDON AND BERLIN

"THE SLEEPING BEAUTY" ACTED IN PANTOMIME BY BERLIN SOCIETY

Brilliant Entertainment Is Witnessed in the Royal Theatre, in Which Historic and Bright Costumes and Rare Jewels Are Worn by the Very Distinguished Actors.

DR. RICHARD STRAUSS WATCHES THE TANGO

(Special Dispatch.)

BERLIN, March 14.

No more brilliantly successful charity fete ever has taken place in Berlin than the amateur theatrical pantomime at the Royal Theatre for the benefit of the Paul Gerhardt Institute, one of the pet charities of the Empress. Countess von der Groeben organized the affair and for weeks her salons have been the scene of animated rehearsals.

The Royal Theatre never before was granted for such a purpose. It was filled to overflowing, the Kaiserin appearing in the royal box, accompanied by Prince and Princess August Wilhelm, Prince and Princess Friedrich Wilhelm and the Duke and Duchess of Schleswig-Holstein.

The pantomime was arranged from the popular fairy tale, "The Sleeping Beauty," the title role being played by Countess Alice Yvonne. Prince Charming was impersonated by Count Kraft Henckel von Donnersmarck. Eighty persons of the exclusive German aristocracy participated and historic and brilliant costumes and a splendid display of family jewels were in evidence, pear shaped pearls of great size attracting particular attention in the head dress of Princess Max of Thurn and Taxis, who was impersonating the Sultana of Mesopotamia, with Prince Ysenstenberg as the Sultan.

The only American in the cast was Countess Moltke, wife of the Danish Minister, who formerly was Miss Cornelia Thayer, of Boston.

AMERICANS ON TOUR.

The spring exodus of Americans who have been in Berlin for the winter began this week, when Dr. George H. Allen, director of the Berlin office of the Bureau of University Travel, started south with a large party to see Southern Germany, Switzerland and Paris. Among those leaving were Mrs. George H. Allen, Mrs. George B. Townsend, of Chicago; Mrs. Terrill and Miss Terrill, of Middletown, Conn.; Mrs. Charles E. Johannes, of Omaha; Mrs. Ryder, of Charlestown, W. Va.; Mrs. James Phillips and Miss Phillips, of Marion, Ohio; Mrs. C. B. Nash, of Omaha; Miss Edith B. Wilcox, of Boston; Mrs. H. T. Richards and Miss Helen Mason, of Los Angeles, who will join the party at Munich; Mr. and Mrs. Myers and Miss Myers and Miss Nash, of Omaha, who will join the party at Florence.

Professor Paul Shorey, Roosevelt professor in Berlin University, and Mrs. Shorey will leave for Rome next week, where they will be among the second group of Americans presented at court. A farewell dinner was given for them this week by Mr. and Mrs. Stephen H. McFadden.

Mr. Henry Theobald, of Toledo, and Mrs. Theobald have left for Vienna and Southern Europe.

EVENTS OF THE WEEK.

Mr. Albert B. Ruddock, of the American Embassy, will devote his annual leave of two months to a sojourn in Greece. He and Mrs. Ruddock left Berlin on Sunday after giving a farewell dancing party on Saturday, among the guests being Prince August Wilhelm, Princess Friedrich Karl von Hohenlohe and her daughter, Princess Erika; the Danish Minister and Countess Moltke, the American Naval Attaché and Mrs. Gherardi, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Gurney, of the British Embassy; Marquis de Nobili, Mrs. B. J. Lace and Miss Margaret Lace.

Lieutenant Commander and Mrs. Gherardi returned from Kiel this week, where the former had been on official business.

Mrs. Gerard, wife of the American Ambassador, held the first of her reception days for Americans. These receptions will be on the first Thursday of each month.

The largest dinner of the week in diplomatic circles was at the Kaiserhof of the Hotel Adlon, and was given by the Cuban Minister and Mme. de Quesada for the Japanese Ambassador and Mme. Songhimoura.

The annual reception of the Berlin Foreign Press Society will be held at the Hotel Esplanade on March 25.

Miss Lelia Hoelterhoff, daughter of Mr. Godfrey Hoelterhoff, of Los Angeles, gave a concert for the benefit of the School for the Blind, in St. Egilts, near Berlin. She has just finished a series of Wagnerian talks in the lecture room of the American Church.

TANGO FOR DR. STRAUSS.

Dr. and Mrs. Richard Strauss attended the regular weekly tango tea of the Boston Club, held in the Hotel Cumberland. Dr. Strauss is not a friend of the tango, but is open to conviction, and his wife persuaded him to see the new dance and pass judgment on it.

Mrs. Berthold Israel gave a Thé Dansant, the majority of her guests being members of the Boston Club. New dances flourished. Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Kuredhan, Mrs. H. S. Downe, Dr. and Mrs. Arthur Davis, Miss Louise Cavalli, Misses Hirsch, Mr. Edward Downe and Mr. Lucien Phillips.

Mr. George Hamlin, of Chicago, a tenor, accompanied by Mrs. Hamlin, arrived in Berlin on Monday and has taken an apartment and expects to remain for some time.

Señor Pulido and his wife have arrived at the Adlon to join Mr. and Mrs. John F. Betz, of Philadelphia, en route for Russia from St. Moritz, and Mr. and Mrs. Betz expect to make an extensive Continental tour with Mr. and Mrs. John Beigel, of New York.

The latest arrivals at the Adlon include Mr. Louis Lemaire, of New York; Mr. Walter H. Schultz, of San Francisco, who has returned to confer with merchants concerning the Panama Exhibition; Mr. Charles S. Allen, of Cleveland; Mr. E. P. Calderhead, of New York, and Mr. and Mrs. Murray C. Mayer, of Chicago, who will pass a month here, and the Misses Esther and Helen Foss, daughters of the man once Governor of Massachusetts, who are here from Dresden for a few days, chaperoned by Miss E. F. Butler, of Boston.

A SILVER GILT CUP AND COVER

A SILVER GILT ROSEWATER DISH

Treasures of Past Centuries That Have Been in Bank Cellar for Ages.

(Special Dispatch.)

LONDON, March 14.

THE most wonderful collection of old silver of the sixteenth, seventeenth and eighteenth centuries which has been offered in a sale for many years is to be dispersed at Christie's on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, March 24, 25 and 26, bringing connoisseurs from all parts of Europe to contest for the treasures. It is the property of the late Earl of Ashburnham, and most of it has been lying almost forgotten in the cellars of a bank for ages.

One piece in particular which is sure to cause a keen contest for possession is a wonderful Henry VII. silver-gilt standing salt and cover, a typical example of late Gothic art. Fashioned in the last year of the reign of Henry VII. to commemorate the marriage of a Berkeley heiress with an Ashburnham, it illustrates the last glories of the table pomp of the Tudors. This sumptuous standing-salt, twelve and one-quarter inches high, "in form resembles an hour-glass with conical cover, in turn surmounted by a nearly spherical ornament. Applied figures of mermaids cover the surface, the use of this ornament definitely connecting the salt with the historic house of Berkeley, it being the family badge.

There is sure to be another contest over the silver-gilt rosewater dish by Benvenuto Cellini. It is said to compare with the Cellini trophies at the Uffizi and the Pitti, or with that in the Durazzo Palace at Genoa, and is supposed to have been carried off by Bertram, fourth Earl of Ashburnham, when he was searching Europe to form that great library of rare books and manuscripts associated with his name.

A Charles II. oviform vase and domed cover and a pair of weighty Charles II. bottles and stoppers are embossed and chased with acanthus foliage and swags of fruit, and bear the maker's mark, 1675.

There is a Charles II. tazza, the centre of which is engraved with two coats of arms in plume mantling, one that of the College of Physicians and the other of the president, dated 1661. A centrepiece, formed as an oval bowl and cover, pierced and engraved with trellis work and rosettes and supported by figures of two goats, has an oval stand chased with shells and foliage, and bears the arms of John, Second Earl of Nunburnham, and Elizabeth Crowle, his wife. A massive George I. oval cistern, weighing 65[illegible] ounces, is engraved with bands of bold gadrooning, the interior of the bowl being engraved with the arms of Crowley impaling Gascoigne.

Among the German silver is a silver gilt ewer and cover, with vase shaped body repoussé and chased with sporting dolphins in two panels, enclosed with scroll work, which in turn issues into two grotesque masks and recalls the work of Van Vianen, of Utrecht. A silver gilt cup and cover of Nuremburg seventeenth century workmanship is formed as a nautilus shell, the lip engraved with Nessus, Dejanira and Neptune, the lower part chased with dolphins and waves in foliage and scroll borders, while the stem is chased as a figure of a negro kneeling.

Among the 233 lots there are many exceptionally fine specimens of George I. and George II. cups and covers, salvers, Queen Anne rosewater dishes and beakers, Charles II. bottles, boxes and other valuable pieces.

SCIENTISTS ASTOUNDED AT DOG WITH HUMAN MIND

Berlin Boasts of Canine Which Speaks German, Dictates Letters and in Many Other Ways Shows Signs of Intelligence Almost Beyond Belief.

(Special Dispatch.)

BERLIN, March 14.

ROLF, a shaggy Skye terrier, who "talks" by means of "paw language," is mystifying the scientists of Germany. The little animal reads, counts, adds, subtracts, multiplies, divides, dictates, replies to letters received by him, and even discusses religion.

Rolf is owned by Frau Dr. F. Moeckel, the invalid wife of a prominent lawyer of Mannheim, whose house has become the rendezvous of learned professors, who have submitted Rolf to extraordinary experiments, with astounding results. What adds to the peculiarity of Frau Moeckel's dog is that, unlike the famous Elberfeld horses trained by Herr Krall, he is largely self-educated.

Ever since Frau Moeckel purchased him he has been the constant companion of her children. He was allowed to sit by the side of Frau Moeckel's little girl during lessons, and, as it is now recalled, always paid the closest attention. The discovery of Rolf's learning was made during one of these lessons.

Frau Moeckel states that one day her little girl was unable to answer a simple question in mental arithmetic, when she exclaimed, "How stupid! Why, even Rolf could answer that. Couldn't you, Rolf?" To the amazement of mother and child, Rolf lifted his right paw and beat the exact answer to the problem.

It was naturally thought that the answer was a mere coincidence; but when they gave Rolf another problem he again returned the correct answer. A third and fourth test followed, until it was evident that the dog knew what he was talking about. Frau Moeckel then took him in hand and began to educate him.

An alphabet was fixed up. Frau Moeckel asking:—"Rolf, how many 'paws' do you want for 'A,' how many for 'B,' &c.?" The dog himself designated how many beats of his foot would designate the different letters by which he spells out his thoughts, ideas and answers. Like the Elberfeld horses, Rolf uses something like Colonel Roosevelt's "simplified spelling." He eliminates all useless letters.

Some of the things that are related and written about the "Mannheim dog," as he is known, are so fantastic that they would be unbelievable were it not for the fact that they are attested by men whose word is beyond doubt. A professor from Basle has made on his experience with Rolf, a report that reads like romance. He says:—

"Frau Moeckel has just received a letter addressed to Rolf from a gentleman who had come to see the dog and of whom Rolf had grown very fond. The letter read:—'Dear Rolf—I still think very often of you and how kind and nice you worked for me. I have told our Pick (the gentleman's own dog) about it. He cannot read, speak or calculate yet. We also have a dachshund, but I am sorry to say he is sick. Many greetings.'

"Before my eyes Rolf dictated with his paw the following reply:—'Lib' big hel mudr gomn Irnn dagi aug' dogdr hoin grus Rol.' (Free translation:—'Dear Pick (the professor) had come to see him. Rolf answered, "To see Rolf work." The letter "M." was written on a piece of paper and Rolf was told to give some words starting with that letter. He answered:—"Grube man, Michel." The latter is the name of a servant in the house. While the professor was talking with the dog a motor car went by in the street. A few moments later he was asked what had just passed the house. Rolf replied laconically:—"Auto."

A companion of Rolf was stop to have some pumpkin. Frau Dr. Moeckel mentioned the fact to the professor and then, turning to Rolf, asked, "What will come soon?"

"Little Rolf," he pawed out in phonetic German. The professor asked, "What is my name?" "Wolf" spelt out the dog, correctly. "Where did I come from?" "Rhine" was the answer. As no mention of the professor's name or Basle had been made, it was concluded that he remembered it from the evening before, when Frau Moeckel had told the dog that a gentleman by that name was coming from Basle the next day.

One of a large number of cards containing letters and objects in various colors was selected and shown to the dog without either the professor or Frau Moeckel first looking at it. "Red, blau, grün" (red, blue, green) was the answer. On looking at the card it was found that there were two red, two blue and one green object.

One day after Rolf had been doing examples in cube roots, a professor remarked that was unnecessary and did not count for much, as even idiots and epileptics were known to have such ability. When Rolf next day was asked to extract cube roots, he replied, "Gentlemen said not necessary."

Rolf found a dead hen in the yard. Asked where it had gone to, replied, "Urseele" (overcoat or "original coat"). Asked where he came from, he again replied "Urseele." Professor Ziegler, of Stuttgart, showed Rolf two two-mark coins and a ten pfennig piece with, "How many marks?" "Four," replied Rolf, after glancing at the money. "How many pfennig?" "Ten," promptly came the reply. When shown a picture of a child in a bath tub, and asked what it represented, the dog replied, "Bath wish (with) Carle is a little child in the bath," as he often had seen being bathed.

MARIE CORELLI IS VERY MUCH ALIVE

(Special Dispatch.)

LONDON, March 14.

MISS MARIE CORELLI is still alive. She says so herself, and she ought to know. She adds that she is in possession of all her faculties.

The Birmingham Daily Mail facetiously asked recently, "Where is Miss Marie Corelli?" and in reply has received a long letter from the novelist, in which she says:—

"I have certainly withdrawn for a time to a retired literary corner, overpowered by the crowd of stupendous geniuses (according to publishers' advertisements) who occupy it, considering it but just and decent to stand aside out of the glittering galaxy of these many marvels of the age.

"I am not waiting till the clouds roll by, but only till the dazzling predecessors of publishers' planets sweep onward in their brilliant course.

"Then, perhaps, I may venture humbly forth with a little book in a limited edition, of which Birmingham may perhaps generously purchase one copy.

"I put it at this modest figure, because from my very first beginning I have never suited the literary taste of Birmingham, though this distressing state of things has not yet moved me to tears."

FIRST RULE OF NAVY, "KEEP YOUR HAIR ON," SAYS KING GEORGE V.

Motto on Wall of Young Men's Christian Association Building Recalls This to the Monarch, Who With His Queen Makes Surprise Calls on Institutions for General Welfare.

(Special Dispatch.)

LONDON, March 14.

Once again have the King and Queen given proof of their sincere interest in the movements that make for the general welfare of their people. One evening, accompanied by Prince Albert, they paid a surprise call at the splendid pile of buildings in Tottenham Court road of the Young Men's Christian Association. Their wish was to see the whole system of the vast establishment in its ordinary working routine. The trip, curiously enough, coincided with the seventieth anniversary of the day when young Williams, then a draper's assistant, with eleven other sympathetic souls, called into being the organization which now extends throughout the civilized world.

The Queen, looking remarkably well, wore a coat and skirt of deep violet cloth with graceful lines of braiding and a toque of black velvet bordered with ermine and finished with a cluster of shaded marabout plumes. She also wore a stole and muff of ermine. The King wore the star of the Order of the Garter.

The King was in a merry mood, and smiled at a motto on the wall of the secretary's room, which reads:—

"It is easy enough to be pleasant
When life flows along like a song.
But the man worth while
Is the one who will smile
When everything goes dead wrong."

"KEEP YOUR HAIR ON."

"It reminds me," said the King, "of rule No. 1 in the navy."

"What's that?" asked Prince Albert.

"Always keep your hair on," said the King; and all laughed heartily.

In the foreign languages class room the King remarked on the value of a knowledge of another tongue than one's own, mentioning Germany, where every child is taught a foreign language.

The Boy Scouts' rally was concluding as the royal party entered the hall, and here the Queen smiled as she saw the excellent portrait of the Prince of Wales, referring to him as Chief Scout for Wales.

Very touching was the King and Queen's journey to St. Thomas' Hospital. A bricklayer's laborer, suffering agony after a severe operation, lay on a cot, feeling that it was hardly worth while to get well again with only the Workhouse for his home, when a nurse whispered that visitors were coming to see him.

"Visitors be damned!" said the man surlily.

"Hush!" said the nurse. "'Tis the King and Queen."

The man opened his dazed eyes as the Queen approached.

"How are you? Don't get up; you mustn't forget how ill you've been," she said, but the bricklayer's laborer did not heed and struggled stiffly to a sitting position despite the danger of disarranging his bandages and brought a hand to a salute, for long ago he had been a guards man. The Queen turned away with tears in her eyes and the King returned the salute.

"So you have been in the army," said the King.

"Yes," replied the man. "I served fifteen years in Your Majesty's Grenadier Guards."

THE REST IS A SECRET.

What else passed between the King and the old soldier is a secret, but of course the glorious English constitution forbade the King inquiring how the old Guardsman came to be living in the Workhouse and earning a casual living when he could, as a bricklayer's laborer.

One of the patients when asked by the King what was the matter replied that he was suffering from the effects of lead poisoning, contracted by the poison working under his nails. The King asked:—

"Would not wearing gloves prevent this?" But the patient replied:—"I don't know what the employers would say if they saw the men wearing kid gloves at work."

Always fond of sport, the King saw the annual Rugby football match between teams of officers of the army and navy the other day, and also has declared his desire to see a boxing tournament at an early date among the best of the army and navy can produce.

QUEEN ALEXANDRA NOT WELL.

Queen Alexandra has cancelled all engagements for the present, as she is suffering from a severe cold. This is a great disappointment, as she was going to attend the hackney show this week, which she had done regularly for years, but it is understood her illness is not serious—simply that she is very likely to catch cold at this season, for at her age she must be careful.

The courts of next week will bring the official entertaining of the spring season to an end, and after that there will be a lull until May unless between now and then the King and Queen give a private ball at the palace, as they did last year.

Of course the event of the week socially was the Chelsea Arts Club ball. Balls perhaps more elaborately arranged and distinguished by some striking feature occur from time to time in the Albert Hall, but all the ethos this ball remains true to itself, with its primary features unassailed. It is still the cheeriest and most light hearted entertainment of the year and persons flock to it by thousands from all parts of the country and the Continent. Members of the royal family, representatives of foreign Powers at the Court of St. James', members of both houses of Parliament, actors, actresses and artists all joined in the dance of the Pierrots, in which white and black predominated, the men wearing uniforms which adorned the dashing officers of every crack regiment of Europe a century ago and dancing with pretty Columbines. A rough cowboy was seen dancing with a demure nun clad in virgin white, and clowns and red Indians with little ladies from Japan, while brigand's and Arabian [illegible] and mail clad knights jostled one another. Many enchanted by the latest craze wore gayly tinted hair, black, scarlet, green or blue. All had [illegible] and some had painted [illegible] cheeks.

LONDON DREADS AFTERNOON COURT

Evening Dress by Daylight and Other Embarrassments Would Follow Revival of Custom.

(Special Dispatch.)

LONDON, March 14.

DEBUTANTES and dowagers alike are dismayed at the possibility of afternoon courts, the revival of which is contemplated after this season.

The institution of the evening court to take the place of the afternoon drawing room, favored by his mother, was one of the most popular social changes introduced by King Edward. To attend one of the early functions called for the display of no small amount of courage, hardihood and endurance. The preliminaries had a most crushing effect on personal vanity.

Dressing began soon after breakfast and the consciousness that evening dress in the most unbecoming form of attire for daytime did not tend to give the flurried débutante that feeling of pride in her personal appearance which is essential to every woman's enjoyment of any social function and even experienced hands never succeeded in appearing quite unself-conscious. Bare arms and back look well in one evening, but they look incongruous by day, and groans and yellows have an unfortunate smack of imparting to the skin of the wearer something of their own vivid hue in daylight.

But the shocks to complexions were slight compared with those inflicted on the feelings of their owners, who, with light wraps round their shoulders, waited indefinitely, their carriages caught in the long queue of vehicles which extended down Buckingham Palace road and into Grosvenor Gardens. Curious eyes stared through the windows and impertinent little urchins expressed their opinions on the dresses and general appearance of the unhappy occupants with a freedom and pungency more expressive than polite. On cold days, when windows could be closed, it was possible, though bitterly conscious of their presence, to avoid hearing passing comments on red noses, blue lips, mottled complexions and towering feathers.

"Terribly Efficient Industrial Machine."

(Special Dispatch.)

LONDON, March 14.

UNDER the heading "Rails and the Man," the Saturday Review publishes an article concerning the selection of the American, Mr. Henry Worth Thornton, as general manager of the Great Eastern Railway of England. The article, which purports to be mildly sarcastic, cuts both ways, and concludes as follows:—

"The American * * * attacks work with a single mind. He is thoroughly convinced that work, be it merely pig killing, is the only fit occupation for a man. He is called a dollar hunter. But no mere lover of money would continue, as Americans do, to work at money making long after health, digestion and the power of enjoyment have gone. The American works because he likes work, because he has taste for little else, and because, generally speaking, money making is his only notion of work. The English sausage maker sells his business and retires to a Surrey villa when he has amassed thirty thousand pounds. An American continues to turn out sausages when he is worth millions. The fortune is incidental; the real epic of his life is expressed in fortunes of sausages girdling the globe. One of the 'Big Five' of Chicago used, when he was seventy, to get up at five in the morning, leave behind him a houseful of Titians and Rembrandts, and go down to the stockyards—to kill a pig. Without this daily offering to his gods life to him was a hollow and empty thing. The English are not lazy, but they are not industrious in that way. They are content to use up their energies in all ways such as golf, or scribbling, or social enjoyment. The Post Office supplies us with novelists and dramatic critics, and probably many of Lord Claud Hamilton's 'clever and capable men,' not quite fit for the first rate, fritter away their time in humanizing themselves. It is the American's strange power of getting rid of all inconvenient human characteristics during early years which makes him the terribly efficient industrial machine he often is. Whether the result is worth the sacrifice is another question."

DEALING WITH ENGLAND'S INEBRIATES

(Special Dispatch.)

LONDON, March 14.

THE whole truth about inebriates is dealt with rare sympathy and insight in a remarkable official report to the Home Office by Dr. R. W. Branthwaite, the inspector under the Inebriates Act, published recently.

Dr. Branthwaite defines an inebriate as "a man who may or may not desire to live soberly, but in any case cannot, unless and until some change takes place in his physical and mental state."

He gives a rough calculation of the number of inebriates in the country, and arrives at the startling figure of 68,000, about 1.42 per 1,000 of the population.

Dr. Branthwaite in his introduction forecasts "an attempt at an early date to consolidate and amend the law relating to inebriates," and in his report he says, in regard to the early stages, that it is eminently desirable that legislation should allow an inebriate to enter into a legal pledge to abstain and surrender himself to the control of some friend whom he can trust; such friend being in the position of a guardian with power to prevent the patient from obtaining drink during time of stress when good intention would otherwise succumb to abnormal desire.

The hardening effect of jail life upon habitual drunkards and especially upon such of them as are feeble minded is technically dealt with in the report.

"Imprisonment is not only unnecessary, but does a great deal of harm," is the conclusion. "In fact, there seems little reason to doubt that the constant repetition of short penal sentences exercises a material influence in converting a reformable inebriate into an irreformable one.

"The lesson that a short imprisonment is nothing very terrible is soon learned and before long the ordinary inebriate becomes a recidivist, with the usual hopeless outlook, quite content to accept a periodical week in prison as a necessary incident in each month of life.

"If it neither cures nor deters, does the repeated imprisonment of habitual inebriates afford reasonable protection to the community? There can only be one answer to that question—a direct one—the intervals of dangerous liberty are too frequent for any public advantage to accrue.

Unless we are prepared to admit that the prosaic is solely one of retributive vengeance, and justify it on that ground, it is difficult to describe the proceedings of either these informants, writers and subscribers as other than unreasonable, useless and absolute waste of public money."

CRYSTAL GAZER BURNS TO DEATH

(Special Dispatch.)

LONDON, March 14.

THE death of Mrs. Elizabeth Ann Sale, of Sheerig a widow, sixty-nine years of age, of St. Gothard, York place, Wakefield, is a warning to crystal gazers. She sat by the fire, gazing into her crystal as long that she hypnotized herself, fell into the fire and was burned to death.

"SIGNS" IN THE TEA CUP AND OUT OF IT.

If we av believe the lore of our grandmothers, a good many of those events which are usually supposed to be hidden from the world till the time of their arrival may be divined in advance by means of the "cup which cheers." Most of these "signs," even, are well known at the present time; but here are a few:

When a bit of stem or twig of the tea is seen floating in the cup, it is a sign that a "visitor" may be expected. If the stalk has a hard feeling when pressed beneath the thumb and finger, the caller will be a man; if yielding, a woman. When the coming of a masculine friend is thus indicated to a young lady, she should

"Bite him in two and throw him
under the table;
He will come if he is able."

Another variation consists in stirring the contents of the cup swiftly around, as soon as the fleet is discovered, leaving the teaspoon standing erect in the centre of the cup. If the "beau" floats around the edge of the cup, without coming near the spoon, he will in some way fail to make the contemplated visit. If he touches the spoon and then sails away, his coming will be unfortunate; but if he adheres to the handle, remaining there until the contents of the cup become quiet, his coming will be assured, and its results will be all that could be desired.

If a young lady would know the number of years that will elapse before her marriage, let her balance a perfectly dry spoon on the edge of her cup. Taking a few drops of tea in a spoon held an inch above the first, let one drop after another fall gently into the bowl of the one which is in balance. The number of drops required to destroy the equilibrium of the spoon will probably be found to indicate the years which will pass before her marriage.

Should a single person by any chance have two spoons placed in or beside a single cup, it is a sign of marriage before the close of the year—unless the event happens on the 31st of December, when marriage may be looked for during the following year.

If a young lady adds milk or cream to her tea before putting in the sugar, it is a sign that she is in danger of being crossed in love.

If while the tea is being made the lid of the teapot is for any purpose removed, and its return is forgotten, it is an indication that some one will drop in to share the repast, and an additional cup of the beverage should be prepared.

Fill a cup nearly full of tea and drop in a lump of loaf sugar. If the small bubbles which rise gather and remain in the centre of the cup, it is a sign of fair weather; but if they seek the outer edge, a storm is indicated, and its violence will be in proportion to the rapidity and energy of their movements.

USEFUL RECIPES

SUBSTITUTE FOR LARD.

When baking griddle cakes, instead of using lard on griddle, rub it with a raw potato. The cakes are just as brown and the kitchen is not filled with odour of burning fat.

LIP CREAM.

Take four ounces of white wax, four ounces of olive oil, half an ounce of spermaceti, 20 drops of oil of lavender, and two ounces of alkanet root.

BIRTHDAY CAKE.

This cake is an orange layer-cake, and is made with four eggs, one-half cupful of butter, one and one-half cupful of sugar, one teaspoon of baking powder, one-half teaspoonful of salt, one-half cupful of milk, and two large cupfuls of flour. Mix butter and sugar to a cream; beat the eggs until very light; mix both together; add milk, then flour in which the baking powder has been mixed; beat thoroughly, and bake in four good-sized jelly tins.

Filling—To the white of one egg, well beaten, add the juice and part of the grated rind of two large or three small oranges and sufficient pulverised, well-sifted sugar to make a creamy icing; spread each layer bountifully with the icing, and ice the cake all over with the orange icing or with a white icing, as may be preferred.

ORANGE PUDDING.

Cut up five nice oranges, put in a large pudding dish and sprinkle over them one-half cup of white sugar. Set a pail containing a pint of milk in a kettle of boiling water; let it boil. Stir together the yolks of two eggs, one-half cup of sugar and two tablespoonfuls of cornstarch in a little cold milk and with a little salt. Add this to the boiling milk, let it thicken and pour it over the fruit. Now beat the whites of two eggs to a stiff froth, add a tablespoonful of fine sugar and pour it over the pudding. Set it in a hot oven to cool.

CLEANING HINT.

I have found, writes a contributor to Modern Priscilla, that gasoline will not make a circle on material if it is mixed with cornmeal. Rub the spot with the saturated cornmeal until the spot disappears, then brush thoroughly.

USE RAIN WATER.

It may not be generally known that the lime deposits in a teakettle may be removed by filling the kettle with rain water and gradually heating and letting the water boil until the lime scales off, perhaps an hour, more or less, depending on the depth of the deposit.

Sweetbreads and Mushroom Timbales—Cook one slice of onion in two tablespoons of butter for five minutes, taking great care not to brown. Chop one cup of mushrooms very fine and a cup of cooked sweetbreads, also chopped very fine. Put this into the onion and butter. Add one-fourth cup of fine bread crumbs, one-half cup of green sweet pepper chopped fine, half teaspoon of salt, yolks of two eggs, well beaten.

All this to be well beaten together. Add one cup of thick white cream sauce. Lastly, fold in the stiffly beaten whites of two eggs. Butter the timbale moulds thoroughly. Set them in pan of hot water. Cover with buttered paper and bake 15 minutes. Remove from moulds and serve with any desired sauce. Peas may be substituted for the sweetbreads if a strictly Lenten menu is desired.

Spinach Mounds—Cook spinach until tender, about 12 minutes. Put in colander and chop fine. Allow to drain. Salt to taste. Mix with chopped hard boiled eggs, four eggs for each peck of spinach used. Butter brown betty cups and put in the spinach, dot tops with pits of butter and a few bread crumbs. Put in oven for five minutes. Turn onto platter and serve piping hot.

Pineapple Salad—Canned pineapple may be used in the salad. Remove from can and allow to stand at least three hours before serving. Cut lettuce in fine strings. Make nest and put pineapple on top. Serve with French dressing, with spoon of cold cheese custard at side of plate.

THE FULL MAN AND THE READY MAN.

It is not facts that we need to learn in order to make our knowledge useful. We must learn how to find out facts, how to put facts together, and how to value them properly.

The man who is skilful in his business is not one who has the most details at his command, but the one who can get the details he needs most quickly and accurately.

Ask a successful lawyer what is the law on a certain subject, and the chances are that he will be unable to answer you at once. His first response will be, "I must look up the statutes and opinions on the subject." He does not pretend to remember all the acts of the legislature or all the decisions of the courts on doubtful questions. If he tried to carry such things in his head, he would have no need left for anything else. The thing which he knows and other men do not know is where to get his information as to the statutes and decisions, and how to read what he finds so that he will know exactly what it means.

That is the essential thing that distinguishes a good lawyer from a bad lawyer; and it is the same capacity which in a wider field distinguishes an educated man from an uneducated one. The educated man has been trained to look up references in books, to read exactly and attentively what the books say and to understand the meaning of what they contain. It is not the things that he has that really count; it is the ability to find out other things by reading, whenever he needs them.

OLDEST BALL GAME.

Tennis is pronounced the oldest of all the existing ball games. It is impossible to give its origin, but it was played in Europe during the middle ages in the parks or ditches of the feudal cities. It was at first the pastime of kings and nobles, but later it grew popular with all classes. The French took it from the Italians and the English from the French.

Could Not Do
Her Housework

Many women get run down and are unable to look after their household duties owing to the heart action becoming impaired or the nervous system unstrung. To all such sufferers Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills will give prompt and permanent relief.

Mrs. Thomas Melville, Saltcoats, Sask., writes:—"I thought it my duty to write and tell you how much your Heart and Nerve Pills did for me. My heart was so bad I could not sleep, eat nor walk about the house. I could not do my housework at all, and what my husband could not do had to go undone. I had two small children depending on me besides three men to cook for, and it worried me to not be able to do anything. My husband had taken some of your pills some years ago, and insisted on me trying them, so I started, and before I had taken them two weeks I was considerably better, and before I had taken two boxes I was doing my own work again. Any one suffering from heart or nerve trouble should just give your pills a trial. If anyone cares to write me I will gladly give them all the information I know concerning your wonderful medicine."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50 cents per box, or three boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

EAT LESS FOOD AS YOU GROW OLDER

When people have passed middle life they should realize that to maintain the same degree of efficiency they must take greater care of themselves. This is particularly the case with regard to eating and drinking. People as they grow older begin to learn that they cannot take the same chances with their stomachs and "get away with it" successfully. Welsh rarebits, ancient cheese, lobster salads and similar foods have a habit of "kicking up" in the ways unknown in earlier years. These protests by the stomach and alimentary canal are officially registered as stomach aches, indigestion, dyspepsia and so forth, and one of the usual results is a feeling of malaise and headache.

Unfortunately it is at this age when other interests in life are beginning to wane, that the interest in eating and drinking usually increases, and the pleasure of the table often constitutes one of the chief charms of existence.

Instead of indulging in more elaborate fare and highly seasoned cooking, people should, after reaching the age of 35 or 40, begin to eat less food and more wholesome food. The organs of excretion and in fact all the organs of the body have attained their greatest degree of efficiency, and, just like an engine which has seen good active service, they must receive more careful instead of more reckless treatment. When too rich a mixture of gasolene and air is fed to a gas engine carbon is deposited in the cylinders and there is a loss of power. When too much coal is fed into a furnace the furnace does not yield as much heat and there is too much ash and clinkers left. So it is in the human body; overfeeding leaves a surplus of ashes and residues which have to be removed and not allowed to accumulate in the system. As we grow older we become less active, the food which we consume is not as likely to be burned up so completely, and, therefore, it is wise to cut down the diet, or in other words to use less coal. If not, more work will be thrown upon the liver, kidneys and other excretory organs whose function is to get rid of this superfluous waste. Worse than that the excess of food consumed is apt to decompose in the intestinal canal, producing toxins of poisons, which are absorbed and have a bad effect on the heart and blood vessels. Within the past few months such poisons have been extracted by scientific men from loops of the intestinal canal of dogs suffering from intestinal obstruction, which are so poisonous that they have, when injected into other healthy dogs, quickly killed them.

To keep well as we grow older therefore means greater care in the selection of wholesome foods, eating no more than we require, and seeing that our alimentary tract is kept in the best possible working condition. Fresh air, moderate exercise and freedom from worry are other essentials for a life free from unnecessary illness and disease.

CONTROL YOUR IMAGINATION.

There is another kind of silence to be cultivated besides that of the tongue, as regards others. I mean silence as regards one's self—restraining the imagination, not permitting it to dwell overmuch on what we have heard or said, not indulging in the phantasmagoria of picture thoughts whether of the past or future. Be sure that you have made no small progress in the spiritual life when you can control your imagination so as to fix it on the duty and occupation actually existing to the exclusion of the crowd of thoughts which are perpetually sweeping across the mind. No doubt you cannot prevent hose thoughts from arising, but you can prevent yourself from dwelling on them; you can put them aside, you can check the self-complacency, or irritation, or earthly longings which feed them, and by the practice of such control of your thoughts you will attain that spirit of inward science which draws the soul into a closer intercourse with God.

GREASE THE CORDS.

To prevent window blind cords breaking dust the cords, and then rub them over with a well greased rag. The snapping is caused by friction, which impoverishes the cords, and they are further weakened by the sun and weather.

GIRLS! CLEAN AND BEAUTIFY YOUR HAIR; NO MORE DANDRUFF—25 CENT DANDERINE

Stop Washing Hair! Try this! Makes It Glossy, Soft and Abundant

Surely try a "Danderine Hair Cleanse" if you wish to immediately double the beauty of your hair. Just moisten a cloth with Danderine and draw it carefully through your hair taking one small strand at a time, this will cleanse the hair of dust, dirt or any excessive oil — in a few minutes you will be amazed. Your hair will be wavy, fluffy and abundant and possess an incomparable softness, lustre and luxuriance.

Besides beautifying the hair, one application of Danderine dissolves every particle of dandruff; invigorates the scalp, stopping itching and falling hair.

Danderine is to the hair what fresh showers of rain and sunshine are to vegetation. It goes right to the roots, invigorates and strengthens them. Its exhilarating, stimulating and life-producing properties cause the hair to grow long, strong and beautiful.

You can surely have pretty, soft, lustrous hair, and lots of it, if you will just get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter and try it as directed.

Laundry Lines.

Pillowcases should be starched a little they will look well twice as long.

A clothesline may be conveniently cleaned by wrapping it around a washboard and thoroughly scrubbing it in suds.

To remove the leather stains from light colored stockings put a couple of tablespoonfuls of borax in the water in which they are washed.

Instead of adding bluing to water in which soap has been rinsed try putting the final rinsing in milk. It gives a lovely creamy tone to the linen.

To stiffen starch add one quart of prepared starch, a teaspoonful of gum arabic and one of baking soda dissolved in a very little water, stirring well.

Fashion Frills.

If pant cuffs trousers are as tight as the tailors predict we may yet see the split petticoat.—Memphis Appeal.

According to Professor Alonzo Taylor, the less women wear the more they eat. If that be the case good night to the low cost of living!—Washington Post.

These new tight fitting clothes that are coming into style next season will show up more men than all the exposés that ever were invented.—Boston Transcript.

We acknowledge receipt of a friendly suggestion that we say more about the styles, but that is no slight a subject we hesitate to wear it threadbare.—Milwaukee Journal.

HEADACHY, COSTIVE, BILIOUS,—"CASCARETS"

Get a10-cent box.

Sick headache, biliousness, dizziness, coated tongue, foul taste and foul breath—always trace them to torpid liver; delayed, fermenting food in the bowels or sour, gassy stomach.

Poisonous matter clogged in the intestines, instead of being cast out of the system is re-absorbed into the blood. When this poison reaches the delicate brain tissue it causes congestion and that dull, throbbing, sickening headache.

Cascarets immediately cleanse the stomach, remove the sour, undigested food and foul gases, take the excess bile from the liver and carry out all the constipated waste matter and poisons in the bowels.

A Cascaret to-night will surely straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep—a 10-cent box from your druggist means your head clear, stomach sweet, and your liver and bowels regular for months.

PUBLISHES RECOLLECTIONS

Sir Charles Tupper Completes Page To Canadian History.

LONDON, March 18. —(C.A.P. Cable.) — Extensive press notices appeared here yesterday of what undoubtedly constitutes a substantial addition to the literature on Canada's political history in "Recollections of Sixty Years Ago," by Sir Charles Tupper, published by the Messrs. Cassells. The work contains a fund of reminiscences upon which the veteran statesman has drawn.

The work opens with the union of the Maritime Provinces, and embraces the whole period between that event and Sir Charles' Premiership in 1896. In its main feature it gives a straightforward account of the issues in which the writer took a prominent part. There is little "gossipy" style about the work, and no great political secrets are unfolded.

"My earliest political energies were devoted to the securing of the union of the Maritime Provinces," such is the matter-of-fact way in which chapter one opens.

After proceeding straightway to incorporate verbatim his lecture on the political condition of British North America, delivered in St. John in 1860, fifty pages are then devoted to the negotiations regarding the union of the Maritime Provinces, and contain a good deal of the many conversations on the subject between Sir Charles Tupper and Hon. Joseph Howe.

"A more intimate story of the Confederation campaign is unfolded in the following letters written by me to Sir John Macdonald," affirms the author who proceeds to set forth his writings to Sir John and to the colonial minister on the fishery question. Sir Charles' story of the journey to Fort Garry at the time of the Riel rebellion is one of the few "personal reminiscences which the author permits himself to narrate at length." Two chapters are concerned with the building of the C. P. R., vicissitudes of that undertaking being described in detail.

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES.

Miss Lois Harris died at Simcoe, Ont., in her 98th year. She was last surviving member in her generation of the well-known Harris family.

Work will be started soon on the erection of a convent and school building in connection with the Roman Catholic Church in Dublin, Ont., near Stratford.

The Maritime Express train on the new branch at Chatham, N.B., struck a sleigh driven by Clement Allain of Richibucto, Tuesday night. He died of his injuries yesterday.

The town of Gananoque has turned down the offer of Andrew Carnegie to build a public library. The corporation will provide quarters of its own for such an institution.

A midnight fire in Preston destroyed the Wong Laundry, owned by A. Baltaza, and for a time threatened the destruction of the adjacent valuable property. The loss is $3,000.

One man was killed and three injured, probably fatally, and several are reported missing, as the result of the explosion of an ammonia tank in the plant of the Cleveland Brewing Co. yesterday.

The appearance of armed detachments of Republican guards posted at strategic points of Paris yesterday added to the excitement aroused by the assassination of Gaston Calmette, by Mme. Caillaux.

Stead M. Gamble, who is charged with damaging a coil of rope at the Canadian Pacific Railway camp at Dixie, and thereby endangering the lives of workmen, was remanded from the spring assizes at Whitby to the fall assizes.

Atlantic Liner Disabled.

HAMBURG, March 19—The breaking of both steam and hand steering gear in a terrific gale has caused the Hamburg-American Line Batavia to put in at Ponta Delgada in the Azores, where it hoped she will be able to effect repairs by to-night. The Batavia left Hamburg on March 8 for Baltimore, carrying 296 steerage passengers.

CATTLE MARKETS

UNION STOCK YARDS.

TORONTO, March 18.—Receipts of live stock at the Union Yards were 61 cars, comprising 695 cattle, 1256 hogs, 65 sheep and 41 calves.

Cattle—Butchers.

Choice butchers sold at $7.75 to $8 prime, $7.40 to $7.60; medium, $7 to $7.35; common, $6.25 to $6.75; choice cows, $6.75 to $7; fair cows, $6.50 to $6.75; medium cows, $6.25 to $6.40; common cows, $6 to $6.25; choice heifers, $7.25 to $7.50; good bulls, $6.50 to $7; medium, $6 to $6.25.

Stockers and Feeders.

Stockers and feeders were none too plentiful. Prices of steers 800 to 900 lbs. at $6.65 to $7; steers, 700 to 800 lbs., at $6.40 to $6.60; stockers sold at from $5.50 to $6.75.

Milkers and Springers.

Receipts of milkers and springers were not large. Choice milkers and forward springers of good quality still bring good prices, but common to medium milkers and late springers are slow sale. Prices ranged from $60 to $90 each, the bulk going at $70 to $80.

Veal Calves.

Receipts of veal calves were light and prices very firm. Choice calves, $10 to $11; good, $9 to $10; common and medium, $8.50 to $9.

Sheep and Lambs.

The sheep and lamb market was firm all round. Light ewes sold at $6.50 to $7; heavy ewes, $6 to $6.25; rams, $5.25 to $6.25; heavy lambs, $8 to $8.75; choice lambs, $9 to $9.15.

Hogs.

Selects, fed and watered, sold at $9.25, $8.90, f.o.b. cars, and $9.40 weighed off cars.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, March 18.—At the C. P. R. live stock market there was no further change in the prices for cattle, but the tone was firm. Choice steers sold at $8.25 to $8.50; good at $7.75 to $8; fair at $6.75 to $7.25, and common at $5 to $6 per 100 pounds. The demand for butchers' cows was good, at prices ranging from $5 to $7 and bulls sold at $5 to $7.25 per 100 pounds. A good trade continues to be done in milch cows, of which the offerings are increasing, and sales of choice milkers were made at $90 to $100, and lower grades at from $60 to $70 each.

The tone of the market for hogs was firm in sympathy with recent strength in the Toronto market, and the advance in prices of 60c per 100 pounds since last Thursday. The demand here today was good, and as the offerings were smaller than generally expected by the trade, an early clearance was made of Ontario selected stock at $9.90, and Manitobas at $9.50 per 100 pounds weighed off cars. The trade in sheep and lambs was quiet at $6.50 to $6.90 for the former and at $8.50 to $9 for the latter per 100 pounds.

The demand for calves was good at prices ranging from $8 to $12 each and in some cases as high as $15 was realized for some extra choice stock.

Simple Home Treatment For Objectionable Hairs

(Toilet Talks)

Here is a toilet help you should remember, because it may at some time in the matter of saving you from embarrassment: To quickly and painlessly remove hair or fuzz from chin, lip or neck, apply a thick paste made by mixing together powdered delatone and water. Let this remain on the hairy surface about 2 minutes, then rub off, and the skin and all the hairs have vanished. This treatment is entirely harmless, but caution should be used to see that you get delatone.

ANOTHER SCARE BREWING?

Phillip Snowden Says Armament Trust is Getting Busy.

LONDON, March 19.—Challenging the right of the Government to expend £51,000,000 on the navy, Phillip Snowden, the well-known Labor M.P., delivered a strong indictment of the conspiracy to inflate armaments in the House of Commons last evening. He declared that we were in the hands of "crooks," and described the methods by which the armament firms play on the fears of peoples and Governments in order to increase their profits, predicting, too, that they were getting ready for another scare like that of 1909. He traced the connection between both the Unionist and Radical members of Parliament and the armament firms, and read out a list of members with shares held by them, together, with the account of the part played by them in the Navy in the armament debates.

He strongly censured the action of the civil servants in joining armament firms, and declared that one could not avoid the suspicion that they had had some connection with such firms before.

Among the members whose names were mentioned by Philip Snowden with the amount of their shares, are: Sir J. Compton Rickett, 2,200 shares; John Brown, 2,100 shares in Cammell Laird; Samuel Roberts, shareholder and debenture trustee in Fairfields, of Glasgow and Coventry Ordnance Co.; H. D. McLaren, director of Palmers' Shipbuilding Co.; Lewis K. Harcourt, Colonial Secretary, and shareholder in the Harvey Steel Trust; Hobhouse, Postmaster-General, shareholder in the Harvey Steel Trust.

FOUR VICTIMS.

Two More Deaths Reported In Toronto Hotel Fire.

TORONTO, March 19.—The recovery of a body believed to be that of Charles Wilmot, a well-known Belleville horseman, and that of Fred. Levenson, of New York City, from the ruins of the Woodbine Hotel brings the number of the known dead up to three. Search is being continued for the body of J. Graham, of London, Ont., who has not yet been accounted for. Wilmot's body was found by firemen early yesterday morning, and Levenson's at 2.40 in the afternoon. All three now lie at the morgues.

Search for the other bodies believed to be in the ruins was suspended at dark last evening, and again resumed at daybreak to-day. Some doubt has arisen now as to whether the body identified as that of Levenson is really that of J. Graham, of Strathroy, who as yet is unaccounted for. Levenson was identified by means of an odd tie pin, a cameo representing a woman's bust, but on the same body was found a half-burned tie, manufactured in Strathroy, which gives rise to the theory that this body may be that of Graham.

The second body was positively identified as that of Charles Wilmot, a Belleville horseman, by a brother-in-law last night.

Later and more careful reports place the total loss at well over $200,000, of which $185,0000 is covered by insurance.

Berlin Celebrates Royal Birth.

BERLIN, March 19. — Emperor William yesterday ordered a general school holiday in Berlin in celebration of the birth of his sixth grandson at Brunswick yesterday morning. The young Duchess of Brunswick, who is the only daughter of the Emperor, is reported to be doing well, as also her son. The Emperor has cancelled all his other engagements and will go to Brunswick to-day in order to see his latest grandson before departing for his annual trip to Corfu on March 22.

Berlin and Potsdam were decorated with flags yesterday in honor of the occasion.

Divorce Fails Again.

OTTAWA, March 19. — For the third successive year the Senate has refused to grant the application of Andrew Lorne Hamilton, bank manager, of Quebec, but formerly of Portage la Prairie, Man., for divorce from his wife. Three times the divorce committee of the Senate has found that divorce should be granted, and has so advised the Senate. But each time the advice has been rejected and the decision of the committee reversed by the committee as a whole. The application is now a cause celebre.

Convention Busy Revising Chinese Constitution.

PEKIN, March 19.—A convention opened here yesterday for the purpose of amending the provisional constitution of the Chinese republic. Sun Pao-Chi, acting Premier and Minister of Foreign Affairs, presided. Out of the sixty delegates elected 33 were present.

Sun Pao-Chi read to the convention an inaugural address by President Yuan Shi Kai, in which the President gave a sketch of the ill-effects of the provisional constitution on both internal and foreign relations owing to its restrictions on the Government and its unsuitability to existing conditions in China.

The President added that he felt assured the convention would result in amendment of the constitution and would bring about peace and prosperity for China and her people.

GOVERNMENT DISCUSSES THE C. N. R. GUARANTEE

Position of the Unfinished Transcontinental Railways Was Considered.

FISHERIES ACT AMENDED

OTTAWA, March 19.—The House of Commons spent an uneventful day in committee of the whole, considering a bill to amend the Fisheries Act, and an amendment to the law respecting merchant shipping. In the evening the estimates of the Department of Mines and the geological survey were considered.

The Government forces were in caucus yesterday morning for three hours considering among other things the G.N.R.'s application for a bond guarantee.

The following statement was issued by Premier Borden after the conclusion of the caucus:

"There was a caucus of Government members yesterday at which several matters of interest were discussed. Amongst others, the position of the unfinished Transcontinental Railways was considered, and the opinion of the Senators and members of the Commons was invited thereon. After an interesting discussion, in which many members took part, and in which the subject was debated in all aspects, the caucus adjourned at one o'clock."

Hon. J. D. Hazen's bill amending the law respecting merchant shipping was amended and reported. Among other things the bill provides that in case of collision the damages to cargoes shall be apportioned in accordance to the degree of fault of each vessel, Government-owned vessels, however, are not liable to damages.

Mr. Hazen moved an amendment providing that the provisions of the bill should not apply to any of the canals in Canada, and as the legislation stands it will not apply to the St. Lawrence above Montreal, the great lakes or the Detroit and St. Clair rivers.

The Minister of Marine and Fisheries, however, met with opposition to his bill amending the Fisheries Act, a clause of which provides that the governor in council may appoint fishery officials ex officio justices of the peace, with jurisdiction over poaching cases and infractions of the Fisheries Act.

Mr. Carroll (Lib., S. Cape Breton) made a strong protest against this clause. He declared that a prisoner would not be able to obtain a fair trial for the fishery official who acted, as the magistrate would be prejudiced.

Hon. Mr. Hazen maintained that such would not be the case. The Royal Northwest Mounted Police had followed similar procedure and no one ever had complaints of unfair trials conducted by them.

After some further discussion the bill was reported, with the understanding that the objectionable clause would be amended on third reading.

The estimates of the Department of Mines were then considered. An item of $36,000 for further investigation of the possibilities of peat as fuel elicited the criticism of Hon. Charles Murphy and E. W. Nesbitt (Lib., North Oxford).

Mr. Murphy maintained that the investigations of Dr. Haanel, director of mines, had cost the country in the neighborhood of $100,000, and absolutely without results; while Mr. Nesbitt pointed out that the Government had spent a large sum in establishing a peat-treating plant near Alfred, Ont., and after some experimentation had given it up as a bad job and sold the plant to a corporation.

Hon. Mr. Coderre, under whose jurisdiction the Department of Mines now is, warmly defended Dr. Haanel, and declared that his experiments had proved beyond a shadow of a doubt the commercial possibilities of peat as a fuel.

Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux, ex-Postmaster-General, took occasion to read to the House a petition from a number of western colliery owners, asking that the royalty of 10 cents per ton on coal be reduced to five cents. He asked that the petition be read.

Hon. Mr. Coderre, in reply, stated that the matter would be carefully considered.

ONE MAN PRODUCED MORE POUNDS OF PARK OUT OF GARBAGE

Dr. George Clinton, District Officer of Health, who was in the city yesterday, said that the city should not overlook the value of garbage. He instanced the case of a man who produced two hundred thousand pounds of pork from garbage that was collected from a municipality in Ontario.

"Garbage is regarded as an economic waste," said Dr. Amys, chairman of the Board of Health.

Ald. Duncan complains that there is not sufficient garbage with which to operate the incinerator.

MAY ESTABLISH A LABORATORY IN PETERBORO'

Local Doctors Bring the Matter to the Attention of Dr. Clinton, District Officer of Health

ISOLATION HOSPITAL

Dr. George Clinton, District Officer of Health, has promised to solicit the consideration of the Provincial Government, regarding the advisability of establishing a laboratory in Peterborough. This action was decided upon at the instance of Dr. A. W. McPherson, Medical Officer of Health, and Dr. C. H. Amys, Chairman of the local Board of Health, at a meeting of the Board that was held yesterday afternoon, and at which Dr. Clinton was present. It was pointed out that Peterborough was a logical location for the establishment of a station, where tests for diphtheria and other virulent diseases could be carried out. At present it is necessary to send diphtheria "swabs" either to Toronto or Kingston, thereby occasioning undue delay.

Dr. McPherson believed that Peterborough should be made a central point for the establishment of a depot, where "swabs" could be received and examined. At present depots are established in Toronto and Kingston, but they are too far distant to be of use in cases where immediate treatment is demanded.

Dr. Clinton said that such a matter had been given consideration by the Provincial Board. He promised to bring the matter to the attention of the proper authorities.

Was Seldom Occupied.

The question of reducing the quarantine limit for measles was also mused, Dr. Clinton thought that the quarantine might better be rigid. He said that Belleville once possessed an isolation hospital, but the authorities objected to the cost of maintenance up on the grounds that the institution was seldom occupied. The building was subsequently disposed of. It might better be empty than full of patients, said Dr. Clinton. It was proposed to again establish an isolation hospital in Belleville.

Dr. Amys contended that rigid measures to suppress the spread of contagious diseases tended to make people evade the regulations.

Dr. Clinton favoured a measure that would quarantine every member of the family, including the wage-earner. The latter to be compensated by the municipality.

This did not meet with the approval of Mayor Buller, who had visions of increased expenditure and the potential abuse of such a provision.

Had Wide Powers.

Dr. Clinton, in outlining his object for visiting Peterborough, said that he desired to meet the local Board of Health and get in touch with the work of the Health authorities. He said that in order to get good and consistent service from the Medical Officer of Health, reasonable remuneration must be paid.

The local Board of Health has large powers that enables them to demand whatever funds may be needed to carry on the work of the Board. The City Council has no jurisdiction in the matter.

Polluting the Water.

"Your water supply, north of the City, said Dr. Clinton, is pretty well protected. At present you are poisoning the water all the way down to Rice Lake, but when you install the sewage disposal plant this difficulty will be remedied."

"There will be no Dominion legislation governing inland waters this year, as the report of the Commission appointed for that purpose has been delayed for one year."

Tubercular Patients.

"What's our duty regarding tuberculosis," enquired Dr. McPherson.

"You are required to report each individual case of tuberculosis, replied Dr. Clinton. It is not necessary to placard a house wherein tubercular patients are confirmed."

Dr. McPherson referred to the regulations respecting mumps. As it stands now, children are not allowed to return to school before the prescribed time of four weeks. He said that he had a daily average of five or six applications for certificates. He thought that one week could be cut off the prescribed time.

Dr. Clinton concurred in this suggestion.

CITY WILL TEST CEMENT THIS YEAR

Board of Works Will Advertize for Supplies of Tile and Cement To Be Used in 1914

WILL PURCHASE HERE

The Board of Works last night decided to advertise for tenders for cement and sewer pipe to be used in civic work this summer. Tenders will be received up to 4 p.m. on April 2. It is expected that 3,000 barrels of Portland cement will be used during the year, but the contract will not specify a definite amount. Engineer Parsons read the specifications to the Board and it was the general opinion that they allow no loop holes. The cement will be tested this year by Mr. Parsons and the necessary apparatus will be purchased for the Engineering Department. It was decided to notify the local cement dealers with a view to securing the supplies through a local firm.

G. T. P. APPLIES FOR ANOTHER LOAN OF MANY MILLIONS

Examiner Special:

OTTAWA, March 19.—Canada's railway situation at Ottawa bids fair to be further complicated by an early application from the Grand Trunk Pacific for a further loan or bond guarantee variously estimated at from fifteen to twenty-five millions, to help the completion of the mountain section of the line. The report is this morning well authenticated. In 1906 the G. T. P. received a loan of ten millions at the hands of the Dominion government, and last year a further loan of fifteen millions was granted. The security in each case was the line of railway from Winnipeg west, while the G. T. P. guaranteed the debentures both as to principal and interest. It is expected that the company will not be granted its application without some protest.

MORE POLES OFF THE MAIN STREETS

C. P. R. Telegraph Co. Proposes to Remove 18 and Bell Telephone Co. Is Willing Too

THE TENTATIVE PLANS

There is a bright prospect for the removal of 18 poles from George Street, between the C.P.R. telegraph office and Dalhousie Street, according to Engineer Parsons' report to the Board of Works last night. The C.P.R. company propose to run their lines from the station up the spur line to the corner of Water and Charlotte Streets, thence across to the top of the market building and into the telegraph office.

Mayor Buller stated that W. Marshall superintendent of the C.P.R. Telegraph Company, was in the City on Saturday and expressed himself as favourably disposed to help beautify the City by this means. Fifteen poles south of Charlotte Street will go if the City carries out the present proposal.

Ald. Stratton —Who bears the expense of this?

Mayor Buller—We haven't got down to that yet.

Telephones, Too.

His Worship stated that he had held a conference recently with Mr. Doan and Mr. Cameron of the Bell Telephone Company who offer to remove their poles on Charlotte Street from George to Stewart Street. Property owners on the south side of the street have given permission for the erection of poles at the rear of their lots and there is apparently a rosy chance that more of the wooden masts will disappear from the central part of the City. Of course the plans have not been boiled down yet, but in its initial form it is regarded as decidedly favourable.

Mayor Buller replying to Ald. Duffus, stated that the laying of conduits on Charlotte Street ahead of the street paving would not be entertained this year.

96,000 Out Of Work In Gotham

Examiner Special:

NEW YORK, March 19. — Police Commissioner McKay reported to Mayor Mitchell to-day that there were only 96,000 men unemployed in Gotham, which was not an unusual number for this time of the year. This report was made in refutation of Tom Mann's statement that there were at least 300,000 out of work in New York.

THIRTY DAYS ON HILL IS SENTENCE

Benjamin Hobson Went to Sleep on a Verandah—He Has More Substantial Quarters To-night

OTHER CASES TO-DAY

Ben's pleading was of no avail this time. He has tried it before and got away with it, but there was nothing doing this morning. Benjamin Hobson was charged with vagrancy. He was found asleep on a verandah last night by P. C. Patterson. Ben pleaded real hard for another chance, but Chief Thompson spoiled his oration by interjecting, the remark that he had been told to get out of town earlier in the day.

Magistrate Dumble was of the opinion that he should go to Central Prison, and that made Ben plead all the more. "Give me a chance," he said, "and on the honour of God I won't trouble you nor any white man any more." But all in vain.

"Thirty days in jail with hard labour," said the court, "and if you are caught after this, you will have to go to Central Prison." Ben will be a visitor at his favourite hotel on the hill for the next month.

A young man was charged with being drunk on George Street in charge of a horse and sleigh. He pleaded guilty and was fined $2 and costs, amounting in all to $5.75.

A visitor was drunk yesterday. He owned up to it this morning, and was assessed $2, to be paid in ten days.

The court room this morning was graced with the presence of the three new officers, who will soon be on the "beat."

Before court Magistrate Dumble went down to the squad room, and made himself acquainted with the new limbs of the law. It is not known whether or not he took Detective Meagher for a new constable or not, but anyway he received the cordial handshake, which had been passed around the room.

The Four K's Of Salvation

Evangelist Pugsley Delivered Strong Sermon Last Night

The revival meetings at the Park Street Baptist church are increasing in interest each night. Last evening Evangelist Pugsley preached a strong sermon on the subject "The Four K's of Salvation": Knowledge, Knock, Kneel and Keep.

Knowledge was the first great essential, knowledge of one's lost condition and of the salvation that God has provided. In connection with the second the speaker said there were two kinds of knockers, those who knock for admission and note knowledge in accordance with the Scriptural advice, and the other class who knock and kick at everything that does not suit them. This class does not add anything to the world and are a curse wherever they are, found. Kneeling was the proper attitude for prayer and for humility. Our hope was in God's power to keep us, not in our power to keep Him. (Hebrews 10:23, Phillipians 2, 12-13, John 10, 28-29, Romans 8, 28 to 39.)

Mr. Peters sang an appropriate solo.

After the meeting two young ladies and a young man professed conversion.

HOME RULE RUMOURS INDICATE CONFIDENCE

THE GOVERNMENT WILL SUPPLY AN INSPECTOR

In Event of the City Sanctioning Establishment of An Abattoir

TO INSPECT THE MEAT

It is understood that in the event of an abattoir being established in Peterborough the Dominion Government will supply a qualified inspector to undertake the work of inspecting the meat, intended for local consumption. This information came through Dr. George Clinton, District Officer of Health. He stated that he believed it was customary for the Government to provide an Inspector whenever a public abattoir was established.

May Erect an Abattoir.

His Worship Mayor Buller hailed this information with delight. He said that the City was contemplating the erection of an abattoir and would welcome any information that would facilitate its operation and, above all, provide for its maintenance. The last named responsibility will be assumed by private individuals who have agreed to erect and maintain an abattoir in accordance with a by-law to be enacted by the City. At yesterday's meeting of the Board of Health the Mayor assured Dr. Clinton that he was pleased to have had the opportunity of meeting the District Officer of Health. He believed that harmonious relations existed between the local Board of Health and the City Council. He concluded by outlining the plans that had been made respecting the installation of a sewage disposal system. He was desirous of promoting the public health in a practical and economical manner.

BALFOUR RETURNING

Special Cable to The Examiner:

LONDON, Eng., March 19.—(Special cable.)—Rumours are circulated freely both in London and Belfast that the government intends to take drastic, immediate action by the arrest of the leaders or seizure of Ulster volunteer headquarters. While the rumours are dispelled, some excitement was aroused by the drafting of extra police into Belfast. Ulster leaders complain that they cannot longer trust the post office. Rumours of government action have this foundation that a small cabinet committee under the chairmanship of Winston Churchill, has completed the necessary arrangements for dealing with any disorder. It has taken some simple precautions, such as additional guards, military arsenals, ammunition and magistrates. To-night's censure debate will see the Liberals supremely confident. It becomes daily more evident that there is a large section of Unionists uneasy under the domination of party violence. They are moving to induce the Lords to read the Home Rule Bill a second time in order to keep the compromise as long as possible. Lord Pasmore yesterday urged this course. Much interest is aroused by a rumour that Balfour, who is returning from the Rivera, will intervene in the debate as a conciliatory.

Entertained The Baldwin Preceptory

The King Baldwin Preceptory of Belleville were the guests of the local Moore Preceptory of Mount, last night, on the occasion of the annual field day of the latter Preceptory. Col. Lazier of Belleville delivered a short address.

More Immigrants Coming Here

Special to The Examiner.

Mr. Miller, the local Immigration Officer informed an Examiner representative this morning that he was expecting a large number of immigrants the early part of next week. By all appearances this will be a busy season. The offices are busy these days and farmers are filing their applications early. It is altogether likely that a new method will be employed this year to secure men. Arrangements in former years have not proved every satisfactory.

A new automobile jack is featured by leather pads on the jaws to prevent the varnish of a car being marred and by gearing that makes it lift a car three inches each time the handle is pressed.

HOW FROM TWELVE TO FIVE LIVES WERE LOST IN A CANADIAN HOTEL SUPPOSED TO BE FIREPROOF.—There will be a rigid investigation by civic authorities into the Woodbine Hotel fire, when at seven-thirty in the evening, on one of the main streets of Toronto, [illegible] lives were snuffed out, in the burning of a new and supposedly fireproof structure. The victims were Max Cohen of Toronto, Fred Levinsky of New York, and Charles Wilmot, the well-known horseman of Belleville, Ont. Within a few minutes of the discovery of the fire the whole building was a mass of flames. A number of actresses and actors playing in nearby theatres were fortunately on their way to their night's work when the fire started, but they lost most of their belongings. Four other persons were seriously hurt.

A SPLENDID IDEA.

The idea of an association of adjacent municipalities to work for the promotion of interests common to all, as suggested by Mayor Buller, was a capital one; and if acted upon and practically developed, would be productive of great good. If we had an Association of Municipalities in the Trent Valley district, thoroughly organized, and efficiently officered, it would always be in readiness to lead in the promotion of enterprises of common interest. The promotion of the application of Hydro-Electric to a radial railway system for the district; the necessary amendments to the laws affecting the interests of funicipalities; the promotion of the navigation interests of the Trent Canal as affecting the several towns in the district, and many other matters could engage the attention of such an association, and ensure a promptitude and effectiveness of action which cannot be hoped from individual and spasmodic effort. Such an association would be the concrete expression of the most important element in civic development and achievement—co-operation. The spirit of co-operation that should work in every city, would be extended to embrace a whole district. It is hoped that Mayor Buller won't confine himself to the suggestion of a splendid idea; but will put the force of his person, and office behind it, to give it effect. He will be warmly supported, and will be met with a spirit of co-operation — working together — which will exercise a beneficial effect not only on civic interests, but on those of the whole district of which Peterborough is a natural centre.

DELAY AND HASTE.

Premier Borden is neither unduly anxious for pure politics or pure water. He has promised to purge the civil service from political or partisan taint; though his promises are a good deal older than his power of performance he has done nothing in this direction. He is also opposed to pure water. A bill introduced into the House to prevent the pollution of streams used as sources of city water supply, has been sat upon by the government and referred to a committee. For years members of parliament have been trying to get a bill enacted to prevent the pollution of streams with sewage. They rightly hold that purity of civic water supply is an indispensable condition of health, itself an indispensable condition of good living and general well-being. The typhoid epidemics in Ottawa have frightened legislators who have to spend the time of the session in Ottawa, into demanding pure water, which means death to typhoid. On Tuesday Mr. Bradbury, a prominent government supporter, introduced a bill, to prevent the pollution of streams. Yet the government insisted upon the delay of a year or two or more, involved in referring the matter to a committee, instead of taking immediate action. We cannot overestimate the importance of pure water supply. If Peterborough were in the condition of Ottawa, compelled to filter the sewage from its drinking water with their teeth, we should be more earnest than we are, more alive to the dangers of pollution of our water supply through the increasing summer population at our lakes. Sir Wilfrid Laurier appreciates the importance of pure water for Ottawa. Speaking to a deputation, he said that as citizens of Ottawa "we must sell our shirts if necessary," to get pure water. It therefore seems that the Borden government is not doing right by the people of the Dominion in delaying legislation to provide for purity of water supply. By referring the matter of water pollution to a committee, delay in regard to a matter of capital importance is created. This however, is too constant a feature of the Borden government to create surprise. Another Conservative government is not so slow. Within a dozen hours after the "graft" of Mr. G. Howard Ferguson was exposed a "whitewashing" bill was passed, reinstating Mr. Ferguson in the seat he had forfeited by breach of the law. There does not seem to be any reason was not suffering from Mr. Ferguson's disqualification, as much as they are for this desperate haste. The country suffering and dying from impure water. But the party was suffering; he was needed as chairman of the Public Accounts committee. Perhaps there was some ministerial wrong-doing to be covered up, some investigation to be stifled; and no one was so capable or shameless as Mr. Ferguson for such work. It didn't take Whitney government long to rush to the rescue of Mr. Ferguson, investigator, and disqualified member of Parliament. There is as much dangerous delay in one case as there is indecent haste in the other.

BE JUST AND REASONABLE.

We can all commend Mayor Buller for his loyalty to Peterborough. According to a contemporary, he wants to make Peterborough the "hub" of a Hydro-Electrical system. This is patriotic and proper, but will other municipalities agree to this? They might also have "hub" aspirations. Mayor Buller is credited with holding the opinion:

"That the municipalities east of Toronto "should kick themselves several times, wake up and get busy in the interests of Eastern Ontario."

Everybody here would like to see Peterborough the hub of a radial system, and it is very proper to elegantly invite the municipalities to kick themselves several times, and wake up; but the other municipalities might ask Peterborough to wake up too. We have not made such rapid progress with the establishment of Hydro-Electric that we can safely indulge in kicking other municipalities several times to wake them up, without provoking the reminder that we might kick ourselves and wake ourselves up.

We are not making very rapid progress in getting our Hydro-Electric situation settled. It is hardly safe to say this; for we shall at once be accused of hostility to Hydro-Electric. It is the habit of the self-constituted champions of Hydro-Electric, to torture any reference to details or to the delay that exists in settling matters, into hostility to the principle. The Examiner is not hostile to Hydro-Electric. When the principle was being voted upon a long time ago, The Examiner was instrumental in securing a pledge from Mr. Beck that any money by-law necessary to provide funds for installing Hydro-Electric should be submitted to the people. On that assurance The Examiner accepted the will of the people as law, and has never spoken a word in opposition to the Hydro-Electric principle the people adopted by a large majority. But there has been occasion to criticize details and the delay in progress of the enterprise has been referred to. That seems to be a justifiable privilege of a journal anxious to protect the interests and promote the wishes of the people, and not at all opposition to the Hydro-Electric principle or enterprise as applied to Peterborough. It would be just as reasonable to denounce a ratepayer as opposed to having city streets, because he objected to extravagant expenditure upon them or delay in putting them into usable condition. Because The Examiner has showed a friendly attitude towards giving a local lighting company a fair deal, that is also construed into an offence. This company, composed of our fellow-citizens, with large capital invested, was voted out of business by the people; and it seems to be only just that they should be fairly dealt with in the process of extinguishing them. Though the company is described as a "monopoly," and as such voted out of existence, it is due to its public spirited action, its forgetfulness of injury, in placing its condemned system at the service of the city, that our homes and streets are not in darkness. Fair play and reasonable argument are certainly things to be reckoned with when we are discussing civic problems in which the interests of the citizens and ratepayers are concerned. Discussion of the details and progress of an enterprise, that involves the assumption by the people of a yet unknown financial burden, is certainly permissible; and discussion involves difference of opinion on details, when once the foundation principle is unanimously agreed upon. If everybody was agreed upon everything—if everybody should be content to accept what our representatives hand out irrespective of cost or other considerations, there would be no discussion. We should open our mouths and shut our eyes and swallow everything blindly. No one wants this. We want a friendly chat over the Hydro-Electric matter; and in reaching the expression of the slightest difference of opinion, our aldermen seem to be taking the position that they and not the people are the parties most interested in the matter of our civic supply of light and power.

HER QUESTIONS.

Miss Muffitt had recently joined the "Band of Sisters for Befriending Burglars," and was being shown over the prison for the first time.

"One prisoner, evidently a man of education, interested her more than the others. He rose and bowed to her when she entered his cell, apologizing for the poorness of his apartment.

Miss Muffitt could not help wondering how this refined man came within the clutches of the law. In fact, as she was leaving his cell, she said:

"May I ask why you are in this distressing place?"

"Madam," he replied, "I am here for robbery at a seaside hotel!"

"How very interesting," said Miss Muffitt. "Were you—or—the proprietor?"

REAL FRIENDSHIP.

"What is your idea of a true friend?"

"A man who will be for you even after you have been praised by his wife."

While the Board of Works is Discussing the Subject They Might Give a Little Attention to the Working Men.

SECURING OIL PRICES

The City's plans for fighting the 1914 dust were briefly discussed by the Board of Works at the mid-weekly meeting last night. Ald. Duncan stated that there were numerous requests fr an extension of the street watering service.

Mayor Buller—We can't extend the service with the present equipment. The districts are already too large and as a result the work is not done as thoroughly as it would be if there was not so much ground to cover with the present carts. If the Street Railway Company would put in a good offer for an electric driven car it might help out.

Ald. Johnston—The paving of street watering by general assessment is very unfair. The people have a right to the water since they paid for out of the general taxes.

Getting Cost of Oil.

Ald. Anderson—Have you the cost of street oil?

Mr. Parsons—We have prices from three companies, but there are never a) others to be heard from.

Ald. Anderson—That is the only effective way of laying the dust.

Mr. Parsons—We can get the same kind of oil they are using in Toronto.

Ald. Green —You don't hear anything about injury to tires there. It might be a good idea to get one cart for oil. One treatment would last two months, and the carts might do for the outlying parts.

Ald. Anderson—Street watering last year cost $3109.

Moved by Ald. Stratton, seconded by Ald. Johnston, that this question stand over until prices of oil and information from Mr. W. H. Munroe are received.

Mayor Buller stated that a cart for oil would cost $850, and to go ahead with an extensive system would mean an expenditure of $10,000.

Where Dust Should be Laid.

While the Board of Works is considering this subject it may be permitted to direct their attention to certain streets in the vicinity of the C. A. E. works, and the Colonial Weaving Company for instance should be well attended to. Any one who knows this district is aware of the fact that in midsummer hundreds of citizens are crossing the roads to and from work and naturally have to walk through the dust. The sidewalks are inadequate for the congested traffic at certain hours of the day.

Dust and heat form a most uncomfortable combination and if this Council is actually solicitous for the comfort of the average citizen it will show a little thoughtfulness for the workers in these concerns. You cannot easily avoid the summer heat, but the dust which adds to the discomfort of the hot weather can be combatted more than it has been in the past. The toiler should have decent conditions on his way to and from work, and the least the City can do is to make an effort to lay the dust on the streets leading to the large mercantile plants.

Another example may be cited in the De Laval Company. Their office building fronts Park Street, where a watering cart has never been seen up to the present. Dust blown from the street will be nothing short of a nuisance in that office if the City neglects to lay it. And there are other factories that could be mentioned in this connection. It might not be necessary to cover all the streets in the neighbourhood, but some effort should be made to prevent the dust from blowing with every wind, in those sections all streets where traffic converges.

If the Mayor and the Council wish to contribute a little comfort to the working men of the City, here is an opportunity that has been too long overlooked.

SHOT SILVER GREY FOX.

Mr. Noah King, the veteran sportsman and widely known proprietor of the summer resort at Belmont Lake, had the good fortune to shoot a beautiful specimen of the silver grey fox, recently. The fur was in prime condition and Mr. King expects to obtain a large price for it.

IMMIGRATION OF EUROPEANS TO CANADA IS RESPONSIBLE FOR THE INCREASED PRICE OF FOOD STUFFS

Professor Mavor, of Toronto University, in Address to Canadian Club Last Night Says That Canada's Present Economical Condition Demands Governmental, Municipal and Individual Frugality.

The last meeting of the Canadian Club for the season, held in Coleman's last night was undoubtedly a very profitable one to the fifty or more members who were present. The address by Professor Mayor of Toronto University on "The Present Economic Condition of Canada" dealt with a matter that has been uppermost in the minds of employers and employees alike during the past year of 1913 and the first three months of this year. His statement of the conditions, based on personal investigation, outlining decisively the influences that that had resulted in the present financial rigidity of money in this country was received with palpable interest. Professor Mayor asserted most emphatically in his address that nothing ruinous or disastrous was foreshadowed by the present stringency, but remarked that conditions required the people of this country to go slow in railway or other construction work, and exercise governmental, municipal and individual frugality. Credit must be distributed so as not to restrict or expand the business activities of the Dominion too greatly.

In opening his address Professor Mayor referred to the fact that Canada was in a transition period during which she would pass from a country made up of self-contained units to a country in which the local units will not be self contained. A few years ago Peterborough was the centre of an agricultural district and practically self contained. There was nothing exported and almost nothing imported. This was true of the local units throughout the whole of Ontario. It was true in a great measure of the Province of Quebec. Tea, sugar and an almost negligible quantity of beer had been the only imports of a family twenty-five miles from Quebec, with which the speaker had lived a short time ago. The mother made their own clothing, the family made their own boots, manufactured and repaired their own furniture and produced their own foodstuffs. They despised store clothes and all shop goods. The period during which a country changed from that stage to one in which the local units were not self contained was always one that threatened grave conditions. Canada was at present in that period and such a change was going on too in Russia.

Most of the Europeans who come to western Canada lived at home in self contained local units, where they lived on the produce of their own farms. The peasant's diet was home-made bread and the clothes were homespun. When they came to this country their life would resemble that of their neighbours they had left behind them until the newcomers became familiar with Canadian customs. Then they would commence to buy their own clothes, and would demand an increased variety of food stuffs. Their life in this country being more strenuous an increased amount of food is necessary to maintain their physical well being. Hence the demand on the world increases without any increase of population, resulting in the net demand of the earth's inhabitants being increased. The increase would be both sudden and great owing to the magnitude of the immigration to this country, from Europe and Asia. These conditions caused in a great measure the high price of food stuffs. To-day general high prices, said the speaker, did not exist, but statistics showed that only the prices of food stuffs had soared abnormally. In other words the prices that were high to-day had been raised because of the increased net demand of the people on the fact of the globe.

Over-Railwayed.

Another result of the change of Canada to a country of commercial economy from one of self-contained economy was the demand for railways. A new country was exceedingly apt to think that because it had splendid natural resources, and because it wanted railways it must get them and could afford to pay for them. Canada had laid miles of railway it was unable to pay for. Everywhere the farmer was a borrower, because his period of production is a long one. A new country is predominating an agricultural one and therefore is a borrowing country. The farmer borrows money to buy seed and commence farming operations and it is a year before his crop is ready to be harvested. The homesteaders in the west are borrowing money on the land which cost them practically nothing, and were buying the surrounding acres to hold for speculation. Thus they were raising the price of land against themselves. The increase in the price of land removed a great attraction for immigrants, and the result was that it was becoming harder to secure a good immigration to this Dominion. Then when land is held for speculation its price becomes inflated until some liquidation is necessary before the price will fall to a level that will meet the immigrant.

Of late the cities of Toronto and Montreal had interposed their credit between the West and England, and the result had been that the west had been able to secure money at a rate of interest that was not exorbitant. The speaker drew the attention of his hearers too, to the fact that the chief imports to Canada were structural materials, food stuffs and articles of luxury (automobiles, etc.)

Then referring to the economic history of New Zealand the speaker told how in that country the people had imported materials and borrowed money to build railroads. Railway construction was carried on to so great an etxent that finally the country was unable to pay the interest on the loans. The railway crisis of 1877 resulted in the failure of several Australian banks and of a more or less serious commercial crisis in England.

A railway was a commodity that yields its uses over a very long period of time. Its value was estimated at a fraction of its worth if it were to be realized at once. It was important that a country should not invest more than a certain proportion of its immediately usable goods in goods that were very highly permanent. For if it does so it will find itself with plenty of goods with a permanent value, but without any goods that are immediately useable. It was like a farmer settling on a farm and going ahead to build a house, neglecting to cultivate the land. When his house is finished he finds that he has something of permanent value, but that he is without the food necessary for his existence.

So New Zealand found that it had built its house, had spent its money in wages and materials, and had no goods for use. After the civil war of the United States that country launched out into a period of railway construction. Soon it was found that too large a proportion of the available credit had been put into too highly permanent things. The result was a great financial crisis. The same thing occurred in Great Britain in the late '40s.

But there was nothing alarming in the present stringency in Canada though it demanded careful handling. Artificial attempts to reduce interest and change economic conditions were useless. There was no known method of overcoming the economic condition of a country. In the last century, Peter the Great of Russia ordered the large capitalists to establish iron manufacturies. Some responded, but the industries thus forced were a failure. Then the Russian capital began to disappear, and Russian deposits in the banks of England began to swell. Then, too, when England took possession of Egypt they found that the capitalists were exacting sixty per cent. on money loaned for farming purposes. They reduced the rate by legislation to 5 p.c. The result was not what was anticipated for the farmers borrowed a great deal of money and bought land for speculative purposes. The result was that the price of the land rose to $100 an acre, and where the interest on an acre was $3.50 per annum under old conditions it became $25 under the new. So artificial means were not to be resorted to.

In conclusion the lecturer said that he did not think Canada was on the verge of a railway commercial crisis, or that the present economic conditions need result in anything ruinous or disastrous to the Dominion.

Wants To See Hydro Light And Lots Of It

Taxpayer Objects to Curtailing Light System on George Street

Peterborough, March 18, 1914

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—Would you permit me a few lines in your valuable columns to express my views as a heavy tax payer in our City. I noticed the account of the Light committee in your paper last night and was very much surprised at the conclusion our aldermen expressed themselves as to the Hydro lights. Has the people of this City not paid for the system that is now in force? Did the aldermen in their election cards in January say anything as to the present system being curtailed? No, they did not. The man that calls himself Hydro Bill was the biggest noise of all, and is he now carrying out the promises he made only a few months ago? Are the ratepayers of this City going to pay for equipment and installing same and have it pulled up by the roots for the sake of a few kickers. We all had a good opinion of Ald. Gordon, but is he going to run the City Council and the people combined. The system as first planned out was a credit to the City. To the travelers and strangers coming into our City it was a big advertisement, and why should it be tampered with. I say, let our light system be carried out as it was in the start. Give us Hydro light and plenty of it. Also extend it and let Peterborough hold its good name as the Electric City, or are we to go back to the old days of dim streets and street corners. Give the ratepayers what they want and what they approved of and no doubt the present Mayor and aldermen can come back and appeal to the citizens for re-election in 1915. Thanking you, Mr. Editor for your valuable space,

Yours,
Heavy Taxpayer.

THREE KILLED IN EXPLOSION OF A BOILER

SCHOONER IS SUNK IN A COLLISION

Special Cable to The Examiner:

OSTEND, GERMANY, March 19.—During a dense fog this morning in the North Sea, the North German Lloyd liner Kaiser Wilhelm ran into a three masted schooner, which immediately sank with all on board. The liner was not damaged and remained on the scene for three hours, but failed to pick up the survivors, or secure any idea of the identity of the sunken vessel. The big vessel is on on her way to New York.

The next meeting wil be held on Thursday, April 2nd, at Miss Gladman's, 512 Dickson Street, when Schubert will be the master studied.

ALD. JOHNSTON HAS ANOTHER DOWNIE ST. DRAIN PROPOSAL

Ald. Johnston disposed of the Downie street creek, but he has a substitute in what he says is a needed drain from Edinburgh to Dublin street, preferably along the G.T.R. Lakefield line. This is a real old-time, hoary proposal and is a worthy follower of the "Blodgett" canal. A former drain that carried the water away from this district is not now in use, and the only remedy is a drain along the G. T. R. to empty into a surface drain at Dublin street.

PASSENGER INJURED IN PECULIAR MANNER

Knocked From Car Step When Runaway Team Collided With Train.

PORT HOPE, March 18.—Mr. W. Green, a passenger, standing on the rear platform of a car of the 10.10 train from the North, on its way to the G.T.R. Station, had his leg broken when a runaway team drawing a hack, belonging to Lingard Brothers, collided with the car. The steps of the car were torn off, and Mr. Green was thrown violently to the ground. Two bones of his left leg were broken, and one of the horses was so seriously hurt that it had to be shot. Two commerical travellers, Frank Kennan, of New York, and G. W. Lamont, of Toronto, who were in the hack, had a narrow escape from serious injuries.

TOO GOOD.

"To say that honesty is the best policy—to say, in other words that the more honest you are the richer you will become—that is silly."

The speaker, Harry Woodruff, the well-known Grand Army of the Republic lecturer, of Brooklyn, had been discussing the honesty of George Washington just mentioned.

"To be virtuous means to be poor and wretched. Take the case of Austin Mayhew Washington Clay.

"Austin Mayhew visited the office of a Nola Chucky lawyer and said:

"'Ah wants a divorce from mah husband, Sal.'

"'Why, Austin, what has Sal been doing?'

"'She done got religious, suh, an' Ah hain't tasted chicken in free months.'"

Members of the order will be here from Lindsay, Port Hope and Havelock, and one of the biggest nights that Marathon Lodge has put on will be on Tuesday night next.

THREATENED STRIKE ON THE C. P. R. IS AVERTED

Strike Would Have Tied up the Entire Traffic from Coast to Coast.

MONTREAL, March 18.—As a result of negotiations that have been conducted during the past few days between representatives of the maintenance-of-way employees engaged on the C.P.R., and Mr. D. McNicholl, the Vice President of the Company, a threatened strike that would have practically tied up the entire traffic from coast to coast of the company has been averted.

The men concerned, who are three thousand strong, demanded an increase of wages equivalent to about thirty cents a day. Failing to secure this, the men threatened to go on strike.

In an interview with Mr. Lowe, International President of the Maintenance-of-Way Employees' Association, yesterday, it was learned that as a result of conferences held with Mr. McNicoll, it was mutually agreed to accept that part of the recent arbitration board's award, which recommended that each body should withdraw its claims for the present. Mr. McNicoll further agreed to meet the delegation at any time on and after May 1.

MARTIN'S MURDERER A YOUTH.

Looks Like a High School Boy—Counsel to Plead Manslaughter.

NEW YORK, March 19.—A clean cut 19-year old youth is on trial here for the murder of William G. Martin, a Toronto milliner, who was found strangled to death in a rooming house at 453 West Fifty-seventh Street, on August 15th last. The prisoner, whose name is Schaeffer, looks more like a high school graduate than a slayer, but according to police and district attorney, he has admitted his guilt. The trial is being conducted before Justice Davis, in the criminal branch of the supreme court.

Schaeffer's lawyers will endeavour to convince the jurors he is not guilty of murder in the first degree, which crime implies premeditation. They will seek a verdict of manslaughter, carrying with it a penalty of indeterminate sentence in Sing Sing.

Shot Silks Add Many Smart Touches To Spring Costumes and Gowns

Popular At All Times; and This Season More Beautiful Than Ever.

SURELY no other fabric better exemplifies the prowess of the weaver's art, than the handsome silks that have a warp of one colour and a filling of another.

The changing play of colours combines with the lustrous sheen of the Silk, in producing a charm that places this material in high favour for the making of Blouses and like things; while its use for trimmings of every description is almost universal.

And just now when one is busily planning for items of Spring Apparel, many possibilities of pretty things suggest themselves in the handsome array of these silks, now to be seen in the Dress Goods Section on the Main Floor.

The weave is twilled, and the width is 38 inches; while the colour combinations are as follows;—Blue and Red, Blue and Tan, Mole and Blue, Green and Blue and a particularly pleasing shade of Old Rose with Blue. The price is $1.50 per yard.

The Frolaset Front Lacing Corset

'First things first' being a axiom of accepted wisdom, the woman who would have a good appearance, looks first to her Corsets.

If these are without fault, then surely the foundation of correctly fitting apparel is laid.

And therefore the reason why so many are now turning to the Frolaset Front Lacing Corset, seeing that it is comfort itself; is most convenient to lace, and is properly boned and and modelled withal.

All sizes can be fitted, the price being $4.25.

SWIMMERS ARE SHOT

Man Goes Insane and Badly Injures Four Men.

Special Wire to The Examiner:

NEW YORK, N.Y., March 18.—Two men are dying and two others badly hurt as a result of Isaac Skinner alleging that somebody had stolen two diamond rings from him, rank amuck in the baths here this morning among twenty naked swimmers, firing his automatic revolver right and left. He was finally overpowered and arrested, and his rings were found in his pockets.

BODY OF FIRE VICTIM IS IDENTIFIED

Special Wire to The Examiner:

TORONTO, March 18.— The third body taken from the ruins of the Woodbine Hotel fire, was positively identified this morning as that of John A. Graham, commercial traveller of London. Two men are still missing and possibly dead, Fred Levinstone of New York and Samuel Beatty of Guelph.

CHALLENGES THE PREMIER

Special Wire to The Examiner:

LONDON, March 19.— Bonar Law and Sir Edward Carson this evening in the Commons moved a vote of censure on the Asquith Government for refusing to give the details of Ulster counties' local option schemes. Then he challenged the Premier to decide the matter by referendum to the people of the United Kingdom.

FIANCEE BURNED

Special Wire to The Examiner:

LONDON, March 19.—A most pathetic scene occurred at the Grand Trunk station on the arrival of the International Limited from Toronto. Hoping against hope that her fiancee, John A. Graham, lost in the Woodbine Hotel fire in Toronto, was on the train, Edna Burridge, aged 21, waited for him to appear. She had a letter received from Graham a few hours before, stating that he would be home on the Limited sure and asked her to meet him. When he did not come, the girl was completely prostrate. They were to have been married in May.

Geological survey estimates place the production of Portland cement in the United States last year at the record breaking figures of 92,460,000 barrels, a gain of almost 10,000,000 barrels over 1912.

BOARD OF WORKS DISCUSSED GASOLINE TANKS ON STREETS

Grant Permission to One Concern, Talk of Rescinding Right to Another—Will Get Use of City Engineer's Car for the Summer

REPAIR ROAD ROLLER.

Ald. Duncan's Willing Workers keep up the good work. The weekly grind last night produced considerable business which was disposed of with the usual despatch. If there are any moments wasted by the discussion of extraneous topics, no blame can be attached to the chairman.

The members of the Board present were Mayor Buller and Aldermen Saunders, McIntyre, Johnston, Stratton, Anderson and Duffus.

A letter was read from G. K. Rackham, local representative of the Canadian Oil Company Limited, in regard to his request for permission to install a Bowser gasoline curb tank in front of his office, at 160 Charlotte Street.

Ald. Duncan remarked that at a previous meeting some objection had been raised on the ground that the company was not a local concern. Mr. Rackham wrote that the company had been doing business in Peterborough during the past six or seven years, and was handled on a commission business practically similar to the other oil companies.

The tank to be installed has a capacity of 300 gallons.

Engineer Parsons reported that he had no objection to laying the tank in the proposed location.

Moved by Ald. Stratton, seconded by Ald. Stratton that the request of Mr. Rackham be approved, the work to be done under the supervision of the City Engineer, and that it be understood that the tank shall be removed at any time at the request of the City.

Mr. Banks' Tank.

On account of the Street Railway Company's plans to lay a double track in front of Mr. Chas. Banks' store on George Street, the question arose as to whether traffic would be in any way interfered with.

Mr. Parsons reported that 16 ft. 6 in. would remain between the new track and an auto standing alongside the curb. Mayor Buller said that Mr. Banks would contest the matter if there is any order that he remove his gasoline tank.

Ald. Johnston—There was quite a discussion on this very point when the tank was being laid. It was then thought proper that it should be placed at the rear of the store.

Ald. Duffus—Permission was granted on the understanding that it would be removed if the City made the demand.

Ald. Green—We can wait until it is a detriment to street traffic.

Ald. Duncan—If the street paving is begun at that point there might not be sufficient time for Mr. Banks to move it.

Ald. Green—Any car has a perfect right to stand at a curb, and there is ample time to secure 20 gallons of gasoline.

The question was allowed to stand over.

Gasoline For Mr. Parsons.

Mr. Parsons asked the Board if last year's agreement would hold good again in regard to the use of his automobile. The City pays for its maintenance, gasoline and repairs, and it is used for City business.

Mayor Buller—I found it of great help last year when I was on the Board of Works.

Moved by Ald. Duffus, seconded by Ald. Duffus, that the same arrangement be carried out this year.

Repairs For Road Roller.

White and Ackford estimated repairs to the road roller at $200, and it was moved that the old mogul be put into shape for the season's work.

WIFE OF NAT GOODWIN NEARLY CHOKED TO DEATH

BROCKVILLE, March 18 — Miss Margaret Moreland, wife of Nat Goodwin, the comedian, following a performance here, narrowly escaped choking to death in attempting to swallow a capsule of castor oil. Mrs. Goodwin was suffering from a bad cold and at her room in the hotel sought relief by medicine. The capsule stuck in her throat and caused her to choke.

A nurse, who happened to be in the hotel, rendered first aid, until the arrival of a doctor.

On account of her illness the Renfrew date, billed for to-night, was cancelled. This afternoon she was able to leave with the Company for Ottawa.

P. C. BROWN'S FIRST ARREST

One of our new constables, P. C. Brown, had occasion to make an arrest this afternoon. A 'phone message from Margaret Avenue was received at the police station and P. C. Brown was sent to see what was the matter. He returned in three-quarters of an hour, carrying a sack. The string which tied it being cut, a young cat was disclosed. His charge was deposited in the ladies' cell.

The Brightly Painted Pride of Other Days.—The trim little wood-burner, the Mono, for several years the pride of the old narrowgauge Toronto, Grey and Bruce Railway (now the C.P.R. Owen Sound division). The Mono, it is said, once made the run of 122 miles over the line in 148 minutes, or 50 miles an hour. This holds the record for the line. Owing to the many curves, no engineer of a heavy modern locomotive would attempt to break that record on that branch.

AN APPRECIATION OF THE POETS OF PETERBORO'

(By an Admirer)

Tell me not in words of sorrow,
That our paper empty seems;
Wait again until to-morrow,
Poets then will paint their dreams.

Not to-day our time we're spending,
On such things as news or sport,
But just now our space we're lending
To the poets, as we "ort."

Not of rhyme and not of reason,
Can we take the time to shirk;
Nor from subjects out of season,
Do we ever mean to shrink.

For the future, how-e'er pleasant,
We can make no promise yet;
We are acting in the present,
And on poetry we're set.

As we sit each day and ponder
O'er the copy we receive,
Then our minds begin to wonder
And our hearts begin to grieve.

If we find that we're forgotten
By our poets, kind and true,
(Though the stuff they send is rotten)
Still, their very best they do!

To the ranks of poets, daily,
We are adding more and more,
Still they come, approaching gaily,
Bringing poems by the score.

Little talent they are showing,
Never seems their verse to rhyme,
(Judging by the way they're going,
They will soon be doing time).

Thoughts of poets all remind us,
As they do not sign their name,
Though their efforts oft annoy us;
Really, we can't fix the blame.

Let us then be up and writing,
Join the ranks before too late;
Lots of poetry we're sighting,
Readers, now you know your fate.

(With apologies to The Psalm of Life.

SOME HOT SHOTS FOR CHURCHILL

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Eng., March 19.— In the Commons Lord Charles Beresford reminded First Lord of Admiralty, Winston Churchill, that he himself was working hard for reform on the lower decks when Churchill was pulling strong at the business end of the feeding bottle. He also remarked that Churchill's trips in aeroplanes were about as near heaven as he would ever get.

"How many times have you been before me?" asked the Kentucky judge.

"I don't say how many times, yuh honour, but in de old days I spent it was at least several. I has boarded har in all de best hotels in Louisville."

USING POWER TO PROMOTE PARTY INTERESTS

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, March 18.—Parliament Buildings.—Politics in general and, including in this, Canadian and Ontario politics, have none too high a reputation as it is; the fundamental significance of the Ontario Government's action in "jamming" through the House by irregular means a bill allowing more freedom than formerly to members of the Legislature in accepting commissions from the Dominion Government is that public confidence in Legislatures, already weakening considerably, will be still further reduced. To accomplish their immediate end the Ontario Government has pushed down still further, in public esteem, a House of Assembly which one would have thought they would rather have been anxious to raise in popular estimation.

It is not a question as to whether Howard Ferguson should be indemnified or not. The issue as it has developed is much broader and graver than that. The Provincial Secretary, a responsible Minister of the Crown, repeated continually an assertion that the Act should not be limited to help Ferguson only, as the Opposition proposed, but must be a general bill, because there were other members who were in as imilar plight to that of Ferguson.

Whether these are Conservative or Liberal, what possible right has either the Government or the Legislature to withhold their names and give them a general whitewash? The Legislature is not a "gentlemen's club" which can absolve its own members quite apart from what the general public has to say. The name of every member involved should be given publicly and then, if justified, indemnity could be provided in each individual case.

The Liberal Opposition in fighting until five o'clock in the morning in a vain effort to defeat this Bill, not only were protesting against interference with the rights of the minority in the Legislature but were fighting for the principle of publicity and a full glare of light in politics which is one of the live issues to-day throughout the world. The time for secrecy as to acts of legislators has gone. Public opinion is arrayed solidly against the practice. Surely the Government knows this, and the fact that they persisted in their arbitrary methods to pass this Bill at one sitting, has aroused in the mind of the man on the street, as expressed not only by the Independent Labour member from Hamilton, Mr. Allan Studholme, but also expressed freely in many quarters to-day, a strong suspicion that the Government must have something pretty big to conceal.

MISSIONARY CONVENTION

To be Held at Bethany Tabernacle During Next Four Days

A four days' Missionary Convention with Bible and Missionary addresses in the afternoon, and evangelistic preaching at night, will be held in Bethany Tabernacle, beginning to-night and continuing over Sunday.

The missionaries to be present are Rev. and Mrs. M. E. Ekvall of the Thibetan Border Mission of the C. and M. A. Until quite recently the land of Thibet has been closed to the Missionary and his message. Mr. and Mrs. Ekvall are doubtless among the first to bring missionary tidings from this isolated country to the people of Peterborough. Their's will be an unusually interesting story to those who find it possible to hear them. They will speak each day at 3 p.m. and also give a short talk at the beginning of the evening service.

The evangelistic address each night will be given by Rev. E. J. Richards, a well-known evagnelist of New York City.

A cordial invitation is extended to all.

PETERBORO' ATHLETIC CLUB STARTING CAMPAIGN TO SECURE CLUB ROOMS

This Step Was Decided on at a General Meeting of the Club Held in the Y. M. C. A. Last Night

ENTHUSIASM SHOWN

At a well attended general meeting of the Peterborough Athletic Club held in the Y.M.C.A. last night with the president, Dr. McPherson, in the chair, it was decided to commence an immediate campaign for funds with which to secure suitable club rooms. It was felt that the desired objects of the club, ie., to develop and encourage different branches of amateur sport, especially among the youngest players, and to establish a spirit of co-operation among the devotees of athletics generally, could be best obtained if the organization had headquarters where the members could frequently meet. The meeting was unanimously in favour of such a step, and it was the opinion, judging from the favourable manner in which the club had been received by the public, that the organization would be supported by the people of Peterborough.

In opening the meeting Dr. McPherson thanked the members for the honour they had done him in electing him president of the club. He felt that it was an honour to be at the head of an organization that he was sure would fill a long felt want. An Athletic Club along the lines of the present organization had been talked about years ago, but had never got beyond the talk stage. Now, however, a movement along practical lines was under way and he could see no reason why the Athletic Club should not flourish.

Dr. McPherson reported to the meeting what had been done in connection with the lacrosse campaign. The matter had been taken up by the executive of the club, who had called a meeting which proved to be well attended and at which considerable interest was shown. A committee had been appointed to work out the details and it was the intention of the Athletic Club to have Secretary Frank Doyle of the Ontario Lacrosse Association, come to Peterborough in the near future to address a meeting of lacrosse enthusiasts.

The recommendation of the Executive committee that the Club's colours should be light and dark blue, was carried by the meeting.

It was decided that the admission fee to the Club should be $1.00. The question of what monthly fee should be charged was left until the next meeting.

Subscription lists have been prepared and may be secured at the Examiner Office by the members, tonight, or any time to-morrow. Members who were not at last night's meeting are asked to call, in regard to this matter.

AN APPEAL TO THE PUBLIC

Do you believe an organization of young men, united with the object of developing and encouraging different branches of amateur sport, a good thing for Peterborough?

Are you in sympathy with a movement that has as its fundamental principle the fostering of a clean, healthy spirit of co-operation among the athletes of the City?

Does the ideal of a body of keen young Peterborough boys, working together to put sport on a higher plane, to build up a sentiment of playing the game hard but fairly, appeal to you?

You parents, do you want your sons to belong to an organization where they will be inculcated with a love of clean sport, where their bodies will be built up, while at the same time they will be kept away from bad habits and be under the jurisdiction of men whose motive is to develop youngsters along proper lines?

If you answer "yes" to these questions, you should rally round the Peterborough Athletic Club, which has precisely these objects in view. For years an organization of this kind has been talked of but nothing has been done. Now the movement is under way and the people of Peterborough are in a position to assist in a work that is being started on lines that will lead to a permanent organization. The first steps towards success is the establishment of suitable club headquarters. This the Club has already decided upon, but the equipment of such rooms will require funds, not a very large sum, but large enough to be a burden on the young athletes for whose benefit the Club has been organized. To have the desired results it must be made possible for the youngsters to belong to the Athletic Club without too great a financial strain. The Club will be self-sustaining in a short time, it is hoped, but in the meantime the generosity of the public is being appealed to. The Club has commenced a campaign for funds and subscription lists will be brought before those whom it is felt will be willing to assist in the starting of this movement on a sound basis.

The Examiner bespeaks on behalf of the Athletic Club a cordial welcome and a ready response. The Club is a movement along the right lines, started in the proper spirit and with praiseworthy ideals. It is worthy of support and there is no doubt that itwill be forthcoming.

TOWN OF HASTINGS HAS A REAL LACROSSE BOOM

Mr. Frank Doyle, ex-Secretary of the O. L. A., was in Town last week on a missionary trip to revive our good old national game of lacrosse in its old haunts in this district.

Meetings have been and are to be held in the next few days in all the Towns in the district re-organising to play Canada's national game. Campbellford, Havelock, Stirling, Norwood, Marmora, Tweed and all the places along the line are coming in, and it is expected that there will be a grand rally of old players and enthusiasts and all wishing to take up the game, on Friday night.

Sticks which formerly cost $3 are now on sale here at $1 and the old $1.50 stick is placed at 50c to encourage the youngsters to get in the game.

District groups are to be formed, and a trophy is given for each group in addition to which each member of the winning team gets a handsome gold filled medal.

We have heard a great deal about reviving Hastings old favourite pastime and think if ever the time was ripe to do so, it is now. All interested should get to the meeting and start things going right.

To encourage and help the school boys to take up lacrosse Mr. "Pat" Vernon is giving a full set of lacrosse sticks away, twelve, in all. The boy standing at the head of his class in each grade in both schools on May 1st will be the lucky and also deserving, boy. A little more of this kind of encouragement and lacrosse will soon boom again.

A public meeting will be held in the Council Chamber on Friday evening at 8 p.m., for the purpose of organizing a lacrosse club. All interested are requested to attend. — Hastings Star.

LACROSSE BOOMING IN THE EAST

Mr. Doyle Meets With an Enthusiastic Reception

HAVELOCK, March 18.—Mr. F. Doyle of Toronto, Secretary of the Ontario Amateur Lacrosse Association, was in Town on Thursday last, endeavouring to resurrect the old-time lacrosse spirit among the old players and to introduce the grand old game among the school children. Mr. James L. Hughes, of Toronto, and Mr. Laly of Cornwall have undertaken to revive the interest in lacrosse and the former has collected a fund towards paying the expenses of Mr. Doyle in going about Ontario in his mission to the schools, while Mr. Laly is offering to provide first-class sticks at 50c and $1 each —a figure far below the actual cost. If an eight-team Public or High School League is established in a district, Mr. Lally will present beautiful medals for the winners.

Mr. Doyle visited Madoc, Marmora, Tweed and Stirling, and met with an enthusiastic reception both from the schools and the senior teams. Those four villages will form a district in the intermediate series of the O. A. L. A. this year, and Mr. Doyle is trying to get Havelock, Campbellford, Hastings and Norwood in another one.

Havelock has as good a show to turn out a winning team in either of the public or high school series, and in the intermediate O. A. L. A. We have plenty of material for all three teams and with every neighbouring town playing the game; a great season's sport would be assured.

A grand mass meeting will be held in the town hall in the near future, when lacrosse matters will be gone into in detail and a Club formed to promote the game in Havelock.

SCANDALOUS.

A young lady visiting her aunt in the country came in late one afternoon. "Where in the world have you been?" asked her aunt. "In the hammock all the afternoon," she replied, "with my beloved Robert Browning." The aunt eyed her sternly. Then she said: "If I hear of any more such scandalous proceedings I shall certainly write to your mother."

Tim Jordan—The veteran first baseman of the National and International Leagues, who was released from the Toronto International League team last season. Tim has got the greatest name as a home-run hitter of any player in the game, and it was because he showed his desire to get back to the "big league" that he was released from Toronto. He is now trying out with the New York Giants team, and while playing for New York against Waco, in an exhibition game, he played errorless ball at first base, besides knocking the only homerun of the game. As New York and Toronto practice on the same grounds in the South there is a likelihood of Tim refilling his old position with the Toronto team.

A CHANCE FOR THE WRESTLERS OF THIS CITY

Toronto, March 16.

Sporting Editor Examiner:

Dear Sir,— Little Hackenschmidt, featherweight champion of Great Britain, is a visitor at Toronto, having arrived from the west a few days ago. He is on his way to Liverpool via Montreal and will visit your City shortly. He is open to wrestle any man in the world at his weight, 112 pounds, for $500 a side, or any one up to 150 pounds for $100 up to $250.

Will you kindly insert Hack's challenge in your paper. I beg to remain,

Yours truly,

HARRY MORT,

Manager for Little Hackenschmidt.

CANADIAN LEAGUE NOTES

Ottawa Free Press: The Canadian League has made wonderful strides in its three years' existence. Starting out a class D organization, the circuit now has a legitimate class B chain of centres, and is only awaiting the decision of the National Commission to attain the class B rating. The standard of ball has also improved proportionately to the onward march in classification.

But there is one point where the magnates are still languishing in class D surroundings, and that is in the matter of "swapping" players. The Ottawa Club believes in changes of faces on its line-up every two or three seasons, and has suggested trades with various other clubs of the league, whereby nothing but an even break was required. But not in a single instance has another club considered a trade where the exchange would not weaken the Senators. For instance, Frank Kubat was offered to Erie, who in turn, were willing to turn over either Jack Fryer, now a mountain of flesh, and of no use to any club, or Jack Fitzpatrick, a pitcher who is a dead one, as his record with a first division club will show.

The latest joke trade, however, is that which Manager Midge Craven, of St. Thomas, proposes, viz.; Pitchers Howick and Clement of St. Thomas, for Third Baseman Bullock and First Baseman Cody Dolan, of Ottawa. There are still thirten days of the month left till the 1st of April, but apparently Craven is rushing the season. Clement is a fairly good pitcher, Howick isn't. But the joke comes when two .300 hitting infielders are wanted for a pair of ordinary boxmen. In a couple of seasons some of the magnates will realise trading players is not to see how much the best of the deal they can make as what benefit it will be to the clubs concerned in the swap.

The Senators will be attired in brand new regalia as in past seasons. The home uniforms will of course be white, as required by the league rules, but the trimmings have not yet been decided upon. The road outfits will be the orthodox grey with decorations to be selected later on. Instead of sweater coats, mackinaws will be purchased. They are all the rage among the big league clubs.

WASHING HIS TROUSSEAU.

Mrs. Flannigan: "An' do it be true what I hear that your son Mike is engaged to be married?"

Mrs. O'Flaherty: "It do be that, and mighty soon, too."

Mrs. Flannigan: "An' where be the boy, now?"

Mrs. O'Flaherty: "Sure he be in bed, waitin' for me to wash his trousseau."

FARM AND DAIRY MARKETS

Toronto, Monday, March 16.—At last Canadians are coming back to their senses in matters of national expenditure. Ever since Confederation we have been booming railways and bonusing industries with no thought of our growing expenditures. Many people seemed to have thought that the money was coming in, and that it had to be spent. Only now are we awakening to the fact that we have been mortgaging our future and allowing our natural resources to pass into the hands of corporations. An evidence of the awakening that is now taking place is the almost universal, non-partisan opposition evident throughout the country in opposition to further financial assistance to McKenzie and Mann. The sooner we get over this spending mania the sooner will our credit strength be properly restored in the world's money markets.

Trade has been normal for the past week, if anything a little brisker than the week previous. A disturbing feature are the slow remittances from many sources. Changes in farm produce quotations have been few

WHEAT

Excellent prospects for the winter wheat crop in the Western states have tended to take the edge off the market and quotations have receded a trifle. The reaction would have been much greater had it not been that receipts are falling off so rapidly at Winnipeg. Ontario wheat is in a strong position. Quotations: No. 1 Northern, $1; No. 3, 99½c Ontario, 90c to 95c.

COARSE GRAINS

The grain market has been strong all along the line. The scarcity of mill feeds has induced a larger demand for feeding grains, and quotations have advanced a fraction of a cent. Oats, C.W. No. 2, 43c; No. 3, 41c; Ontario oats, No 2, 40c; No. 3, 41c; Ontario oats, 39½c to 40c; American corn, 70c to 74c; Ontario corn, 66½c to 67c; barley, 48c to 49c buckwheat, 75c to 76c; rye, 91c to 93c peas, 90c to $1. Quotations at Montreal are: Oats, C.W. No. 2, 44c; No. 3, 43c corn, 72c; barley, malting, 67½c to 68c feed, 49c to 50c; buckwheat, 86c; peas $1.75 to $1.85; rye, 76c to 78c; feed wheat 70c to 80c.

MILL FEEDS

Some feeders complain that bran is not to be had. The demand from local dealers is heavy and quotations higher. Bran, $23 to $25; shorts, $25 to $26; middlings, $29 to $30; feed flour, $34 to $36. Montreal dealers ask for bran, $23; shorts, $25; middlings $29.

HAY AND STRAW

No hay is being exported to the Old Country. Exports to the United States are only in occasional small lots. At the same time supplies are in excess of local demand, and quotations have receded 50c a ton: Choice baled hay, $7 to $14.50; No. 2, $12 to $13; No. 3, $9 to $10; baled straw, $6.50; all on track, Toronto. Conditions at Montreal are similar, with a similar recession in prices. No. 1, $16 to $16.50; No. 2, $12 to $14; No. 3, $9.50 to $10.

POTATOES AND BEANS

Fine weather and the resumption of freight traffic over Western lines has not yet served to decrease potato quotations. It may be that farmers are already beginning to hold back supplies for seed. Many dealers, however, expect lower prices next week. Ontario's 90c in car lots; New Brunswick's 61. A Montreal Green Mountains bring 65c to 70c on track.

Bean quotations are: Primes, $2.20 to $2.25; hand-picked, $2.30 to $2.35. A Montreal dealers quote hand-picked, $2.3 to $2.12½; three-pound pickers, $1.70 to $1.90.

SEEDS

Merchants are paying farmers a basis as follows: Alsike, No. 1, $5.50 to $6; No. 2, $7.50 to $8; No. 3, $6 to $7; red clover No. 1, $5.25 to $5.75; No. 2, $7.50 to $8 timothy, No. 1, $2.75 to $3.25; No. 2, $ to $3.50.

EGGS AND POULTRY

Receipts now control the market. They are arriving in good quantities, and are quoted to the retail trade at 24c to 26c. Consumption has greatly increased as lower quotations are not looked for immediately. At Montreal daily receipts have been quickly cleaned up. Local supplies do not begin to meet the demand, and United States eggs are being largely imported. Two cases of Chinese eggs have also arrived, and are said to be of fine quality. Quotations are 28½ for United States and 25c for Canadian stock. Lower quotations are expected.

Poultry quotations are: Dressed fowl 16c to 18c; alive, 15c to 16c; spring chickens, 16c to 20c and 14c to 15c; geese, 14 to 16c and 10c to 11c; turkeys, 22c to 25 and 14c to 17c.

HIDES AND WOOL

Quotations are: Hides, cured, 16½c to 18c; part cured, 12½c to 14c; green, 12 to 12½c; horse hides $4.50 to $5; horse hair, 40c to 45c; calf skins, cured, 17½ to 18c; deskins, 25 to $1.50; hunk skins $4 to $5.25.

Wool quotations are: Unwashed, coarse 15½c to 17c; fine, 17½c to 17½c; washed coarse, 20c to 22½c; coarse, 23½c to 25½c fine 25½c to 27½c.

LIVE STOCK MARKET

Special Wire to The Examiner:

TORONTO, March 18. — Union Stock Yards.—Receipts were 41 cars, 905 cattle, 1,256 hogs, 68 sheep and lambs, and 41 calves.

Cattle—The run of cattle was again light, but on account of light demands for beef, trade was slow with prices easy. One heifer of Easter quality, weighing 2,040 lbs., sold at $9 per cwt. Choice butchers' steers, $7.75 to $8.00; good butchers' steers, $7.40 to $7.65; medium butchers' steers, $7.00 to $7.25; common butchers' steers, $6.50 to $6.75; choice butchers' heifers, $7.75 to $8.00; common butchers' heifers, $7.25 to $7.50; choice cows, $6.75 to $7.00; good cows $6.50 to $6.75; canners, $3.75 to $4.75.

Feeders and Stockers—Not many offered and prices remain steady. Choice steers, $6.75 to $7.00; medium steers, $6.25 to $6.50; stockers, $4.75 to $5.75.

Milkers and Springers—Not many on sale, prices firmer at $60 to $100 each, bulk sold at $70 to $90 each.

Calves—Only 41 calves offered, scarcely enough to make a market. Choice veals, $10.00 to $11.50; common and medium, $7.50 to $9.50.

Sheep and Lambs—Light receipts made a firm and active market. Sheep, $6.50 to $7.50; culls and rams, $4.00 to $6.25; lambs, choice ewes and wethers, $9.25 to $9.75.

Hogs—Market steady. Selected, fed and watered $9.25 and $8.90 f.o.b. cars, and $9.50 weighed off cars.

Larry Gilbert, the outfielder who is being given a trial by the Boston Braves, has a slight limp, caused by one leg being shorter than the other. Curiously enough this doesn't seem to interfere with his work in the field.

Taxi-cab Makes Its Appearance For Local Service

Dr. Pulkinghorn has added to his livery a new taxi-cab that will be put into service on April 1st. It is a Ford model and a replica of the city type of taxi. Dr. Pulkinghorn has a thoroughly equipped livery, and this latest addition will give it a decidedly good finish.

RETAIL MERCHANTS ARE EXEMPT

Final Amendment Completing the Exemption Passed on Tuesday

The retail merchants in the province of Ontario will rejoice that their efforts to be left out of the Compensation Act have not been in vain.

When the Bill was introduced on Tuesday a final amendment was added to the Bill, making clear the exemption.

The Retail Merchants' Association were very active in this respect and had hundreds of petitions signed by thousands of retailers all over the province asking the government to be exempted from its operations. The final chapter was concluded on Tuesday morning by Mr. E. M. Trowern, Provincial Secretary of the Association of Retail Merchants who has put in a great deal of time and work in connection wit hit. He appared lately before the commissioner who drafted the Bill and put in a great deal of evidence.

GROSS PROFITS OF THE CANADIAN GENERAL ELECTRIC

Amount to Over Two Million Dollars—Patents and Contracts Have Been Written Down to the Sum of One Dollar—Real Estate Values Increased.

The profit and loss account of the Canadian General Electric Co. for the year 1913 shows that the gross profits amounted to $2,939,988.00 as compared with $2,011,719.88, indicating an increase in business notwithstanding the financial stringency that occurred in the country.

Out of the gross profits for the year the sum of $470,933.98 was applied to depreciation and $222,654.69 for interest, leaving the net profits for the year $1,336,399.03. From this dividends on the preferred stock and bonus on the common stock took $778,634.17, leaving surplus earning for the year of $550,675.70.

Reserve Amount Increased.

Of this surplus $338,156.65 was added to the reserve fund and $231,-41.71 to the balance of the profit and loss account. As the balance of the credit of this profit and loss at the end of 1912 stood at $689,380.63, it had increased at the end of 1913 with the amount carried to it to $913,632.34.

$2,700,000 and this with the amount $2,700,000 and this with the amoune standing at the credit of profit and loss made the total surplus at the end of 1913 $3,613,932.34, equal to 36 per cent. of the par value of the share capital of both common and preference. There has also been accumulated a reserve for depreciation now amounting to $1,537,605.42.

In connection with the inventory, the directors' report states that following the policy of the company, this has been taken at cost or market value, whichever was the lower. Ample deductions have been made for depreciation and any obsolete stock has been written down to scrap value.

Real Estate Advanced

The real estate owned by the company has advanced in value since the date of purchase, but has been carried on the books at the original purchase price. The services of the Canadian Appraisal Co. were obtained in 1913, to make a complete itemized appraisal, and the report shows the replacement value of the real estate, plan and equipment to be $3,200,000 in excess of the book values. From this amount they have deducted $1,271,685, leaving an excess value of $1,928,315.

In the previous year the Company, under the headings of "patents" and "contracts" in its balance sheet, show the item of $503,761.4., being their book value, after depreciation had been written off from year to year. Included in this were the good will, the Company's own patents, and the contracts and trade marks, which were used in the conduct of the business. These being of intangible value have been written down to the nominal sum of $1, thus increasing the value of the real estate by the amount written off patents and contracts, and allowing the balance of excess of the value of real estate, plant and equipment, amounting to $1,421,554.58 to remain as an inactive reserve.—Toronto Telegram.

WEST-ENDERS ALARMED

Suspicious Actions of Strange Man Caused Police to be Called Out.

Last night, at the Police Station, telephone message was received at 1 o'clock, asking that an officer be sent out to the west end of the City, where the suspicious actions of a strange man caused some alarm among a number of residents of that section.

Mr. and Mrs. Lillico, who conduct the grocery business at the corner of Charlotte and Park Streets, had locked up their store, after emptying the till of its contents, and were making their way to their home, near by, when they noticed a suspicious individual following them. Becoming somewhat alarmed they communicated with the Police, and an officer was sent to remove the man. On the Officer's arrival, however, no trace of the man could be found. Nothing was missing this morning, but it was reported that a man of strange appearance walked into an adjoining house and demanded his breakfast.

By comparing notes, Mr. Lillico and the owner of the house where the man obtained a free breakfast, have come to the conclusion that it was the same person. He was wearing over his mouth, according to other reports from the Police Station.

Many people in the West End, after having seen the photographs in last night's Examiner, declare that he is one of the Montreal murderers, who made their escape after killing a police officer.

Further investigations will likely be made.

P. C. Hayward, who was sent from the Police Station, was in the vicinity for about three-quarters of an hour, but could see no sign of the man. Mr. Lillico had in the neighbourhood of $500 in his possession, and he said that but for the fact that he was accompanied by his wife, he would have been subjected to rough usage at the hands of the unknown man.

The person who has caused all this uneasiness, is described as a man about 5 feet 10 inches in hight, wearing a black overcoat and hard felt hat.

C. P. R. TRAINS WERE BLOCKED BY THE SNOW

The Toronto morning papers were very late this morning. The reason for the delay, was a block on the line between Myrtle and Burketon Junction. A heavy freight train had got fast in the drift, and held all traffic up for a considerable time.

The drifts were occasioned by last night's rough wind, which is peculiar to this month of March. It is reported that slight damage has been done all round the country.

Rev. F. E. Powell Gave Address

Rev. F. E. Powell, Rector of St. Barnabas, Toronto, gave a most eloquent address before a good congregation in St. John's Church, Wednesday evening on the "Attitude of By-standers," the text being "Is it nothing to you, all ye that pass by."

Indifference would be changed to interest as people realised their true position and need, and the power of the appeal from the Cross. In the course of his address Mr. Powell expressed his pleasure in visiting so beautiful a Church. Long before seeing Peterborough he had been in connection with the City and its Rector, through using a valuable Manual, published by Canon Davidson, entitled "Features of Our Faith," which was widely used through the Canadian Church.

SOME THINGS AND A FEW OTHERS

The box holders on No. 8 rural route are complaining that the Courier did not make his regular trip yesterday. They do not think the storm was sufficiently severe to prevent him performing his duty.

We told you so on that weather stuff. If one could call the market as easily as that, it would be a pipe. Anyway, Hicks had better look to his laurels.

Regarding to-morrow, would say that there will likely be some weather.

Squaw winter is what the Senators at the market call it.

The ladies asked for one teeny-weeny police woman, and the City gets some five hundred pounds of burly manhood, a veritable strong arm squad.

The City will be the losers if the interest of the ladies ceased with the rebuff they received. Better co-operate with the available forces.

Peterborough first! There's a mighty good slogan for the present Council, but there must be action to get results.

A swimming pool would be a grand shooting gallery, but the thought of presenting bare pelt to a bullet is not the most appealing. Not even a weskit to stop it.

It is now or never for many of the bushers cavorting in the training training belt.

The ladies may safely place their trust in Chief Thompson. Three new men will help him considerably.

Dr. Pulkinghorn's taxi will lend a decided touch of the city to local atmosphere. We realise now just what the gap was.

As soon as most peope around the burg do not know what their neighbours are doing, this will be a sure enough city.

"It's getting so you can't come into the City nowadays without someone asking for five or ten cents," said a farmer's wife apropos of the Shamrock day sale.

Stock Markets

A. E. Stratton & Co., Brokers, report the following:

To-morrow may produce some irregularity in the stock market on account of unfavourable rumours that are in circulation, but which are receiving denials. On reactions the best stocks should be bought according to banking authority. The backwardness of the stock market is responding to elements and is responsible for considerable of the bearishness that is found in offices where daily traders are awaiting a clue. We believe that when the weather becomes more propitious the now that the danger of floods has apparently been passed through the slow melting of the snow, feeling will be more bullish.

Attacks on steel failed to bring out much stock. There is a large shortage in it. Industrial stocks are getting a large following and it may be that attempts at shaking out are going to be a feature.

The copper stocks are well taken on recessions.

Bethlehem steel will be bought for investment on recessions.

Union Pacific, Reading and Great Northern are reported absorbed by insiders.

Patience may be required of buyers of Southern Pacific and Atch.

Wheat is well absorbed on reactions.

12 industrials remain unchanged.

CARNEGIE LIBRARY FOR MILLBROOK.

Petition Largely Signed by the Ratepayers—Site can be Secured at a Reasonable Price.

A special meeting of the Council was held on Monday night to consider the Carnegie Library site. A petition was presented by Mr. W. H. Coombe and about 150 others, asking that a vote of the ratepayers be taken. Mr. Coombe, Wm. Mitchell and I. E. Needham addressed the Council in favour of the petition, and Rev. Canon Allen, D. Hampton, A. A. Smith, A. T. Armstrong, J. N. McGill and W. S. Given in favour of going on with the Library. In Council Mr. Richards spoke in favour of the petitioners and Dr. Deyell against it if a site can be secured at a reasonable price. It was decided to lay the petition on the table and to request the Library Board to recommend to Council their preference of site for the Library.

THIS NEW MEDICINE SAVES YOU MONEY

We are druggists right here in your town and make a living out of the drug business, but it is because people have to have drugs and not because we like to see people suffer—we don't. Our duty is to render the best service we can, and when someone is ailing, we are interested in seeing them take the best medicine there is for their particular trouble. We don't recommend "cure-alls," as we don't believe there are such things. We don't want you to spend more than you have to. Some of you get small wages, and when you're sick, none at all, and you should get the most you can for your money.

We recently came across a new remedy for increasing strength and building up people who are run-down and emaciated. We know that a slight trouble sometimes grows into a serious one, and to stop it in the beginning, will save you money in the end. This new compound is called Rexall Olive Oil Emulsion. It is the best remedy, when you are run-down, tired-out, nervous—no matter what the cause. It doesn't merely stimulate you and make you feel good for a few hours, but takes hold of the weakness and builds you up to a healthy, normal condition. It is a real nerve-food tonic and builder of good blood, strong muscle, good digestion. It contains Hypophosphites, which tone the nerves, and pure Olive Oil, which nourishes the nerves, the blood and the entire system. Pleasant to take. Contains no alcohol or habit-forming drugs. We promise that if you are not perfectly satisfied with it, we'll give back your money as soon as you tell us. Sold only at the 7,000 Rexall Stores, and in this town only by us. $1.00.

Recalls The March Of Coxey's Army

Special Wire to The Examiner:

MASSILLON, O., March 19 — Accounts of the progress of "General" Kelley and his army of unemployed in their march from California to Washington have recalled to the minds of the older residents of Massillon the fact that to-day marked the twentieth anniversary of the opening of the Coxey "army" headquarters in this City. "General" Jacob S. Coxey, who still makes his home in Massillon, was the originator of the idea of leading an "army" of unemployed to Washington to demand legislation calculated to better the condition of the masses. After many vicissitudes Coxey's 'army' arrived in the national capital on April 29, 1894. The "invasion" created considerable excitement in Washington, but about the only result was that Coxey and his chief lieutenant, the late Carl Browne, were lodged in jail for several days because they violated the law by walking on the grass in the Capitol grounds.

TOMMY MURPHY TO CLASH WITH JOHNNY LOVE

Special to The Examiner:

NEW YORK, March 19—Gotham fight fans are manifesting a lively interest in the ten-round bout to be pulled off to-morrow night between Tommy Murphy and Johnny Lore. The contest will be the last in which Murphy takes part before he meets Willie Ritchie for twenty rounds in San Francisco next month.

HOPPE AND SUTTON AGAIN

Special Wire to The Examiner:

NEW YORK, March 19—Willie Hoppe, "the invincible," will defend his title of 18.1 balkline billiard champion in a match to be played with George Sutton at the Hotel Astor to-morrow night. Only a few weeks ago the youthful champion successfully defended the 18.2 title against Sutton. His brilliant performance on that occasion showed Hoppe to be in such splendid form that there appears to be little chance now that the 18.1 title will change hands.

JURORS LOSING MONEY.

Petition Presented to Government for Extra Dollar a Day.

"We, the undersigned members of the petit jury at the Court of the General Sessions of the Peace for the County of York, consider the present remuneration of $2.50 per day wholly inadequate to meet our necessary expenses or compensate us for the monetary loss sustained by our absence from our regular occupations, and our object in forwarding this signed petition for your earnest attention, is to respectfully request that this remuneration be forthwith increased to $3.50 per day, said increase to be effective from the commencement of the present Sessions."

This petition signed by practically all the jurymen in attendance at the present Sessions was handed to Judge Coatsworth in Toronto yesterday by Mr. D. O. Cameron on their behalf. Tis Honour made a note of the request and directed the clerk to transmit it to the Government.

If the request is granted it will mean an additional expense of $1,800 each Sessions and sitting of the Assizes, which would add over $12,000 a year to the cost of running jury courts in Toronto.

NAME DAY OF POPE OBSERVED

Special Wire to The Examiner:

THREE POLICEMEN SAY GIRL STABBED THEM TO PROTECT ESCORT

Affair started a Near Riot on a Williamsburg Bridge Car, Bound for Manhattan.

NEW YORK, March 20.—Miss Jennie Sennelly, 25 years old, started a near-riot on a Williamsburg bridge car bound for Manhattan, when it is charged, she stabbed with a hatpin three policemen who were arresting her escort, Peter Gistina.

Miss Sennelly and Gistina had been to a tango party in Williamsburg and the young woman was on her way home when they boarded the car. After it started Gistina decided he wanted to get off. He was told the car wouldn't stop till it reached Manhattan. Then Gistina yanked the trolley off the wire.

That brought the motorman into the car with his controller and a switchman with his switch-bar. Also there came Sergt. Schilling and Policemen Thull and Orr. They told Gistina to surrender.

"Don't do it, Peter," they say the young woman exclaimed.

With that, the policemen declare, she drew her hatpin and assailed the policemen. It took the policemen ten minutes to overpower Miss Sennelly. She then was taken to the Clymer Street Station, charged with interfering with an officer, disorderly conduct and assault. Gistina was arrested.

The habit for taking things as they come may lead to an unpleasant finale, if you take them too far.

Strengthen Your Lungs Is Timely Advice

when consumption claims over 350 daily in the United States. Neglected colds, overwork, confining duties and chronic disorders exert the weakening influence which allows tubercular germs the mastery.

The greatest treatment that science affords is courage, rest, sunshine and Scott's Emulsion.

Scott's Emulsion contains pure cod liver oil to clarify and enrich the blood, strengthen the lungs, rebuild wasted tissue and fortify the resistive forces to throw off disease germs.

Strengthen YOUR lungs with Scott's Emulsion—its benefits are too important to neglect.

TEMPERANCE ACTIVE IN NORTH WEST

Examiner Special:

WINNIPEG, Man. March 20. — Plans for taking an active part in the coming provincial campaign will be formulated at a convention to be held here early next week by representatives of the various temeprance organizations of Manitoba. An effort probably will be made to have the Liberal party candidates pledge themselves to the cause of temperance legislation in return for the support of the temperance advocates. If a satisfactory agreement cannot be reached along this line it is possible that the temperance societies will nominate candidates of their own.

Rev. W. W. Low Of Norwood Resigns

We understand Rev. W. W. Low, pastor of the Norwood and Centre Dummer Baptist churches, has tendered his resignation. During his pastorate here Rev. Mr. Low has accomplished much towards the furtherance of work on his circuit and his congregation are loath to see him leave. He has also made numerous friends among the congregations of other denominations, both as a citizen and minister, having been always willing to co-operate in every good and worthy movement. Mr. Low's resignation will not take effect for some few weeks.—Norwood Register.

RADFORD, VA., MAN

Rundown and Nervous, Restored to Health by Vinol.

A. D. Robinson, Radford, Va., says: "I was all run down in health, had no appetite and was so nervous I could not sleep at night. Vinol was recommended to me and after using one bottle I noticed an improvement. Continuing its use I was completely restored to health. The nervousness is all gone, I can get a good night's sleep and have a hearty appetite. I can recommend Vinol to anyone who suffers as I did."

Vinol is the greatest body builder and strength creator we know of. The curative elements of the cod's liver, aided by the blood-making, strengthening properties of tonic iron contained in Vinol, restore the lacking ingredients to the blood, and the result is health, strength and vigour.

If you need building up try a bottle of Vinol with the understanding that your money will be returned if it does not help you.

ACCUSED OF SLAYING FATHER

Special to The Examiner:

MEDIA, Pa., March 20.—The case of John D. Lee, under indictment for the alleged murder of his father, came up for trial here, to-day. The elder Lee, who was a former Deputy Tax Collector and prominent politician of Philadelphia, was shot and killed in a boat house at Essington, on November 10th of last year. It is alleged that the killing occurred during a quarrel. The defence, it is understood, will be that the father drew a revolver, which was exploded when young Lee tried to take it away from him.

PRETTY WIDOW ROUTS CAR CREW WITH PIN, AFTER TRANSFER ROW

Mrs. Kate Smith Had to Pay a Fine of $5 in the Night Court.

NEW YORK, March 20.— Because she jabbed a conductor in the face with a hatpin and with the same ornament put to route the whole crew of a Sixth Avenue surface car, a stylishly dressed young woman, describing herself as Mrs. Kate Smith, a widow, of Nutley, N.J., had to pay a fine of $5 in the night court.

Mrs. Smith, with an escort who declined to give his name, left a Columbus avenue car at Seventh avenue and Fifty-third Street, to board a downtown Sixth avenue car. She said the transfers given her escort proved to be uptown transfers, and John Meade, conductor on the Sixth avenue car, declined to accept them.

An argument followed, and the young widow's escort was put off the car by the combined effort of conductor, motorman and an inspector. Mrs. Smith declined their invitation to join him in the street, and when the conductor undertook to put her off, it is alleged she stuck a hatpin in his face. This abruptly ended his ambition.

Policeman Schneider says when he arrived the young woman had driven the entire car crew to the street and was in full possession of the car. Watching her at a safe distance were the car crew, two inspectors and the usual New York crowd. She readily accompanied the policeman.

OUR STORY PAGE

By ANNA KATHARINE GREEN

"You must remember," continued Mrs. Packard, "that at the time Miss Thankful was telling this story we were in the very room where it had all happened. As she reached this part of her narration, she pointed to the wall partitioning off the corridor, and explained that this was where the bed stood,—an old wooden one brought down from her own attic.

"'It creaked when I sat down on it,' said she, 'and I remember that I felt ashamed of its shabby mattress and the poor sheets. But we had no better,' she moaned, 'and he did not seem to mind.' I tell you this that you may understand what must have taken place in her heart when, a few minutes later, he seized her hand in his and said that he had a great secret to communicate to her. Though he had seemed the indifferent brother for years, his heart had always been with his home and his people, and he was going to prove it to her now; he had made money, and this money was to be hers and Charity's. He had saved it for them, brought it to them from the far West; a pile of money all honestly earned, which he hoped would buy back their old house and make them happy again in the old way. He said nothing of his nephew. They had not mentioned him, and possibly he did not even know of his existence. All was to be for them and the old house, this old house. This was perhaps why he was content to lie in the midst of its desolation. He foresaw better days for those he loved, and warmed his heart at his precious secret.

"But his sister sat aghast. Money! and so little done for his comfort! That was her first thought. The next, oh, the wonder and the hope of it! Now the boy could be saved; now he could have his luxuries. If only it might be enough! Five thousand, ten thousand. But no, it could not be so much. Her brother was daft to think she could restore the old home on what he had been able to save. She said something to show her doubt, at which he laughed; and, peering slowly and painfully about him, drew her hands toward his left side. 'Feel,' said he. 'I have it all here. I would trust nobody. Fifty thousand dollars.'

"Fifty thousand dollars! Miss Thankful sprang to her feet, then sat again, overcome by her delight. Placing her hand on the wallet, he held tied about his body, she whispered: 'Here?'

"He nodded and bade her look. She told me she did so; that she opened the wallet under his eye and took out five bonds each for ten thousand dollars. She remembers them well; there was no mistake in the figures. She held fifty thousand dollars in her hands for the space of half a minute when he bade her put them back, with an injunction to watch over him well and not to let that woman nurse come near him till she had taken away the wallet immediately after his death. He could not bear to part with it while alive.

"She promised. She was in a delirium of joy. In one minute her life of poverty had changed to one of ecstatic hope. She caressed her brother. He smiled contentedly, and sank into coma or heavy sleep. She remained a few minutes watching him. Picture after picture of future contentment passed before her eyes; phantasmagoria of joy which held her enthralled till chance drew her eyes towards the window, and she found herself looking out upon what for the moment seemed the continuation of her dream. This was the figure of her nephew, standing in the doorway of the adjoining house. This entrance into the alley is closed up now, but in those days it was a constant source of communication between the two houses, and, being directly opposite the left-hand library window, would naturally fall under her eye as she looked up from her brother's bedside. Her nephew! the one person of whom she was dreaming, for whom she was planning, older by many years than when she saw him last, but recognizable at once, as the best, the handsomest—but I will spare you her ravings. She was certainly in her dotage as concerned this man.

"He was not alone. At her side stood her sister, eagerly pointing across the alley to herself. It was the appearance of the sister which presently convinced her that what she saw was reality and no dream. Charity had risen from her bed to greet the new-comer, and her hasty toilet was not one which could have been easily imagined even by her sister. The long-absent one had returned. He was there, and he did not know what these last five minutes had done for them all. The joy of what she had to tell him was too much for her discretion. Noting how profoundly her brother slept, she slipped out of the room to the side door and ran across the alley to her own house. Her nephew was no longer in the doorway where she had seen him, but he had left the door ajar and she rushed in to find him. He was in the parlour with Miss Charity, and no sooner did her eyes fall on them both than her full heart overflowed, and she blurted out their good fortune. Their wonder was immense and in the conversation which ensued unnoted minutes passed. Not till the clock struck did she realise that she had left her brother alone for a good half-hour. This was not right and she went hurrying back, the happiest woman in town. But it was a short-lived happiness. As she re-entered the sick-room she realised that something was amiss. Her brother had moved from where she had left him, and now lay stretched across the foot of the bed, where he had evidently fallen from a standing position. He was still breathing, but in great gasps which shook the bed. When she bent over him in anxious questioning, he answered her with a ghastly stare, and that was all. Otherwise, everything looked the same.

"'What has happened? What have you done?' she persisted, trying to draw him up on the pillow. He made a motion. It was in the direction of the front door. 'Don't let her in,' he muttered. 'I don't trust her, I don't trust her. Let me die in peace.' Then, as Miss Thankful became conscious of a stir at the front door, and caught the sound of a key turning in the lock, which could only betoken the return of the nurse, he raised himself a little and she saw the wallet hanging out of his dressing gown. 'I have hidden it,' he whispered, with a nervous look toward the door. 'I was afraid she might come and take it from me, so I put it in—' He never said where. His eyes, open and staring straight before him, took on a look of horror, then slowly glazed under the terrified glance of Miss Thankful. Death had cut short that vital sentence, and simultaneously with the entrance of the nurse, whose return he had so much feared, he uttered his last gasp and sank back lifeless on his pillow.

"With a cry Miss Thankful pounced on the wallet. It opened out flat in her hand, as empty as her life seemed at that minute. But she was a brave woman and in another instant her courage had revived. The money could not be far away; she would find it at the first search. Turning on the nurse, she looked her full in the face. The woman was gazing at the empty wallet. 'You know what was in that?' queried Miss Thankful. A fierce look answered her. 'A thousand dollars!' announced Miss Thankful. The nurse's lip curled. 'Oh, you knew it was five,' was Miss Thankful's next outburst. Still no answer, but a look which seemed to devour the empty wallet. This look had its effect. Miss Thankful dropped her accusatory tone, and attempted cajolery. 'It was his legacy to us,' she explained. 'He gave it to me just before he died. You shall be paid out of it. Now will you call my sister? She's up and with my nephew, who came an hour ago. Call them both; I am not afraid to remain here for a few moments with my brother's body.' This appeal, or perhaps the promise, had its effect. The nurse disappeared. after another careful look at her patient, and Miss Thankful bounded to her feet and began a hurried search for the missing bonds. They could not be far away. They must be in the room, and the room was so nearly empty that it would take but a moment to penetrate every hiding-place. But alas! the matter was not so simple as she thought. She looked here, she looked there; in the bed, in the washstand drawer, under the cushions of the only chair, even in the grate and up the chimney; but she found nothing—nothing! She was standing stark and open-mouthed in the middle of the room when the others entered, but recovered herself at sight of their surprise, and, explaining what had happened, set them all to search,—sister, nephew, even the nurse, though she was careful to keep close by the latter with a watchfulness that let no movement escape her. But it was all fruitless. The bonds were not to be found, either in that room or in any place near. They ransacked, they rummaged; they went upstairs, they went down; they searched every likely and every unlikely place of concealment, but without avail. They failed to come upon the place where he had hidden them; nor did Miss Thankful or her sister ever see them again from that day to this."

"Oh!" I exclaimed; "and the nephew? the nurse?"

"Both went away disappointed; he to face his disgrace about which his aunts were very reticent, and she to seek work which was all the more necessary to her, since she had lost her pay with the disappearance of these bonds, whose value I have no doubt she knew and calculated on."

"And the aunts, the two poor old creatures who stare all day out of their upper window at these walls, still believe that money to be here," I cried.

"Yes, that is their mania. Several tenants have occupied these premises—tenants who have not stayed long, but who certainly filled all the rooms, and must have penetrated every secret spot the house contains, but it has made no difference to them. They believe the bonds to be still lying in some out-of-the-way place in these old walls, and are jealous of any one who comes in here. This you can understand better when I tell you that one feature of their mania is this: they have lost all sense of time. It is two years since their brother died, yet to them it is an affair of yesterday. They showed this when they talked to me. What they wanted was for me to give up these bonds to them as soon as I found them. They seemed to think that I might run across them in settling, and made me promise to wake them day or night if I came across them unexpectedly."

"How pathetic!" I exclaimed. "Do you suppose they have appealed in the same way to every one who has come in here?"

"No, or some whisper of this lost money would have become current in the neighbourhood. And it never has. The traditions associated with the house," here her manner changed a little, "are of quite another nature. I suppose the old gentleman has walked—looking, possibly, for his lost bonds."

"That would be only natural," I smiled, for her mood was far from serious. "But," I quietly pursued, "how much of this old woman's story do you believe? Can not she have been deceived as to what she saw? You say she is more or less demented. Perhaps there never was any old wallet, and possibly never any money."

"I have seen the wallet. They brought it in to show me. Not that that proves anything; but somehow I do believe in the money, and, what is more, that it is still in this house. You will think me as demented as they."

"No, no," I smiled, "for I am inclined to think the same: it lends such an interest to the place. I wouldn't disbelieve it now for anything."

"Nor I," she cried, taking up her work. "But we shall never find it. The house was all redecorated when we came in. Not one of the workmen has become suddenly wealthy."

"I shall no longer begrudge these poor old souls their silent watch over these walls that holds their treasure," I now remarked.

"Then you have lost your nervousness?"

"Quite."

"So have I," laughed Mrs. Packard, showing me for the first time a face of complete complacency and contentment.

A NEW HAT BOW

A novel bow for the tailored spring hat—which nowadays blooms in the winter—is the sole trimming needed since it practically covers any of the small new shapes. It is made of three-inch broad and very heavy ribbon, fashioned into four seven-inch long loops that start under a common knot. This knot is placed exactly at the centre of the crown and from it the loops are drawn respectively toward the edge of the brim at back, front and sides. They do not lie flatly, but stand partly on edge in the perky little manner which is difficult to achieve unless one possess the milliner's touch. This sort of bow will prove a real boon to the woman who must refurbish a last year's straw hat—if she can bend it into reasonable resemblance to one of the recent shapes—for, having refaced the brim with new material—moire silk is a good choice—she may conceal the faded crown with the long and broad ribbon loops.

MUSICAL TONES IN ARCHITECTURE.

It has long been believed that each of the mammoth buildings of the world will vibrate in response to some special musical tone. Architects believe they have found the tones for such famous structures as the cathedral at Cologne, Notre Dame in Paris and St. Paul's in London. Certainly it is true that each of these buildings return to the ear of the listener that one-tone intensified and augmented to a surprising extent. The corollary statement that this keynote, if sounded long enough and with sufficient force, would bring disaster has never been proved.

The Secret of Health is Elimination of Waste
Every business man knows how difficult it is to keep the pigeon holes and drawers of his desk free from the accumulation of useless papers. Every housewife knows how difficult it is to keep her home free from the accumulation of all manner of useless things. So it is with the body. It is difficult to keep it free from the accumulation of waste matter. Unless the waste is promptly eliminated the machinery of the body soon becomes clogged. This is the beginning of most human ills.

ELY'S CREAM BALM OPENS CLOGGED NOSTRILS AND HEAD—CATARRH GOES

Instantly Clears Air Passages; You Breathe Freely, Nasty Discharge Stops, Head Colds and Dull Headache Vanish.

Get a small bottle anyway, just to try it—Apply a little in the nostrils and instantly your clogged nose and stopped-up air passages of the head will open; you will breathe freely; dullness and headache disappear. By morning! the catarrh, cold-in-head or catarrhal sore throat will be gone.

End such misery now! Get the small bottle of "Ely's Cream Balm" at any drug store. This sweet, fragrant balm dissolves by the heat of the nostrils; penetrates and heals the inflamed, swollen membrane which lines the nose, head and throat; clears the air passages; stops nasty discharges and a feeling of cleansing, soothing relief comes immediately.

Don't lay awake to-night struggling for breath, with head stuffed; nostrils closed, hawking and blowing. Catarrh or a cold, with its running nose, foul mucous dropping into the throat, and raw dryness is distressing but truly needless.

Put your faith—just once—in "Ely's Cream Balm" and your cold or catarrh will surely disappear.

Sir Archibald Geikie, the famous classical and theological scholar and geologist, has celebrated his seventy-eighth birthday shortly after retiring from the highest office which an English scientist can hold—the presidency of the Royal Society.

Hudson Maxim, inventor of the powder called Maximite, recently celebrated his sixtieth birthday. He has risen to wealth and fame by his own determined efforts, for his boyhood in the backwoods of Maine was one of poverty, combined with a bitter struggle to obtain an education.

A. J. Gladstone Dowie, son of the late John Alexander Dowie, who founded Zion City, has just been ordained a minister of the Protestant Episcopal church in Chicago. He is in charge of St. Jude's mission in the southern part of the city and seemingly is not concerned about the town which his parent built up.

The stationary washstand in a room may be a source of danger if it is not drained pretty often. Make a strong soap powder solution and let it stand in the bowl for a few minutes; then turn on the hot water faucet and let it force its way down the pipes.

WASH THE TOPS.

Full milk bottles are apt to gather dust and dirt in the delivery wagon and standing on the steps in the morning. Before removing the paper cover, let the faucet run gently over the top of the bottle for a minute, then wipe the glass around carefully. The water will not penetrate, but will remove the coating of dust and make it sanitary to pour out the milk.

BASEBALL IN BRITAIN

Game Described as "Pandemonium" in English Press

Two runs in an hour is too slow for the Englishmen, who want to see a hundred made in cricket in that time, says the London correspondent of the Toronto Globe. The accounts of the game, which is termed "glorified rounders," read as if it is that of some newly-discovered tribe in Central Africa, which is never played in a civilised country; but it must be pointed out that some members of the Giants and White Sox admit they know nothing about cricket.

Much admiration was expressed over the catching and throwing of the ball players, who gave an exhibition thereof which no English cricket team ever approached. One writer suggests, however, that in a short music hall turn, this kind of prowess would win delighted applause, but he adds that it becomes mechanical by its very perfection.

Umpire Klem's coolness and indifference to danger in his position was especially commended. "Only twice did he flinch," says one paper, "and that was when called upon to face the King and announce the score."

The Daily News' descriptive writer said, "For about two hours a foreign sort of pandemonium whirled in the arena. Wonderful deeds were no doubt accomplished when the world-famous White Sox of Chicago and the universally acclaimed Giants of New York met to fight out the best of nine games of the American national pastime, but they were all Greek to the crowd. After the show baseball still remains, and will remain, exclusively and peculiarly a transatlantic dish, such as clams, crackers and canvasback."

OLD TIME PUNISHMENTS

Ducking and Donkeys Were Tried in Court

Among the weird and horrible punishments inflicted in Quebec under both the French and English regimes were burning of women at the stake for petty treason, burning of the hand, branding on the forehead, and breaking on the wheel. No record is found in Canada, however, of such punishments as the "drunkard's cloak," a barrel with apertures for the head and hands, and the bridle and ducking pool for common scolds, a device the resurrection of which has been suggested by some critics of the militant suffragettes. In old houses in Britain there are still to be seen hooks by the fireplace to which a scolding wife was fastened after being bridled, the latter performing this service at the request of the exasperated husband.

A feature of middle age jurisprudence, which was retained in France until the middle of the 18th century, was the indictment of domestic animals, principally oxen or swine, for injuries inflicted on human beings. A rooster was tried and executed for laying an egg, the prosecution proving that it was due to witchcraft, and the defence unavailingly claiming that a rooster's egg was a cure for certain diseases. The trial of a donkey in an English court in the reign of George III. was indicated by an old print and a humorous ballad of the period.

The jouge of iron collar was used as a punishment for disregarding parental authority or non-attendance at church. In France it was called the carcan, and one was formerly attached to a post at the door of the Basilica at Quebec. The pillory was used in England for at least 700 years, and in 1769 a prisoner stood in the pillory at Montreal for three days.

In 1765 two men and a woman were whipped through the streets of Montreal, 39 lashes being given each, the last at the spot where Nelson's monument now stands.

Value of a Rat-catcher's Dog

A Birmingham rat-catcher, who obtained $100 damages at the Birmingham County Court from the corporation for the loss of his dog which was killed by a motor ambulance, said the animal was worth $300 to him. It earned for him from $10 to $12 a week by catching rats. "To lose such a dog," he said, "is like losing my right arm."

Rat Plague at Kingston

Protests have been made to the medical officer of health for Kingston-on-Thames with regard to the number of rats on a piece of land in Lower Marsh lane, used by the corporation as a dust heap. More than 1,000 rats have been caught alive, and numbers are killed daily.

Birthrate in France

The statistics of French families just published by the Ministry of Labor show a total of 11,300,000. Of these 1,900,000 have no children, while 2,967,000 have only one child, 2,561,000 two children and 1,809,000 three children. A total of 182,000 have seven children, 95,000 eight children, 45,000 nine children, 20,000 ten children, 1,500 thirteen children, 79 sixteen children, 34 seventeen children, and 19 eighteen or more.

FEW CHANCES FOR MARRIAGE

Women in England and Wales Outnumber Men by Over a Million

In his pamphlet concerning the Suffragette agitation Sir Almroth Wright advanced the suggestion that the true remedy for the superfluity of women in England—which he regarded as the cause of all trouble—was for the superfluous ones to remove themselves to the Dominion and marry there. This view is examined at some length in the Second Interim Report of the Dominions Royal Commission.

The Report points out that there is a superfluity of 1,179,000 women in England and Wales and a deficiency of 226,000, as compared with males, in Australia. But of the surplus women in this country it appears that 610,000 are over forty and for the most part are to be found in two classes, "elderly ladies and women servants," of whom the former are "hardly possible migrants" and "the latter can now ill be spared."

The fact is that domestic servants are becoming scarce in the mother-country because here as in the Dominions, "the tendency is for women to adopt industrial and commercial life and to abandon domestic service."

Moreover, in Australasia the same problem which exists in England has arisen. "The proportion of unmarried women to married women between the ages of 25 and 50 is practically identical with the proportions in England and Wales." And, the Report adds, "it would seem that, statistically speaking, the chances of marriage for women emigrants are only slightly higher in Australasia than at home."

If there is no great demand for wives in Australasia there is an "imperious and practically unlimited demand for female domestics. In some cases before a ship carrying young emigrants sights the land a large number of its passengers have been engaged by wireless telegraphy."

Yet complaints are made that the women who go out "know too much or too little." They are either factory hands and country girls with no experience in service, or else skilled servants in some one department and unwilling to undertake general work in the Australian house.

So urgent is the want of servants in Australia that it was stated to the Commission in evidence that the lack of them "seriously affects the health of housewives and even acts as a check upon the growth of population."

Women Travel Alone

"More and more women are travelling alone every year," said the manager of a big travel agency. "Everything is made so easy nowadays that discomfort is reduced to a minimum.

"A woman can go round the world to-day, and can be under supervision the whole time if she cares to."

Women are becoming as enterprising travellers as men. These are some of the latest exploits:

Mrs. Blount penetrated to the heart of the Dark Continent.

Miss Werner who has lived among the native races of the East African protectorate.

A Lucky Chance

"A short time ago," writes a correspondent from Vernon, B.C., "a neighbor of mine was asleep in his shack at daybreak one morning, when he was awakened by a scratching at the door and on having roused himself was surprised to see a black bear push his way into the shack. There was a loaded .22 beside his bunk. Reaching out for this he took a shot at Bruin. By a lucky chance he killed him dead and thus was brought to an end a very embarrassing situation."

Hidden Bags of Gold

An extraordinary find of hidden treasure was made at Balbriggan North, County Dublin. A man was taken from the town to the Richmond Lunatic Asylum some time ago, and since his confinement in the asylum has repeatedly asserted that he had hidden $1,200 in gold on the shore at Balbriggan. The man was taken in a cab to Balbriggan, where he pointed to a recess in the rocks, and there lying on the sand was two old bags, which were found to contain $915 in gold.

Castle's Oubliette

The restoration work at Cardiff Castle, which was begun by the late Marquis of Bute, is being continued by the present marquis, and has resulted in the discovery, in the foundations of the Black Tower, of an underground dungeon.

Other recent work under the direction of the castle architect, Mr. H. Seacom-Hiley, has included the laying bare of portions of the south-eastern pentagonal bastion of the Roman wall and the tracing of the line of the mediæval town wall from the Castle to the old North, or Seagreenhill, Gate.

Miss Flies in Clouds

While an army biplane was being overhauled after a flight by Lieutenant Fletcher, of the Royal Flying Corps from Aldershot to Montrose (over 500 miles), a mechanic saw a figure descend across one of the planes. On investigating he discovered in the corner of the wing a "nest," made from shreds of the fabric, with a number of young mice in it.

Parsley an Liquor Seller

At Stratford Quarter Sessions Judge Ingle affirmed the decision of the magistrates sentencing to three months' imprisonment a small farmer named Michael Flanagan for absconding. The defendant had only come out of gaol after doing three months for a like offence, when he re-started his sly-shebeen and adopted ingenious methods to evade police detection, even to the compliment of a beer barrel under each arm.

New Cattle Drives

A new form of cattle-driving has been instituted in Shankhill (Ireland) district. Dairymen of Ireland, when, on farms belonging to Messrs. E. Gibson, P. O'Reilly, and D. G. Bingham, pasture have driven their cattle in shoes (to cover's cattle—thus reversing the usual mode of procedure). No damage was done, and no violence used, and indignation is expressed at the drafting into the district of a large force of police.

TRAINING FOR THE RACE.

Curious Changes in Preparing Oxford-Cambridge Boat Crews.

More than eighty years ago—namely, in 1829—the University of Cambridge challenged the University of Oxford to row a match at or near London, each in an eight-oared boat, during the ensuing Easter vacation.

The difference between that race and the inter-university race of 1910 is almost incredible. In the place, the boats used were entirely ferent from modern racing craft. were called cutters, and were 15 feet shorter than the boats used to day. They were about as wide again very stiff, and; of course, unprovide with either outriggers or sliding seat On the other hand, they were bui with keels running the whole leng from bow to stern.

Instead of "shorts," the combata wore canvas trousers. Oxford w blue-and-white striped jerseys black straw hats with a broad ribbon. The Cambridge color pink instead of the now familiar blue. It was not until 1839 tha crews definitely adopted the shades of blue which have giv the familiar phrase, the "Battle Blues."

In 1839 the Cambridge men "shorts" for the first time. Th still rowed in cutters. Oxford known as the Isis, was as against the 63 feet eight-oar. She was v look at, being painte blue picked out with ing the universit der. The Camb of oak!

In or no the ra haved in 1845, chosen wa lake Church. and the race ha fore a steamer, rushin bridge boat, rolled her so badly that No. 7's oar was unshipped, and Oxford went ahead. But Cambridge steadied in wonderful fashion, and actually drew clear in a little more than half a mile. Their coxswain was so overjoyed that he hurled his hat into the water. Cambridge eventually won easily by about half a minute.

In 1859 the race was rowed in a gale of snow and rain, and Cambridge, half full of water at the start, fell behind. No fewer than four steamers came rushing past her in rapid succession, swamping and sinking her with their wash. If the umpire had not been able to throw life-buoys to the crew, some of them would certainly have been drowned.

Eugenics may, as a prominent doctor predicts, bring us a loveless age, but if there are not going to be any people then, as others say, why worry about it?

Comb Sage Tea In Lifeless, Gray Hair

If Mixed With Sulphur It Darkens So Naturally Nobody Can Tell

Grandmother kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and abundant with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair fell out or took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect. By asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," you will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe, ready to use, for about 50 cents. This simple mixture can be depended upon to restore natural colour and beauty to the hair and is splendid for dandruff, dry, itchy scalp and falling hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a comb or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the grey hair disappears; after another application or two, it is restored to its natural colour and looks glossy, soft and abundant.

...ffliated With Lame Back.

Could Not Sweep The Floor.

When the back aches and pains it is almost impossible for women to do their housework, for every move and every turn means an ache or a pain.

Women are beginning to understand that weak, lame, and aching backs from which they suffer so much are due to wrong action of the kidneys, and should be attended to at once so as to avoid years of suffering from kidney trouble.

On the first sign of anything wrong with the back Doan's Kidney Pills should be taken.

They go right to the seat of the trouble.

Mrs. Wilfrid Jolicoeur, Nouvelle, Que., writes:—"I take pleasure in writing you stating the benefit I have received by using Doan's Kidney Pills. About three years ago I was terribly afflicted with lame back, and was so bad I could not sweep my own floor. I was advised to try Doan's Kidney Pills. I only used three boxes, and I am as well as ever. I highly recommend these pills to any sufferer from lame back or kidney trouble."

Price, 50 cents per box, or 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Toronto, Ont.

If ordering direct specify "Doan's."

MONARCH FLOUR

Coco-Cream Cake.

Tasty cake may be made with cocoa quite as deliciously as with chocolate. Put a third of a cup of cocoa, a fourth of a cup of brown sugar and a third of a cup of water together in a porcelain saucepan and cook over hot water, stirring constantly until thick. Turn into a mixing bowl and add a third of a cupful of butter and a cupful of brown sugar; beat well, add an egg, half a cupful of milk and one and one-half cupfuls of flour sifted, with two and one-half level teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Bake in a sheet.

Maple Pancakes.

Put into a bowl one cup of flour, one-half teaspoon of soda, one scant half teaspoon of salt and one teaspoon of salt and one teaspoon of baking powder. Mix well and then add one cup of sour milk, one beaten egg and one tablespoon of butter melted. Beat until smooth and light and add more flour or milk to make the batter like thick cream, or one that will pour in a smooth, thick cream. Have a frying pan hot and grease it with ham or bacon rind. Pour enough of the batter nearly to cover the bottom of the pan. Cook it carefully and when full of bubbles turn it over with a cake turner; when done remove to a hot plate and fill the pan with another cake. Spread the first one with bits of butter and a layer of shaved maple sugar. Then lay the next cake on top of the first and dress as before with butter and sugar, and when four are cooked serve and cut into sections like a pie. This is simple, but delicious.

Corn Syrup.

One can corn, one pint boiling water. Cook gently ten minutes, then rub through a colander. Melt two tablespoons butter. When bubbling add two tablespoons flour and stir in a smooth paste, then add gradually to it one pint milk and cook until smooth and creamy. Stir all the time. Cook five minutes, then add corn; beat thoroughly, season to taste with salt and pepper and serve.

STOP AND THINK

The enormous waste of human life which occurs within the first year after birth of babies artificially fed, who depend on cows' milk as a substitute for maternal feeding, is due, in a great measure, to raw and dirty milk. Pasteurized Milk, such as we sell, is recognized as the only safe milk for children and invalids and is used at the Sick Children's Hospital in Toronto entirely. Ask your Doctor about it.

TRAINING FOR THE RACE.

More than eighty years ago—namely, in 1829—the University of Cambridge challenged the University of Oxford to row a match at or near London, each in an eight-oared boat, during the ensuing Easter vacation.

The difference between that race and the inter-university race of 1910 is almost incredible. In the first place, the boats used were entirely different from modern racing craft. They were called cutters, and were about 15 feet shorter than the boats used today. They were about as wide again, very stiff, and, of course, unprovided with either outriggers or sliding seats. On the other hand, they were built with keels running the whole length from bow to stern.

Instead of "shorts," the combatants wore canvas trousers. Oxford wore blue-and-white striped jerseys and black straw hats with a broad blue ribbon. The Cambridge color was pink instead of the now familiar pale blue. It was not until 1839 that the crews definitely adopted the two shades of blue which have given us the familiar phrase, the "Battle of the Blues."

In 1839 the Cambridge men wore "shorts" for the first time. The crews still rowed in cutters. Oxford's boat, known as the Isis, was 52 feet long, as against the 63 feet of the modern eight-oar. She was very beautiful to look at, being painted in white and blue picked out with gold, and bearing the university arms on her rudder. The Cambridge cutter was built of oak!

The Oxford University Boating Club was founded in 1839, and the Cambridge Club had been in flourishing existence since 1829. In 1860 the Oxford Club sent its first challenge to Cambridge for a race from Westminster to Putney. But the oddest stipulation was made in this letter of challenge. Oxford desired that none but undergraduates should row. Cambridge would have none of this, and, eventually, Oxford waived their demand, and the race was arranged, and rowed. It was won by Cambridge by the narrow margin of three-quarters of a length.

In those early days there was little or no policing of river traffic during the race, and excursion steamers behaved in the most scandalous fashion. In 1845, for the first time, the course chosen was Putney Bridge to Mortlake Church. It was a very cold day, and the race had hardly started before a steamer, rushing past the Cambridge boat, rolled her so badly that No. 7's oar was unshipped, and Oxford went ahead. But Cambridge steadied in wonderful fashion, and actually drew clear in a little more than half a mile. Their coxswain was so overjoyed that he hurled his hat into the water. Cambridge eventually won easily by about half a minute.

In 1869 the race was rowed in a gale of snow and rain, and Cambridge, half full of water at the start, fell behind. No fewer than four steamers came rushing past her in rapid succession, swamping and sinking her with their wash. If the umpire had not been able to throw life-buoys to the crew, some of them would certainly have been drowned.

Eugenics may, as a prominent doctor predicts, bring us a loveless age, but if there are not going to be any people then, as others say, why worry about it?

Comb Sage Tea In Lifeless, Gray Hair

If Mixed With Sulphur It Darkens So Naturally Nobody Can Tell

Grandmother kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and abundant with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair fell out or took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect. By asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," you will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe, ready to use, for about 50 cents. This simple mixture can be depended upon to restore natural colour and beauty to the hair and is splendid for dandruff, dry, itchy scalp and falling hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a comb or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the grey hair disappears; after another application or two, it is restored to its natural colour and looks glossy, soft and abundant.

New Guinea's People.

The savages of British New Guinea are an entertaining sort of people. Speaking at the London Colonial Society recently Mr. A. H. Dunning gave an amusing account of his adventures among these untamed British subjects, one of his stories relating to a bottle of strong smelling salts. The first man who smelt, under the impression that it was a "white man's love charm," was so startled that he fetched a friend to try. Then they formed the salts into a sort of trust, and scoured the neighborhood for recruits. Nobody gave the show away. They brought new people up one after the other, propped them up against a tree, and sat round like Christy Minstrels, to wait for the result. Kissing or fondling added Mr. Dunning, was unknown in New Guinea until the advent of the missionaries. These were seen kissing the children, and the custom spread. Having been kissed by oily natives, he preferred the old style of salutation.

"Anti-Sosh."

Sir George Reid, the first High Commissioner of the Australian Commonwealth, who has been paying a visit to England, and who was nicknamed "Anti-Sosh" by The Sydney Bulletin, because of his uncompromising attitude towards Socialism, was born sixty-five years ago in Renfrewshire. He was taken to Australia by his parents when quite a child, and ultimately became a barrister, building up one of the most lucrative practices in the Commonwealth. The heckler does not stand much chance with Sir George. "If you were my husband I'd give you poison!" shouted a woman Socialist at a political meeting. "Madam," replied Sir George, suavely, "if I were your husband I'd take it."

Lost In Bunkers.

A pitiful death was that of a Sydney, Australia, worker named Heaver, who fell into the coal bunkers of a steamer which he was helping to load. One of the gang heard groans and muffled cries for help coming from the darkness of the bunkers below. The crew were mustered, and it was then discovered that Heaver was missing. Work was suspended, and a start was made to pull out the coal at the spot where the moans came from. When the body was recovered death had taken place some time previously.

Expedition Against Lascars.

An expedition from the cruiser Hyacinthe and the troopship Hardinge landed at Jask, on the Persian coast, recently, under the command of Col. Delamaine, marched for seven and a half hours, and attacked an arms depot at a Lascar village on the Jagin River. The position was taken, and 760 rifles, besides revolvers, bayonets, and gunpowder, were destroyed. The British losses were nil.

For Great Britain's Navy.

The navy of Great Britain will be growing during the next 18 months as follows: A torpedo boat destroyer once a week for the next nine months, a light cruiser every 30 days for the next 12 months and a super-dread nought of the latest type every 45 days for the next 18 months.

Terribly Afflicted With Lame Back.

Could Not Sweep The Floor.

When the back aches and pains it is almost impossible for women to do their housework, for every move and every turn means an ache or a pain.

Women are beginning to understand that weak, lame, and aching backs from which they suffer so much are due to wrong action of the kidneys, and should be attended to at once so as to avoid years of suffering from kidney trouble.

On the first sign of anything wrong with the back Doan's Kidney Pills should be taken.

They go right to the seat of the trouble.

Mrs. Wilfrid Jolicoeur, Nouvelle, Que., writes:—"I take pleasure in writing you stating the benefit I have received by using Doan's Kidney Pills. About three years ago I was terribly afflicted with lame back, and was so bad I could not sweep my own floor. I was advised to try Doan's Kidney Pills. I only used three boxes, and I am as well as ever. I highly recommend these pills to any sufferer from lame back or kidney trouble."

Price, 50 cents per box, or 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Toronto, Ont.

If ordering direct specify "Doan's."

ORDER A BAG OF

MONARCH FLOUR

Cocoa-Cream Cake.

Tasty cake may be made with cocoa quite as deliciously as with chocolate. Put a third of a cup of cocoa, a fourth of a cup of brown sugar and a third of a cup of water together in a porcelain saulepan and cook over hot water, stirring constantly until thick. Turn into a mixing bowl and add a third of a cupful of butter and a cupful of brown sugar; beat well, add an egg, half a cupful of milk and one and one-half cupfuls of flour sifted, with two and one-half level teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Bake in a sheet.

Maple Pancakes.

Put into a bowl one cup of flour, one-half teaspoon of soda, one scant half teaspoon of salt and one teaspoon of salt and one teaspoon of baking powder. Mix well and then add one cup of sour milk, one beaten egg and one tablespoon of butter melted. Beat until smooth and light and add more flour or milk to make the batter like thick cream, or one that will pour in a smooth, thick cream. Have a frying pan hot and grease it with ham or bacon rind. Pour enough of the batter nearly to cover the bottom of the pan. Cook it carefully and when full of bubbles turn it over with a cake turner; when done remove to a hot plate and fill the pan with another cake. Spread the first one with bits of butter and a layer of shaved maple sugar. Then lay the next cake on top of the first and dress as before with butter and sugar, and when four are cooked serve and cut into sections like a pie. This is simple, but delicious.

Corn Syrup.

One can corn, one pint boiling water. Cook gently ten minutes, then rub through a colander. Melt two tablespoons butter. When bubbling add two tablespoons flour and stir in a smooth paste, then add gradually to it one pint milk and cook until smooth and creamy. Stir all the time. Cook five minutes, then add corn; beat thoroughly, season to taste with salt and pepper and serve.

STOP AND THINK

The enormous waste of human life which occurs within the first year after birth of babies artificially fed, who depend on cows' milk as a substitute for maternal feeding, is due, in a great measure, to raw and dirty milk. Pasteurized Milk, such as we sell, is recognized as the only safe milk for children and invalids and is used at the Sick Children's Hospital in Toronto entirely. Ask your Doctor about it.

EAT LESS MEAT IF BACK HURTS

Take a Glass of Salts to flush kidneys if bladder bothers you

Eating meat regularly eventually produces kidney trouble in some form or other, says a well-known authority, because the uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked; get sluggish; clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region; rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness, bladder and urinary irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, or if bladder bothers you, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity; also to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts cannot injure anyone; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to keep the kidneys and urinary organs clean, thus avoiding serious kidney disease.

Up-to-Date.

During the recent strike riots in the streets of Johannesburg a large number of plate-glass windows were broken and goods pilfered by the unruly crowds. One of the unfortunate sufferers — a hairdresser and tobacconist near the General Postoffice — showed a certain amount of humor by the following notice which appeared alongside a huge hole made in his window:—

"Owing to the increase of business we have opened another entrance."

When the damage was bowwowed repaired, this notice was displayed:—

"Owing to the increase of business we had to open another entrance, but being unable to cope with the extra rush of customers we have had to close it."

Trapped 20,000 Moles.

With an ingenious trap now in the district, Mr. John Merchant and his son have killed 20,000 moles in Essex, Eng., in the three years they have lived in the county, whither they came from Derbyshire. During the trapping season, which has just begun, they hope, as the result of increased contracts with farmers and landowners, nearly to double this figure. Their agreements extend over five years, payment being at the rate of 2d. an acre for the first year and 1 1-2d. an acre for the subsequent years. Up to this season they have had about 10,000 acres to work. Now they are making arrangements to double their hunting-ground. Moleskins sell at about $10 a hundred.

How We Got the Gas Jet.

Possibly very few people know that we owe the ordinary gas jet to the accidental use of a woman's thimble. After the dinner of the British Commercial Gas Association, Prof. Vivian Lewes told how Clegg, of Redruth, used to burn the illuminant straight from the open pipe, and turn it off by plugging the pipe with some clay.

Upon one occasion his lump of clay was missing, and, picking up his wife's thimble, he put this on top of the pipe. Much to his surprise the gas escaped through small holes which had been worn by the constant use of the needle, small burning jets of gas resulting. From this Prof. Lewes traced the evolution of the gas jet.

BOY'S ROMPERS.

Good Style For the Small Folk.

CORDUROY ROMPERS.

Corduroy is a good serviceable fabric, and, although white was chosen for this attractive romper suit, it may be changed easily. The Russian blouse is slashed at the sides and faced with red dawetyn. It has buttons and bels of the same fabric.

TANGO SLIPPERS.

They're Made of the Most Elegant Materials.

The new tango slipper is made in any number of beautiful tinterials that no one dreamed of using for footgear a few years ago—silver tissue, cloth of gold, aluminium, copper and fancy tinsel, delicate lace and gem studded brocades.

The thing that makes a tango slipper the real thing, though, is not the material, but ribbons of the same shade called tango ribbons, which wind over the instep and around the ankle, holding it firmly. These are fastened to the slipper by four tiny clamps of rhinestones, two on a side.

The sandal slipper with strap over the instep is also popular for dancing, because in these vigorous dances of the moment you can't afford to do the Cinderella act, for while it might be rather fetching to lose a pretty tango trotter it might also be dangerous to the preservation of an upright position.

In other words: you and your partner might assume just such a position as you did when you first learned to skate.

The slipper with fur trimmings will never be popular, say the dealers. It is a novelty, and as such interests some, but it is too suggestive of the bedroom slipper, and, anyway, it is bound to make the foot or ankle look a little clumsy, and no one wants that to happen.

Pride Keeps Women Warm Nowadays.

From the abundance of thin and gauzelike lingerie and knitted underwear offered for winter wear the saying of some one's grandmother, "Pride keeps folks warm nowadays," expresses the opinion of many others save those who claim to know the delights of the latest way of dressing. One is protected from the cold by warm coats and furs rather than by heavy, warm underclothing.

The prevailing fashions have brought about many new styles of underwear which take the place of lingerie to a great extent. Knitted silk undershirts, bloomers and combination garments are a generally approved plank of underwear.

The silk variety, woven like gloves, are the favorites, even though they are expensive in the best qualities. Bloomers take the place of muslin garments to a great degree for street and evening wear. They are made with an elastic in the belt and in the legs at the knees, where there is a little fullness.

FIVE MINUTE CURE IF STOMACH IS BAD

When "Pape's Diapepsin" reaches Stomach All Indigestion, Gas and Sourness Disappears

You don't want a slow remedy when your stomach is bad—or an uncertain one—or a harmful one—your stomach is too valuable; you mustn't injure it with drastic drugs.

Pape's Diapepsin is noted for its speed in giving relief; its harmlessness; its certain unfailing action in regulating sick, sour, upset stomachs. Its millions of cures in indigestion, dyspepsia, gastritis and other stomach trouble has made it famous the world over.

Keep this perfect stomach doctor in your home—keep it handy—get a large fifty-cent case from any drug store and then if anyone should eat something which doesn't agree with them; if what they eat lays like lead, ferments and sours and forms gas; causes headache, dizziness and nausea; eructations of acid and undigested food—remember as soon as Pape's Diapepsin comes in contact with the stomach all such distress vanishes. Its promptness, certainty and ease in overcoming the worst stomach disorders is a revolution to those who try it.

A BETTER REMEDY THAN NASTY SALTS

Few people like to take physic, especially salts, because they are so disagreeable to take and because of the griping and pains they cause; Rexall Orderlies enable you to take just physic, and all without griping, purging or excessive looseness. Salts and harsh physics usually give only temporary relief and often leave the bowels worse off than before.

Rexall Orderlies move the bowels promptly, and soothe, tone and strengthen the intestinal muscles, leaving them healthy and regular in action. They taste like candy, and the movement they cause is as easy and natural as though your bowels were in perfect health and you never had to take any physic at all. We have so much faith in Rexall Orderlies that we urge you to try them with the understanding that, if they do not satisfy you in every way, all you have to do to get your money back is to tell us. We honestly believe them to be the best bowel remedy made. In vest pocket tin boxes; 10c, 25c, 50c.

You can buy Rexall Orderlies only at The Rexall Stores, and in this town only of us. —McDermid & Jury, E. L. Payne, Peterborough, Ont.

RED MILK REVENGE.

How Guide People Have "Got Their Own Back" in Very Odd Ways.

A farmer in the Lincolnshire village of Guide got a nasty shock the other morning. When he went into his dairy he found that all the overnight milk—forty gallons of it—had turned a bright red color.

Milk will sometimes go bad within a few hours and turn very queer colors, but in this case the unpleasant line proved to be due to revenge. A dye of some kind had been added to the milk. It seems that someone had a grudge against the farmer because, while others had raised the price of milk, he was the only man in the district who stuck to the old tariff.

Mean minds seem often to work in the same groove. Only the other day a Reading dentist got into serious trouble for perpetrating a similar revenge on a photographic firm whose studio was on the floor below his offices.

He had quarrelled with them, and in order to get even, had bored a hole in the floor and squirted ink through it upon the pictures below.

Then there was the Thornton Heath case which some years ago, caused a considerable sensation in that neighborhood. A gentleman living in Quadrant Road went for a holiday. When he returned he found his house covered with a ghastly mixture of tar and hideous posters. The offender was the keeper of a lodging house who had some fancied grudge against the unfortunate gentleman.

It is in little country places that spite seems to take its meanest forms. In August last a Welsh woman was heavily fined for flinging mustard in the eyes of some sheep which had strayed upon her place. Four of the poor creatures were blinded entirely.

Everyone who has lived in a country parish knows the intense rivalry that exists at a flower show time. This rivalry sometimes leads to bitter feuds between neighbors, and the result of such a feud was tried before the Bath Bench.

A western man was charged with doing wilful damage to the vegetables of a successful exhibitor, and the plaintiff showed beans, onions, cabbages, and marrows which had been ruined by having needles thrust into them. The defendant admitted his guilt, but said that he had had doubts as to whether the plaintiff showed his own produce, and had adopted this method of finding out.

There was a similar but worse case at Godalming last summer. Some poisonous substance was strewn all through a beautiful garden, and all the plants destroyed. A reward of $125 was offered for conviction, but the scoundrels were never brought to book.

Discharged workmen have been known to wreck their spite upon their late employers in scandalous fashion. At Lille, in France, is one of the biggest sugar refineries in the country. One night a workman discharged for laziness managed to get into the works and turned on all the taps of the reservoirs filled with molasses. The loss was very heavy, but the worst of it was that the whole place was flooded with thousands of gallons of treacle and it was days before the awful mess could be cleaned up.

More recently an ornamental lake in Shropshire was emptied by raising the water gate, and a great number of fine trout washed away into the river or destroyed. This, again, was a cruel and mischievous act of revenge.

The New York gun men who assassinated Rosenthal now make the plea that they were "just bad boys." "Bad" is rather strong. Won'dn't "naughty" be better?

SWEETBREADS WITH MUSHROOMS.

Mushrooms are moderate in price just now, and combined with sweetbreads make a delicious dish. When the latter comes from the butcher soak in cold water for two hours, then cook for five minutes in boiling water. Drop from this into cold water again and remove the fibres.

Cut into pieces and fry in butter.

"SYRUP OF FIGS" FOR CONSTIPATED CHILD

Delicious "Fruit Laxative" can't harm tender little stomach, liver and bowels

Every mother realizes, after giving her children "California Syrup of Figs," that this is their ideal laxative, because they love its pleasant taste and it thoroughly cleanses the tender little stomach, liver and bowels without griping.

When cross, irritable, feverish or breath is bad, stomach sour, look at the tongue, mother! If coated, give a teaspoonful of this harmless "fruit laxative," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food passes out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. When its little system is full of cold, throat sore, has stomach-ache, diarrhoea, indigestion, colic—remember, a good "inside cleaning" should always be the first treatment given.

Millions of mothers keep "California Syrup of Figs" handy; they know a teaspoonful to-day saves a sick child to-morrow. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups printed on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here, so don't be fooled. Get the genuine, made by "California Fig Syrup Company."

Thought She Would Go Mad WITH HEADACHE.

In all cases of headache the treatment should be directed to remove the cause, for with the cause removed the headache vanishes for all time. Headache powders just relieve for the time being, but what is necessary for a permanent cure is something that will go right to the seat of the trouble. For this purpose it is impossible to find a better remedy for headaches of all descriptions than Burdock Blood Bitters, acting as it does on every organ of the body to strengthen, purify and regulate the whole system.

Mrs. Althea Bowman, Hamilton, Ont., writes:—"I have suffered terribly with my head for weeks at a time till I thought I would go mad. A friend advised me to give Burdock Blood Bitters a trial, so I got a bottle and found relief. I have used four bottles in all and I am glad to say that I have had no more headaches since. I would advise all sufferers to give it a fair trial."

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

MEN HAVE NO TACT

The woman in the crepe negligee sighed. "My husband," she said, "is such a downright man that he is a terrible trial! Why, James has no more idea of softening the realities of life than the rock of Gibraltar."

"I know," said her caller, sympathetically. "My sister's husband is like that. If he's out at dinner and the hostess asks him if he likes so and so and he doesn't he just says no flatly and refuses it! Nobody can make him understand that he should sacrifice himself to save his hostess's feelings. He says he'd lots rather save his digestion. I'm sure I don't know what gets into the men sometimes, they act so!"

"James is always so afraid I'll exaggerate," said the woman in the negligee. "He is always waiting for a chance to expose me. He says he cannot have me giving wrong impressions. Why, I never dream of such a thing! You'd think from the way he talks that I tried to deceive people.

"I was so embarrassed the other evening when the Dillys were here—I hate to have Mrs. Dilly think that James is horrid. I was telling her what a pleasant trip we had last summer and how we enjoyed motoring through Europe in our car, when James fairly shot up.

"'Our car!' he cried in a disgustly loud tone 'What do you call it that for? You know it was Smiths' car they had bought in Italy and asked us to drive it up to Havre in with their chauffeur to meet them—they were afraid to have him take it alone!' Just like that!

"If it wasn't our car while we were in it," went on the woman in the crepe negligee, "I'd like to know why not. We could stop it or start it when we chose. Men can't understand those little shadings of meanings!"

"That was dreadful!" sympathized the caller. "It reminds me of my sister's husband. If Anna said her dress goods cost $3 a yard, Richard would immediately pipe up to explain that $3 was supposed to be the original price; but that she paid 98 cents for it at a sale and so far as he could see the goods weren't worth more than 75 cents at that. I think Anna has shed oceans of tears over his perversity!"

"Poor thing!" said the woman in the negligee. "I knew how she must feel! Why, men seem to think that their wives deliberately try to mislead people! Now, take James—he seems so unreasonable about our last summer's trip.

"If I use the phrase, 'When I crossed this time,' he simply explodes. He says it sounds as though I were trying to make some people think I go across every summer, and why in goodness's name don't I say I had never been to Europe before and be honest about it? Just as though I had to tell my whole family history in every casual conversation I have. I can't help it if people draw wrong conclusions can I? He is positively exasperating!

"The Dillys asked where we stayed in Paris and of course I mentioned the name of the highest priced hotel there. We did stay there, too, for one day. But what do you think James did? 'What are you talking about?' he roared. 'We stopped at a nice, quiet pension that we got the address of before we left home—and mighty good meals they served, too! Remarkably good for the money!' I am sure I don't know what Mrs. Dilly thought of him, annoying me like that!"

"Exactly like my sister's husband," sympathized her caller. "When she has company he is just as likely as not to walk in and say, 'Well you didn't get a chance for a nap after all, did you? You said you'd be madder'n a hatter if any one interrupted you, and now I suppose I'll suffer for it!' Right after she's told the callers that she's so glad to see them!"

"James went to a woman suffrage meeting with me," said the hostess, "and I had to speak. When I got to the most interesting part of my paper about how every heart beat in unison with ours he jumped up and pounded a table and said it was no such thing, and as for him he was against it! Imagine! And I the president."

"Well, we just have to bear with them," sighed the caller, getting up.

"O, don't go!" cried the woman in the crepe negligee. "I'm so glad you came and I do wish you weren't in such a hurry. "I'm delighted—"

"Whe-ew!" broke in her husband, who had just let himself in with his latch key. "Aren't you dressed yet? When I telephoned you said you would get ready to start on time if nobody interrupted you."

"What did I tell you!" hissed the hostess in her caller's ear as the caller beat a hasty retreat.

Despera.

In days of old
The doctors bold,
In ignorance of bugs,
Managed to still
A mortal ill
With nauseating drugs.

But in this age
It is the rage
When sickness intervenes
Blindly to treat
The obsolete
With serums and vaccines.

God only knows
As science grows
In years that are to be
How they will mend
Each ailing friend
Into eternity!
—Ralph M. Thompson in Life.

True Blue.

He was in New York on a visit, coming from a small town in Connecticut which still retains her traditions of the blue laws. He was invited to spend a whole day at our minister's, who had a little boy about his own age. We asked him when he got back if he had had a good time, and he replied with great enthusiasm, "Yes." Then he began to look puzzled as if trying to account for the fact that he really did have a good time in a minister's family and said, apparently talking to himself, "They are the best people for Christians that I ever knew."—New York Post.

The Cheerful Thinker.

I'd love to pay the Income tax.
I'd pay it with delight.
I'd pile the stuff in precious stacks.
I'd sit up half the night.
I'd try to be the first to pay—
I'd be it if I could—
And then I'd go my cheerful way—
At least I think I would.

Of course I'd want an income big,
So I could pay the more.
The denser down I had to dig
The richer stream I'd pour.
If I had coupons piled in racks,
With millions to the good,
How joyously I'd pay the tax—
At least I think I would.
—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The Art of Persuasion.

"I wish," she said a little impatiently, "you wouldn't ask me again to be your wife. I have thought it all over and I'm sure I never can learn to love you."

"Oh, that's all right," he replied. "I don't expect you to learn to love me, but please let me keep on trying to persuade you. I expect to go into the real estate business and I'll need all the practice along this line that I can get."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Considering the Offer.

"Now listen, my dearest Lorena," he said. "In the bank I have two thousand dollars ahead.
I've patent rights on a sky car of some merit,
And my aunt's railroad stock, which I hope to inherit,
Ought to yield me at least fifteen hundred a year.
I ask you once more, will you marry me, dear?"
"One moment, please. Lend me your pencil," she said.
"I never can figure it out in my head."
—Eugene Dolson in Lippincott's.

HOW TO PREVENT ACID STOMACHS AND FOOD FERMENTATION

By a Stomach Specialist.

As a specialist who has spent many years in the study and treatment of stomach troubles, I have been forced to the conclusion that most people who complain of stomach trouble possess stomachs that are absolutely healthy and normal. The real trouble, that which causes all the pain and difficulty, is acid in the stomach, usually due to, or aggravated by, food fermentation. Acid irritates the delicate lining of the stomach and food fermentation causes wind which distends the stomach abnormally, causing that full bloated feeling. Thus both acid and fermentation interfere with and retard the process of digestion. The stomach is usually healthy and normal, but irritated almost past endurance by these foreign elements—acid and wind. In all such cases—and they comprise over 90 per cent. of all stomach difficulties—the first and only step necessary is to neutralize the acid and stop the fermentation by taking in a little warm or cold water immediately after eating, from one to two teaspoonfuls of bisurated magnesia, which is doubtless the best and only really effective antacid and food corrective known. The acid will be neutralized and the fermentation stopped almost instantly, and your stomach will at once proceed to digest the food in a healthy, normal manner. Be sure to ask your chemist for the bisurated magnesia, as I have found other forms utterly lacking in its peculiarly valuable properties.—F. J. G.

TRIFLES ABOUT TRAINS.

Signs and Signals That Should Interest Canadian Travelers.

There are many signs and signals on the British railway that are apt to puzzle even the most seasoned of season-ticket holders. The man who reads and remembers the simple facts given below can pride himself on knowing considerably more than most people.

One point that puzzles many people is the fact that engine-drivers pass some danger signals and stop at others.

Well, the ones he passes are "distant" signals. Those he stops for are "home" signals. When the driver sees the "distant" signal against him he goes right on. He knows it only means "Be careful—the home signal may be against you!" When the "home" signal is against him, it means "Stop, and quickly!"

The "distant" signal is only a caution signal. Its arm has a "swallow-tail" end—i.e., there is a wedge-shaped piece cut out. The "home" or "stop" signal, on the other hand, has an arm with a square end.

Sometimes it is necessary to have a signal on a particularly high post, in order that it may be easily seen. When this happens, you will always find a second signal on the same post, only very much nearer the ground. This second one is called the fog arm. In foggy weather it can often be made out when the higher one cannot.

A signal with the letter "S" on its arm is intended solely for the use of engines and trains engaged in shunting. A signal with the letter "O" or its arm is, at many busy stations used for slow and local trains; while the fast-line traffic uses the ordinary signals.

On some lines signals are to be seen with two round balls in the arm These are used to control the movements of "backing" trains, or trains that the engine pushes instead of pulling.

Perhaps you have wondered how a porter, by glancing at an approaching train, can tell whether it will stop or not, and where it is going? Well he knows the engine code. It is a very simple one. He tells by the lamps it carries both by night and by day.

If you look at an approaching engine and you see two lamps on the platform the boiler rests on—one above each buffer—the train is a passenger express. If there is one above the right hand buffer and one on top of the boiler, at the foot of the smoke stack, it is a goods express. If it is a train of empty passenger coaches there will be three lights—one above each buffer, and one at the smoke-stack. A slow local train has only one light, and that at the smoke-stack. An engine running alone has also only one lamp. In this case it is over the left-hand buffer.

If you remember these simple points you should not have the faintest difficulty in telling whether a train coming in the distance is yours or not. The position, by the way, of the two wooden arms sometimes to be seen at the foot of the smoke-stack indicates the route the train takes.

Besides the lamps on the engine, there are the lamps at the other end of the train. At night the last carriage has to carry a red light. If there are two red lamps, side by side, it gives station-masters and signalmen warning that a special train is coming immediately behind. In the daytime this warning is given by a red flag beside the tail lamp, or by a red board with the words "Train following!" painted conspicuously on it.

The reason of the tail-light system is to let the signalmen, as the train passes, know whether the train is complete or not. There must be no stray carriages left on the line for the next train to smash itself against. Hence the red light.

Parties For Doggies.

Women who have Pekingese—that is, the little dogs known by that name—are now having Pekingese parties something new in the way of entertainments. There are chairs with silk cushions upon them for the doggies and they sit still or frolic about while their mistresses eat sandwiches or tea or amuse themselves. Most of the talk is, of course, about the pets, which are now the most popular society dogs.

Special Wire to The Examiner:

NEW HAVEN, Conn., March 28.—The annual contests for the figure skating championships of America, which began this afternoon at the arena in this City, have brought together some of the most graceful figure skaters in the world. The contests this year are conducted for the first time under the auspices and rules of the International Skating Union. The two days' programme calls for competitions for the men's and women's championships, also for pair skating.

Of late years figure skating has gained a strong hold on the devotees of winter sports in America. It is many years since it was first introduced in this country. It is known to have been an institution in colonial days. In 1772 Benjamin West, the famous painter was a skilful skater, and during a visit to England he captivated the Londoners with his graceful gyrations on the Serpentine. The Philadelphia Skating Club on the Schuylkill River was founded in 1848 and a few years later Boston and Philadelphia skaters introduced figure skating in New York. In 1868 the National Amateur Skating Association was organized to conduct annual championship contests in figure skating.

To Set Date For White Slaver

Special to The Examiner:

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., March 28—J. Parker Whitney, the wealthy Placer County ranchman, who was recently indicted on a charge of violating the Mann white slave law, will appear in the Federal Court to-morrow, when it is expected Judge Dooling will fix a date for the trial. At present there is considerable speculation as to the whereabouts of Miss Genevieve Hannan, whom Whitney is accused of having brought into California from Oregon for immoral purposes. After accusing Whitney, the woman left the State, promising to return for the trial, and when last heard from was in New Orleans.

Yearn For Food Don't Spurn It

Unless you have a real hearty desire for food you should by all means take no chances of stomach trouble, for loss of appetite means a signal of distress from a deranged digestion.

When the stomach wants food it signals the mind through the nerves, and these excite the taste buds in the mouth which at once secrete large quantities of saliva. This is called "mouth water," and all of us know when our "mouths water" we want food.

"There's an appetite that Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets gave me."

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets very quickly restore appetite by making the stomach want food. The stomach readily recovers from indigestion, dyspepsia, etc., as soon as it is enabled to digest food. Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets taken after each meal quickly digest that meal and thus wonderfully rest the stomach.

In a short time the digestion assumes its normal condition and then appetite—and a good appetite, too—is the natural consequence. One may actually fluidise a few Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, place them in a glass tube with meat, grains, vegetables, etc., and these tablets will digest the contents of the tube without aid.

Just think then how quickly and efficiently they act when they are mixed with the food in one's system and what a great relief it is to the digestive apparatus to have its fluids so enriched.

Go to your druggist to-day and obtain a 50-cent box and make the actual test yourself after you have eaten a large and hearty meal.

We Promise You Relief from All Stomach Troubles Or Your Money Back

We honestly believe we have the best remedy in the world for indigestion and dyspepsia. We urge you to try it at our risk. If it doesn't relieve you—as we feel sure it will—we'll give back your money without a word. You know us—your family druggist. You know we wouldn't dare recommend anything we didn't know about, nor dare to break a promise. Therefore, when we recommend any remedy it is because we believe it to be better than any other to relieve the ailment for which it is made, and when we prove our faith in it and our sincerity toward you by promising to give back your money if it doesn't relieve you and in every way satisfy you, you have no possible excuse for doubt or hesitation.

Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets

are, we honestly believe, the best remedy made for Indigestion, Dyspepsia and all other Stomach Ills

We Know They're Good

Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets, in addition to other ingredients, contain Pepsin and Bismuth, two great digestive aids used by the entire medical profession. They soothe the inflamed stomach, check the heartburn and distress, stimulate a healthy secretion of the gastric juice, aid in rapid and comfortable digestion of the food and help to quickly convert it into rich red blood, and thereby into flesh, bone and muscle. They relieve stomach distress promptly, and, used regularly for a short time, tend to restore the stomach to a comfortable, easy-acting, healthy state. They aid greatly to promote regular bowel action.

Delays Are Dangerous

Don't neglect indigestion, for it frequently leads to all sorts of ills and complications. The pain and discomfort is not the most unfortunate part. The fact that when the stomach is not acting right, the material needed to repair the waste that are constantly taking place in the body is not being given to the blood either in the proper condition or fast enough is far more serious. Nothing will cause more trouble than an unhealthy stomach. The blues, debility, lack of strength and energy, constipation, biliousness, headaches and scores of other serious ailments result from the failure of the stomach to properly do its work.

You Risk No Money

Our willingness to have you use Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets entirely at our risk proves our faith in them. We always sell them this way, and it is because we know that they have greatly benefited scores of sufferers to whom we have sold them. There's no red tape about our guarantee. It means just what it says. We'll ask you no questions. You needn't sign anything. Your word is enough for us. We know that when they help you you will consider it money well spent even if they had cost you ten times as much. If they don't help you, the money you paid for them is yours, and we want you to have it.

Sold only at the more than 7,000 Rexall Stores—the World's Greatest Drug Stores. In convenient boxes—three sizes: 25c, 50c, $1.00

Buying an Ancestor.

The famous quarterly reviewer, Mr. Abraham Hayward of London, once thought that he should like to have some ancestors. So he walked to Wardour street, where one can generally pick up an ancestor of two of the Cromwellian, Queen Anne or early Georgian period. Selecting a portrait of a cavalier in half armor, with features not quite unlike his own, Mr. Hayward made a bid for it, but, deeming the price asked too high, he went his way.

A fortnight after, the ancestral fever coming strongly upon him, he went again to Wardour street, prepared to pay the dealer his price. The picture was sold. A few days later Mr. Hayward went to dine with Lord Houghton and was astonished to see the picture in the dining-room. Seeing that it attracted his guest's attention, Lord Houghton said:

"Very good picture, that; came into my hands in a curious way; portrait of a Milnes of the Commonwealth period—an ancestor of mine."

"Indeed!" said Mr. Hayward. "He was very near being an ancestor of mine."

Tired of Selling Books.

Scotland has given birth to some wonderful artists, but none who leaped to fame so quickly as Mr. John MacWhirter, the Royal Academician. Apprenticed early to a bookseller and publisher, he ran away and commenced his artist life; and such was his talent that his early studies of wild flowers at home and abroad were selected by Ruskin as examples for his Oxford class. "The Three Graces," which brought him his A.R.A. in 1879, a typical of the work which has opened the eyes of the layman to the delicate beauties of the birch tree. Mr. MacWhirter is an ardent yachtsman.

NEURALGIA

"NEARLY DROVE ME WILD, UNTIL I TOOK KEPHALDOL"

Mr. Thomas Cooper, Ladley, Sussex, England, was almost frantic with Neuralgia, when he first took a KEPHALDOL Tablet.

"I am nearly 71 years of age and have suffered with Neuralgia nearly all my life. A friend told me about KEPHALDOL and I had my people get me a 2s. package. I took two tablets as soon as I got them and quickly received relief. It was joy."

So great became the fame of KEPHALDOL Tablets abroad that their reputation spread to this country. The demand for KEPHALDOL grew so rapidly that arrangements were made to establish a Canadian office and supply all the druggists. These wonderful tablets, the prescription of Vienna's famous nerve specialist, Herr Doctor Stour, have brought welcome relief to hundreds suffering from Neuralgia and Headaches, the ravages of La Grippe, Rheumatism, Sciatica and Lumbago, Pain in the Back, and in fact any pain.

If you cannot get the 50c. tubes at your druggist's, write Kephaldol Limited, 31 Labour Street, Montreal.

Getting Around It.

The members of a party around a table in an exclusive club in a downtown skyscraper were much amused the other evening by a controversy between their waiter and another employee of the club.

One of the party had ordered sirup. What the sirup was for has nothing to do with this story. Going to the dumb waiter, the servitor shouted in his best ordering voice:

"Sirup!"

"I don't getchu," came the response down the shaft.

"Sirup!!" this time with two exclamation points and rising inflection.

"Come again," was the imperturbable response.

"Sirup!" it went up the shaft like the blast of an explosion.

"Aw, spell it," said the echo.

"S-u-r"—the waiter had his feet planted firmly—"s-u-r"—he had tightened his vest and taken a deep breath—"s-u-r. Say, bring some one to the shaft that can understand me, will yuh?"

And he waited with some dignity the coming of a person with sharper ears.—Pittsburgh Post.

Courtship by Flowers.

In remote Alpine hamlets and villages, especially in the Bernese Oberland, there still exist ancient and pretty customs of propounding marriage by the language of flowers. If a maid accepts a bouquet of edelweiss from a man she at the same time accepts him as her fiance, the idea being that the man has risked his life to obtain the flowers for the woman he loves. Another method which exists in the canton of Glarus is for the young man to place a flowerpot containing a single rose and a note on the window sill of the girl's room when she is absent from home and wait—perhaps days—for a reply. If the maid takes the rose the young man boldly enters the house to arrange matters with her parents, but if the rose is allowed to fade away the proposal is rejected without a single word having been exchanged between the couple. Sometimes a fickle girl will keep a young man waiting a day or two for an answer, but what ever it may be it is final.

Lines of Beauty.

Have you ever stopped to think of the difference in the lines which come upon the face? Who minds the pencillings of good nature and kindness? They enhance the charm of a face because they mirror so plainly the soul behind it, and women who have these lines don't go to beauty culturists to have them removed. They scarcely notice they are there, nor do their friends think of them as anything but beauty marks. It is the lines which come from discontent and ill temper that are disfiguring. They crease the brow and drag down the mouth and encircle the eyes unpleasantly. They make a woman fly to specialists and indulge in quantities of highly recommended creams and lotions.

This Boy And Girl Had St. Vitus' Dance

Boy Lost All Strength and Girl Could Not Speak—Doctor Could Not Help Them—Cured by Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

So great is the strain on the system of the growing child that even with a careful attention to the food supply it is often difficult to keep up vitality.

It is necessary to supply a blood-forming treatment in condensed and easily assimilated form, so that it may be quickly taken up by the blood stream and thereby nourish the feeble nerves back to health and strength. It is difficult to imagine anything so admirably suited to this purpose as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

Mrs. D. Ardies, Brandon, Mann., writes: "My son, aged fourteen, and little girl of three years, were both stricken with St. Vitus' Dance. The doctor told us what the ailment was, but could not keep them from getting worse and worse, so when I received a book about Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I decided to try it. The boy had lost eighteen pounds in two months, and could scarcely take hold of anything. The little girl lost the power of her tongue, and could scarcely speak. I now take pleasure in stating that they are both quite well, and you would never know there had been anything the matter. The boy has gained twenty-five pounds in weight. I am very thankful there is such a medicine on the market, and that I happened to get the little book first when I did."

Mild and gentle in action, and yet wonderfully potent in its restorative influence on the system, Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is a splendid help to children who are pale, weak, and puny, slow in developing or nervous and irritable. Fifty cents a box, 6 boxes for $2.50, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

WILL BUILD BLOCK OF SIX STORES ON CURLING RINK'S VACANT FRONTAGE

John T. and R. C. Braund Have Completed Purchase of the Property and Will Erect Three Storey Building as Soon as the Weather Permits — Six Apartments in Upper Floors.

CURLERS WILL LIKELY HAVE FINE QUARTERS

John T. Braund and his brother, Ralph C. Braund completed the arrangements yesterday, whereby they secured possession of the land in front of the Curling Rink on Charlotte Street. They have been negotiating for this property since last July with the Curling Rink Company, but it was not until Thursday that the details of the purchase were concluded.

As soon as the weather becomes favourable for building operations the Braund brothers will erect a three-storey building, the ground floor of which will be divided into six stores. The second and third floors will provide for six apartments.

Lot is 114 Feet Long.

The lot is 114 feet long. Of this the Curling Rink Company reserves a strip in the centre 20 feet wide, extending from the street line into the rink building. This gives the purchasers 47 feet on each side of the rink entrance, which is reserved through the three storeys.

The new stores and apartments will therefore be made of two similar sections, the plans for one side being identical with those of the other side Th front wall will be close to the street boundary and in alignment with the buildings east of the rink property. The store fronts will be of an ornate type and the interior will be completely equipped for business purposes.

Changes to Rink.

The facade adornments of the rink building will be removed and a party wall will constitute the rear of the new block. The use of the reserved space of twenty feet which the Rink Company retains will be discussed at a meeting to be held in a short time. This strip on the ground floor may be used simply as an entrance, it may be utilised for store purposes, or in some similar manner. On the second or third floors it may be fitted out for enlarged quarters for the Curling Club. This disposition remains with the Rink Company, but it is generally felt that a forward step will be taken and club rooms provided that will give the Peterborough curlers accommodation equal to any of the curling clubs in the province.

Bright Prospects.

The suggested improvements will include a commodious and cheery lounge room and possibly a lunch room. A9 section will be appointed for the use and comfort of the lady curlers. These features, hwever, have not been formally decided upon.

Cheery Apartments.

The apartments in the Braund block will be modernly equipped with an eye to utility and comfort. One apartment will have the living rooms on the second floor and bed rooms on the third Bay windows will look into Charlotte treet, and the block will present an attractive appearance. The entrances to the apartments will be off Charlotte Street.

Faith in This Street.

The Braund brothers have faith in the future of Charlotte Street. It is understood that they own the Snowden House and the block in which N. Routley's shoe store is located. They are also largely interested in the J. M. Greene Music Co. and, if not the sole owners, are part owners of that building.

Will Advance the Street.

Their new block should materially increase the commercial interest and value of Charlotte Street, and will certainly be an adequate filler for a property which has up to the present left a gap on the north side of the street. The plans are all ready, and when the frost leaves the ground, building operations will be undertaken. Messrs. Braund have agreed with the Rink Co. to have their building up by Sept. 1st of this year.

FIVE MEN ARE SHOT

Special to The Examiner:

WASHINGTON, D.C., March 20. — Five persons were shot and two probably fatally as a result of a demented man, Rabensky, running amuck with a loaded revolver on the main streets of the city to-day. He was on his way to the White House when the police caught him.

TENDERS FOR MARKET TOLLS WERE OPENED

And the Contract Was Awarded to A. S. Sanderson, Whose Tender Was the Highest

REPAIRS TO HOSPITAL

The Property Committee of the City Council met last evening at the conclusion of the Council meeting, Ald. Langford presided. Others who were present were Aldermen Duncan, Saunders and McIntyre and His Worship Mayor Buller.

Tenders will be invited for garbage collection by districts, the area governed by the garbage by-law to be divided into six districts, one man to take the contract for one district, similar to the principle governing street watering. Tenders will be accepted for one or more or all districts. Seven months' contact, terminating the end of the year, beginning June 1st.

The Market Tolls.

The following tenders for market tolls were opened:

A. S. Sanderson	$876
John Riddel	837
Walter Fisher	840

On motion of Ald. Duncan and Saunders, the highest tender, that of A. S. Sanderson, $876, was accepted.

Repairs to Hospital.

His Worship Mayor Buller reported the repairs necessary to the Isolation Hospital at a cost not exceeding $380.

The Chairman was authorized to have the work done.

Lectured On Passion Play

Interesting Address at St. Paul's Church Last Night

An illustrated lecture on the Passion Play, was given in the St. Paul's Presbyterian Church last night, by the Rev. David Lang, assistant minister of the Bloor Street Presbyterian Church, Toronto. There were a large number present. Rev. Mr. ng had the opportunity some years ago to witness the Passion Play, and took some very interesting photographs, which were shown last night.

LOW WATER IN THE UPPER LAKES NOW

Many men are now coming out from the lumber camps, and all report a successful season for cutting and drawing. The fear at present with the loggers is water. The lakes are low, never seen so low at this season of the year, and the creeks are dry. The open fields were clear of snow at the beginning of the week, and in the woods it is said to be exceptional to find snow to the knees. How are the creeks to be filled within the next few weeks? This is what is disturbing the dreams of the loggers. There will have to be some big falls of snow or rain in the next few weeks, regular floods, or a lot of the logs cut this winter will be kept in the back waters.

It looks to be highly probable that this season will furnish a most effective example of the need of Forest Conservation and the planting of forests throughout the watershed of the Trent Valley. The clearing of the land leaves no storage of water.—Bobcaygeon Independent.

Last Meeting In The Series

Rev. Mr. Smith, of Belleville, who has been conducting largely attended special services in the Murray St. Baptist Church, will finish his meetings to-night. Rev. Mr. Smith is a favourable and eloquent speaker, and his messages have proved helpful to a very large number. The church will undoubtedly be crowded to-night. The only offertory of the week will be taken at this meeting.

PETERBORO'S HOTELS WELL PROTECTED

There is a Rope Fire Escape in Every Bed-room in Every Hotel in the City Says Chief Howard

FREQUENT INSPECTION

"Peterborough's hotels are in fine shape, as far as protecting their guests and servants from fire is concerned," remarked Fire Chief Howard to the Examiner, this morning, when interviewed in regard to this matter, the terrible fire in the Woodbine Hotel, Toronto, having occasioned the inquiry.

"In every bed room, in every hotel in Peterborough there is a rope fire escape, added Chief Howard, while in addition the buildings are well supplied with permanent fire escapes. The law in regard to rope fire escapes is rigidly enforced, which does not seem to have been the case in Toronto. "In this City," explained the head of the local Fire Department, "I't has been the custom for myself, accompanied by License Inspector Stewart, to make an annual tour of inspection around the hotels of the City to investigate the protection facilities. We send reports of this tour to the City Council and the Government. In addition to this annual inspection we, from time to time during each year, pay unexpected visits to the hotels to assure ourselves that conditions are all right. In a few isolated cases we have found a rope removed from a room through the carelessness of a servant in house cleaning or something of that kind, and we do not leave the premises until the missing rope has been returned to its proper place. We have found the hotel-keepers of the City ready to comply with the Act, and to provide facilities that will protect not only their guests but also their employees from danger."

Chief Howard Is On The War Path

Brings Local Merchant to Court for Burning Rubbish in a Back Yard, Not the Regulation Distance From Buildings

A local business man was charged in Police Court, this morning, with setting fire to combustible matter — shavings, etc., in a back yard, not being the regulation distance (100 yards) from buildings.

Mr. G. N. Gordon appeared for the defendant, and pleaded guilty, but said that as this was the first offence he had ever known brought into court in Peterborough, and defendant had promised to rectify matters, for these reasons Mr. Gordon asked that a nominal fine be imposed.

Chief Howard, who laid the information, said that he had received many complaints about defendant burning rubbish in his back yard, which was in close proximity to several public buildings.

A fine of $5, and $2.60, costs, was imposed.

"This matter," said Chief Howard to an Examiner representative, this morning, should, and must be, stopped, as it endangers public buildings and lives."

Magistrate Dumble has intimated that in future any [illegible] who makes a breach of the by-[illegible] will be prosecuted to the full extent of the law, which provides for a fine of $50 and costs.

The Chief said that it is his intention to prosecute several other parties in the City, unless they show that they are going to keep their premises more free from combustible matter in the future.

This is a grave offence and has been the cause of many bad fires in other cities, and it is the wish of the local Fire Chief that no such occurrences should arise from this negligence in Peterborough and he is determined to put a stop to it. As he said, when he gets after anyone, they had better look out.

Recruits' Drill.

A special recruits' drill was held at the Armouries last night, under the instruction of Sergt. Instructor Dunkerley. There were a large number present.

AN APPEAL TO THE PUBLIC

Do you believe an organization of young men, united with the object of developing and encouraging different branches of amateur sport, a good thing for Peterborough?

Are you in sympathy with a movement that has as its fundamental principle the fostering of a clean, healthy spirit of co-operation among the athletes of the City?

Does the ideal of a body of keen young Peterborough boys, working together to put sport on a higher plane, to build up a sentiment of playing the game hard but fairly, appeal to you?

You parents, do you want your sons to belong to an organization where they will be inculcated with a love of clean sport, where their bodies will be built up, while at the same time they will be kept away from bad habits and be under the jurisdiction of those whose motive is to develop youngsters along proper lines?

If you answer "yes" to these questions, you should rally round the Peterborough Athletic Club, which has precisely these objects in view. For years an organization of this kind has been talked of but nothing has been done. Now the movement is under way and the people of Peterborough are in a position to assist in a work that is being started on lines that will lead to a permanent organization. The first steps towards success is the establishment of suitable club headquarters. This the Club has already decided upon, but the equipment of such rooms will require funds, not a very large sum, but large enough to be a burden on the young athletes for whose benefit the Club has been organized. To have the desired results, it must be made possible for the youngsters to belong to the Athletic Club without too great a financial strain. The Club will be self-sustaining in a short time, it is hoped, but in the meantime the generosity of the public is being appealed to. The Club has commenced a campaign for funds and subscription lists will be brought before those whom it is felt will be willing to assist in the starting of this movement on a sound basis.

The Examiner bespeaks on behalf of the Athletic Club a cordial welcome and a ready response. The Club is a movement along the right lines, started in the proper spirit and with praiseworthy ideals. It is worthy of support and there is no doubt that it will be forthcoming.

NEW HOUSES FOR HUNTER STREET

Dwelling Occupied by Sheriff Hall Is Being Removed, and New Residences Will Be Built by H. Hickey

OLD LANDMARK PASSES

Another residential landmark is passing in the razing of the house occupied for years by Sheriff Hall, at the corner of Hunter and Fleming Place. This large lot has been purchased by Mr. Henry Hickey from Sandford Fleming of Ottawa, the deal having been put through by J.T. O'Connell. Mr. Hickey has already begun the demolition of the house, and will erect a number of fine new residences on the property. The materials used in the old building were the product of a time when good lumber was plentiful and cheap. Many of the beams and joists are well preserved. The new residences will fill up this particular section, and will give a compact appearance to that part of Hunter Street.

LIVE STOCK MARKET

BRANTFORD, Ont., March 20. — Gordon May, who married a girl in this city when his wife was living in Oshawa, was sent to prison for three months for bigamy. He said the second girl knew he was a married man.

YOUNG BLOOD FOR BOARD OF TRADE

Quite a Number of Young Business and Professional Men Express Willingness to Unite For City's Progress

ANNUAL MEETING ON MONDAY

With the approval of Mr. C. H. Pennefather, President of the Board of Trade and other members, an invitation was extended to a number of young business men of the city to meet at the Bank of Montreal Chambers yesterday afternoon, and make enquiry of them as to whether they would interest themselves in Board of Trade matters this year. Quite a number attended. Mr. Pennefather was in the chair, and Mr. Basil Hall acted as secretary of the meeting. A lengthy discussion on the situation of the Board of Trade in Peterborough was indulged in, and from what can be learned it would not be surprising if the Board this year becomes a very live body. That is, of course, provided the old members fall in with the young men who were asked to meet yesterday afternoon, and combine their experience and knowledge with the enthusiasm and energy of the younger men.

The annual meeting will be held in the Council Chamber on Monday evening, March 23rd, and it is hoped that every man who believes a Board of Trade should, and can be, a live and effective organization in a city like Peterborough, is asked to be present.

While it is not generally known the Boards of Trade of previous years have accomplished considerable for the city, but the work devolved upon a very few, and consequently not as much was accomplished as if there had been more enthusiasm and the work divided.

The only way to make Peterborough's Board of Trade effective seems to be to give every member something to do and see that it is done, and not to pile a lot of work on a few of the officers.

However, nothing will be done until the situation is threshed out with the old members at the meeting next Monday evening.

FUNERAL OF ASSASSIN'S VICTIM TO-DAY

Special to The Examiner:

PARIS, March 20.— The funeral of Gaston Calmette, the victim of Madame Caillaux, took place to-day in the north-western district of Paris and within a block of the residence of his assassin. Hours before the procession vast crowds filled the streets, and it was like a great carnival. The police effectively headed off the disturbances.

PETERBORO' MAN PERISHES IN A FIRE IN DETROIT CITY

Walter Libby, Son of Mr. W. Libby, Parnell St., a Victim—Was Working on Top Floor of Building.

THE FUNERAL HERE

DETROIT, Mich., March 19.—Fire this afternoon swept through the building of the Houghton-Detroit Elevator Co. on East Woodbridge street, in the wholesale district. Adjoining buildings were endangered. Police said that four men had been caught in the flames and had undoubtedly perished. All downtown fire apparatus was called out to fight the fire.

Those who are thought to have died in the flames are John Long, Walter Libbey, and two brothers named Todd.

All efforts of the fire department to prevent the complete destruction of the five-storey building were abandoned at 1:30, and the firemen devoted their attention to protecting nearby buildings.

Aside from the four men thought dead, the police believe that all occupants of the buildings escaped.

A later dispatch says:

The property loss was estimated at $200,000.

The known dead are: Walter Libbey, Peterborough, Ont.; John Law, Newark, N.J.

Both men were employed by Wilcod & Sharp, who operate a machine shop on the fifth floor. Both bodies were badly burned. A man named Todd, who worked for the same company, is missing.

The cause of the fire has not been determined.

Mr. Walter Libby, is a son of Mr. W. Libby, 477 Parnell street. Mr. Martin Libby is a brother.

He was very well known in Peterborough. For a number of years he was employed in the Wm. Hamilton Company.

The remains are expected to arrive in the city at midnight. Funeral arrangements have not yet been completed and will be announced later.

COUNCIL AGREE TO SETTLEMENT WITH HOSPITAL

City Liquidates its Indebtedness to Local Hospitals—Indigent Patients Must Be Passed Upon

BY QUALIFIED OFFICERS

Once again have the civic financiers demonstrated their ability to apply the law of diminuition to outstanding accounts. A meeting of the committee of the Whole Council was held last evening, when it fell to the lot of Dean McColl to present an account for $2,113. The bill, which dates from May the first, 1912, was rendered on behalf of St. Joseph's Hospital. It is the product of an Act that was given for the maintenance for indigent patients treated in public hospitals. This is the second account of its kind that the City has received within the last few weeks. The first one was from Nicholls Hospital and was for a greater amount than the one referred to above. The accounts have long been a bone of contention owing to the difficulty experienced by the authorities in determining the number of patients that were entitled to come under the indigency classification.

"Twelve Mills."

Last night, the Council secured a "paid in full" receipt from the Hospital authorities for the sum of $1,000. In other words the City will have to pay less than fifty cents on the dollar. At first it was proposed to settle for the sum of $800, but in the second assault that was made on the account, the amount was raised to $1,000. This Father McColl agreed to accept. He complimented the aldermen upon their business ability, and jocularly insinuated that continued manifestations of the aforesaid mentioned ability would have the effect of reducing the tax rate to twelve mills.

The Crucial Point.

Father McColl in outlining the situation in so far as it concerned St Joseph's Hospital, said that the onus of proving that patients were indigent should devolve upon the Council and not the Hospital authorities. In accordance with the present Act, the Hospital was obliged to accept all patients that are admissible to a public hospital, irrespective of the patient's ability to pay. Failure to do this would jeopardize the Hospital's right to the government grant. The matter of determining whether or not a patient was able to pay, constituted the crucial point in the Act governing the treatment of indigent patients.

Willing to Compromise.

Father McColl was willing to accede to the City's terms, providing said terms did not exceed the statutes. He said that the Hospital authorities had no right to cross-examine a patient as to his financial standing. The Act does not require the Hospital authorities to investigate such matters It was the prerogative of the City, who in the cases of indigent patients, would have to provide the cost of maintenance.

The Hospital's bill for the treatment of indigent patients amounted to $2,113. It covered a period dating from May the first, 1912, to March fifth, 1914. Father McColl was willing to effect a settlement on the same basis as that which was consummated in the case of Nicholls Hospital.

Was Raised to $1,000.

After a brief discussion it was proposed to offer St. Joseph's Hospital the sum of $800 in full settlement of the claim. It was pointed out that the list of alleged indigent patients contained among others, the names of persons who were able to pay.

This amount was raised to $1,000 at the suggestion of Ald. Johnston.

A motion to this effect was endorsed by the committee, and agreed to by Father McColl.

One Account For $200.

The bill contained one account for the sum of $200, covering the maintenance of one patient who was declared insane by the Hospital authorities. Father McColl submitted that the City was liable for the full amount of this claim. This was not admitted by the committee.

"According to the settlement made with the Nicholls Hospital, we are treating St. Joseph's Hospital very generously," observed Ald. Anderson.

"Because the other fellows made a bad bargain, it is no reason why we should," countered Father McColl.

Willing to Co-operate.

Discussing the question of coming to a new arrangement respecting the treatment of indigent patients at St. Joseph's Hospital, Father McColl said that the Hospital authorities were willing to co-operate with the City in the matter of investigating individual cases, and would conform to the same arrangement that was consummated between the City and Nicholls Hospital. This arrangement provides that the City will provide one dollar a day for all indigent patients treated at either Nicholls or St. Joseph's Hospital. The cases to be investigated by a competent official to be appointed by the City.

OPENING BRANCH STORE

Miss Lynch, representing Mlle. Lacoilla, reg., of Montreal, is opening a branch store at 172 Hunter Street, and is taking temporary quarters at 169 Hunter Street where she will be pleased to show pattern hats and model gowns on and after Saturday, the 21st inst.

A WEATHER EXPLANATION

I'll sing of the weather — don't care a rap whether it pains or it pleases; it tickles or squeezes; is a joy or a shocker to the metrical knocker, whose parody jingle gives us poets a "tingle." But when on March twenty, the weather man's sent a chill twelve-below record—with weather so chequered, we poets get vi'lent and can't be kept silent. Just think of the changes, the wide weather ranges; now zeph'rous and lamb-y, now boreal now balmy, now muchly March lamb-y, now roaring March ram-y. Now thus I'll explain it, and stoutly maintain it: The suffragette craze has knocked all things to blazes; the weather man's ousted and a woman's been boosted to fill his position, and thus the condition of weather so shifty, now sunny now drifty. And I just ask you whether you'd not expect weather, like this, so inhuman, from the new weather-woman?—MARY ANN.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed.

FRIDAY, MARCH 20, 1914

WHY NOT?

Some unreasonable members of the Commons are objecting because Hon. Frank Cochrane, Minister of Railway, was present on the occasion of the presentation of a sword to Sir Edward Carson, the Ulster rebel leader. Hon. Mr. Cochrane is supposed to be in the Mediterranean to pick up his health and avoid the boomerang shock of the abortive Lynch-Staunton - Gutelius Transcontinental partizan report. But why shouldn't he be there? He is a member of the Government that condones and encourages treason by having three Nationalist, flag-hating members in its ranks, holding the fattest portfolios — over the greatest money-spending and spoils-creating departments. Mr. Cochrane is quite consistent with his home official environment in countenancing and encouraging by his presence armed rebellion in Ulster. Why shouldn't he be present at the presentation of a sword to a rebel chieftain? It is hoped that the air of the Riviera will restore the Minister to complete health and that he will hasten home to be present on the occasion of the presentation to the Dominion archives of the flag the Nationalists "had to shoot full of holes to breathe the air of liberty through." This noted flag is in the possession or custody of Deputy-Speaker Blondin, Nationalist and flag-shooter, the chair-mate of the ex-Grand Orange Master, Speaker Sproule. Mr. Cochrane is, moreover one of Col. Sam. Hughes' honorary Colonials, and is privileged to do things not expected of rational beings.

THE LATE HON. WM. PATERSON.

In the death of Hon. William Paterson, another of the rapily thinning old guard is retired. He was one of Canada's self made men who could be justly proud of his work. He began his business life in an humble way and the beginnings of his political life were on the same modest level—he began as a municipal councillor in Brantford. He showed his unusual oratorical gifts even in this humble capacity. Though he was not a polished orator, he was an effective orator and a loud one, and his powerful, resonant voice dominated the tumult of many a hustings and made his arguments heard and felt. He was regarded as one of the greatest campaigners of his time. In parliament he was a keen debater, with the advantage possessed by not all debaters, of knowing what he was talking about. In 1896 Sir Wilfrid Laurier, a shrewd judge of men, made Mr. Paterson Minister of customs, with results that justified his judgment. There was never in the House perhaps a keener student and better informed Minister of Customs matters than Mr. Paterson; and only Hon. Mr. Fielding shared with him equally a knowledge of the complexities of tariff schedules. The late Mr. Paterson was a great and good public man, but like all great men he had his foibles. He could stand the hard knocks of his political opponents with equanamity, but woe to the reporter who spelled his name with more than one T. But he well earned the indulgence of this one little weakness. It could be pardoned by a man who was so strong in voice, so strong in debate, so strong in administrative ability, so strong in character, that in a public career of more than forty years the breath of scandal never sullied the purity of his name: This is a proud boast, and an inspiring one to the youth of this age when venality and loose political morals are the heritage of reputation that too many public men will hand down to posterity.

THE CRISIS IN FRANCE.

A tragedy, with a woman at the bottom of it, and at the top of it, too, has thrown France into a condition which La Presse of Montreal describes as "France on a volcano"—"sur un volcan". Gaston Calmette, the distinguished editor of a great journal, "Figaro," published a private letter of a cabinet minister, Mr. Caillaux, in which the minister was apparently shown to be taking a private view of a state matter in conflict with his public attitude towards it. Incensed at this the wife of the minister, saying to her husband as she left the residence, that he "would be avenged," straightway went to the office of Le Figaro and shot the editor dead at his desk. Apart from the sinister character of this bold crime—doubly so by being committed by a woman, it is probable to have serious if not, revolutionary, effects upon France, in which public feeling is in the state of excitement incident to an impending general election. The minister, Mr. Caillaux, has resigned, and the ministry, itself, may not long survive the furious assaults of those who wish to avenge, without delay, the assassination of a great journalist, while he was at his post doing his duty. This assassination will, experienced parliamentarians think, have a great influence upon the electors, and give a great advantage to the anti-Republican party. Already the Royalists, who are united by the occasion, are parading the streets of Paris in strong force, and shouting "Down with Caillaux!" "Down with the Republic!" On the other hand the partizans of the minister rejoice openly over the death of the anti-Republican editor, and applaud the deed that led to his death. Here we have the Royalists and anti-Republicans making strenuous manifestations, met by similar manifestations on the part of the Radicals and Socialists, so that the maintenance of peace and order will be difficult. When fuel to the flames is added by the excitement of a general election, conditions are likely to ensue that will justify the suggestion of La Presse that France is on a volcano. The French are an excitable and impulsive people; popular sentiment is so inconstant that in a country that witnessed and enacted the horrors of the Revolution and the Commune, that has passed so easily from a monarchy to a republic, from a republic to a monarchy that has had so many revolutionary changes, another revolution will not be a surprise.

FOUR SPECIMEN LAND SCANDALS UNDER BORDEN

Four Favourites Get a "Rake-off" of Nearly Half a Million at Public Expense—No Need of a Ferguson Investigation to Prove This—there's Documentary Evidence.

Here are four examples of gross breaches in honest and efficient dealing with the public funds and the public domain which seriously reflect upon the character of the present administration. The cases are open and flagrant, the facts are indisputable. They are a matter of official record. In these instances, party friends, either through the connivance, negligence, or assistance of a Minister of the Crown, have reaped a profit of nearly half a million dollars at the public expense. The transactions, unfortunately have not been confined to any one department.

Prince Albert Homestead Steal.

(In which the Minister of Public Works appears).

Under the Laurier Government 73 acres of land within the city limits of Prince Albert, Sask., had been, along with other lands, reserved from homesteading.

During January, 1912, Hon. Robt. Rogers, the present Minister of Public Works, the then Minister of the Interior, stated these lands were not open for homesteading.

No public notice was later given that the lands had been opened for homestead entry.

On April 16, 1912, Arthur Donaldson, son of the Conservative whip, in the Saskatchewan Legislature, received a patent for the land for home stead entry on payment of $10.

A few days later Donaldson took advantage of the homestead regulations by applying half-breed scrip on his entry, thus evading the performance of the homestead requirements for actual settlers.

Forthwith the land was sub-divided and offered to the public at prices aggregating $374,000.

Donaldson got for $10, land belonging to the public domain valued at $374,000.

The Dorval Military Manoeuvres.

(In which the Minister of Militia Appears).

On May 23, 1912, at the instance of Colonel Hughes, the Minister of Militia an Order-in-Council was passed authorizing the Minister of Militia to pay $180,000 for a military camp site near Montreal.

On June 8, 1912, Major Rodden of Montreal purchased a property known as the McIntyre farm for $36,496, adjoining the Bel-Air race track, a property he had purchased on May 27th, 1911, for $38,500.

His total purchase price for both properties was $84,996.

On June 17, 1912, the Minister of Militia issued a cheque in payment for these properties to Messrs. Rodden, Fair and Cameron for $180,000.

On June 24, 1912, Messrs. Rodden, Fair and Cameron issued a certificate to the Justice Department, stating that the land was clear. The government's cheque was cashed on the same date.

Major Rodden's total outlay, supposing all payments on his purchase to have been made by him, before receiving the Government's check was $84,996; his net profit on the transaction was $95,004.

Why did the Militia Department not forestall Major Rodden in the purchase, at least, of the McIntyre property? The Order-in-Council authorising its purchase was passed May 23, 1912. Major Rodden did not make his purchase till June 8, and the Militia Department repurchased from him on June 17, at the above prices?

The Gimli Land Grab

On the Government plans and maps of the town of Gimli, on Lake Winnipeg, certain lands fronting on the lake had been shown for 37 years as public domain.

Some years ago the Town Council of Gimli sought titles to the land, but the Department of Interior held this was unnecessary. The streets and public park were on the same status.

Eight or nine years ago two persons applied to the Laurier Government for the land, but were refused.

During October, 1913, Peter Tergeson, Mayor of Gimli, by paying $752 was given a patent for the land, by the Interior Department, of which Hon. Dr. Roche is Minister. Tergeson had been a Liberal, but became an active Conservative worker in 1911.

The land obtained by Tergeson, through the Minister of the Interior should belong to his town. It is valued at $15,000.

The transfer deprives the town of Gimli of the best bathing beech on Lake Winnipeg and it gives Mr. Tergeson a return of nearly 2000 per cent. on his money.

Profit-Sharing at Levis.

(In which the Minister of Agriculture appears).

During July, 1912, a man named Buteau bought a piece of land at Levis, Quebec, for $5,500.

On June 26, 1913, Buteau sold the land to Dussault, a Conservative, for $12,220—a profit of $6,700 in twelve months.

On July 26,1913, Dussault resold the land to W. R. Dohen, another Conservative, for $25,400—a profit of $13,180 for Dessault in thirty days.

On July 30, 1913, Dohen resold the land to the Department of Agriculture of which Hon. Martin Burrell is Minister, as a site for a quarantine station for $32,750—a profit of $7,350 for Dohen in four days.

Thus within a year, the price of this property increased from $5,500 to $32,750, or an increase of $27,230, nearly 500 per cent.

The question naturally sugests itself. Was it foresight that guided Messrs. Dussault and Dohen in their purchases? Or did an interested friend in the Government who knew the property was to be purchased help along this transaction for ends that can readily be surmised?

The purchase of this quarantine site came up for discussion in the House on February 24th, and the Hon. Mr. Burrell admitted that for a year and a half he had been endeavouring to formulate a plan to secure the necessary land at Levis. Has all the land in and around Levis increased 500 per cent. in one year?

BY THE WAY

The editor of an enterprising journal in a mining town recently called at the home of the bride's parents the day after the wedding. He wanted to tell his readers all about the event, and wished to give the young couple a rousing "send-off" as well. The bride's mother met him at the door.

"Good morning, Mrs. Brown," smiled the editor. "I have called to get some of the details of the wedding."

"Oh, pshaw! That's too bad!" replied the matron, in dismay. "They're all gone. You ought to have come last night. They ate up every scrap!"

"You are too hard on Mr. Skinflint. You should treat him with more of the milk of human kindness."

"He'd churn it into butter and sell it if I did."

ADVERTISE IN THE EXAMINER

Situation In Ulster Is Very Serious--Garrisons Increased

Premier Asquith and Other Government Leaders Said to Have Broken Down.

BRITISH TROOPS ACTIVE

Special Cable to The Examiner:

BELFAST, Ireland, March 20.—Six p.m. Irish time.—This has been an exciting day for Ulster, and as the sun goes down blood red in the west, there are those who say it is an ominous sign of terrible events on the morrow, or within the next few days or months. The clank of sabres has been unusual activity in the movement province during the day. There has ben uenusual activity in the movement of British troops. There are many indications that the Government is preparing for any event. A heavy detachment of troops arrived at Newry, Omagh, Armagh and Enniskillin. Hitherto only small garrisons have been stationed at these points. It is reported that the garrison at Belfast will be increased to-morrow and Sunday. Sir Edward Carson was in secret conference with the Unionist leaders here all afternoon, and the leaders of Orange lodges and Ulster volunteers will meet in Belfast Hall to-night.

EVERY SATURDAY OF YEAR CLOSE HOTEL BARS

Hon. W. J. Hanna Said to be Nursing Some Drastic Amendments to the Liquor Act.

While little has been said this session about amendments to the Liquor License Act, it is understood that Hon. W. J. Hanna has some drastic moves up his sleeve.

One of these amendments is to compel the closing of hotels and the prohibition of the sale of liquor on Saturday afternoons. Much of the drunkenness results from excessive drinking on that day of the week. During the summer months Saturday afternoon as a half holiday, and the absence of liquor on this day during the year will be welcomed by multitudes.

Another move that has been mooted for some years may be taken. This is the establishment of a central Ontario Commission to deal with licenses, and take the whole matter out of politics as far as it can be taken. Hon. W. J. Hanna has been pressed to do this many times, but his hands have been stayed by his following in the Legislature.

PRESBYTERIAN MONEY "EASY" FOR MISSIONS

Despite Depression Givings Were Well Ahead of Any Previous Year, Reports Said.

TORONTO, March 20.—Financial reports of the Home Mission Board of the Presbyterian Church show increased revenue despite the recent financial depression.

Dr. Sumerville, treasurer of the Presbyterian Church, reported $67,000 more for missionary work than in the preceeding year.

Mrs. West and Mrs. Kipp, of the W.H.M.S. told of an increase of $10,000 over last year in their department.

In connection with the non-Anglo-Saxon problem the Presbyterian Church will co-operate with churches of other denominations.

Appreciation for the gift of $25,000 donated by Mrs. Hugh Waddell, of Peterborough was expressed.

The Four B's Of Salvation

At the evangelistic services in the Park Street Baptist Church, last night, Evagnelist Pugsley spoke on the four B's of Salvation — brains, business, backbone and backing. He based his remarks on Daniel I., 8. Daniel was a great man, a man of great courage. Many and severe were his tests and he was victorious only by the help of God. Daniel was a man of brains. God wanted the best men possible. He was a man of business. Every man should have a business, but the greatest business of all was God's business. The third necessity was backbone. A man without backbone was a mere jelly fish. No man of that type could ever accomplish anything for God. Then, Daniel had backing. God was with him and with David and Samuel and the others. People needed brains, business, backbone and backing to do God's work. God could not work through a coward. Anything was possible to him who believed, because by faith people could link themselves with omnipotence.

Four people were converted. At the meeting in the Church to-morrow, Mrs. Pugsley will speak to young ladies on the subject "The White Slave."

ISN'T THIS WEATHER PERFECTLY AWFUL?

Isn't this weather "perfectly awful," as the High School girl would say? The twehtieth day of March, with the thermometer twelve degrees below zero, just when we expected we were getting robins, maple sugar and crocus shooting into the mild spring air. There's one consolation; this cold dip is probably the equivalent of the equinoxial storms that are due on or about March 21st, the vernal equinox. According to the calendar, March 21st is the first day of spring, and there are reasons to feel that at last winter has done its worst and that milder conditions will come. Anyway, after the weather experience of February and March, we shall have greater respect for the venerable legend of Candlemas day, when the bear, seeing his shadow, gets back to his hole and his paw-sucking for another six weeks of winter—"If February two is bright and clear, we'll have two winters in one year." It was "bright and clear," and we have certainly had the two winters.

OFFICERS ELECTED FOR GRAND ORANGE LODGE

Special Wire to The Examiner:

LINDSAY, Ont., March 20. — The 50th annual meeting of Grand Orange Lodge of Eastern Ontario was brought to a close about 3 a.m., after on all-night session, the most important business being the election of officers. Grand Master Fred W. Forde, of Ottawa, and all Grand Lodge officers were re-elected. A spirited contest took place between Napanee, Port Hope, Brockville and Ottawa, for holding the next annual session of the Grand Lodge in March, 1915. Ottawa was finally decided upon.

EMIGRATION FALLING OFF.

Patriotic Fervour in Europe Keeping the Natives at Home.

LONDON, March 19.—Referring to a recent statement that Ontario farmers were sending over to obtain 1,000 labourers, Agent General Reid stated that it would be impossible to fill such an order unless all expenses were paid, as agricultural labourers were difficult to procure. A party of 120 sailed yesterday for Haldimand County.

Returning from an extensive trip through Europe F. C. Salter, European traffic manager of the Grand Trunk, admitted that the outlook for emigration as regard the continent was very dull. A wave of reaction against Canada has touched, not only Austria, but all Southeastern Europe. All this region has been strongly affected by an outburst of military patriotism, largely as a result of the Balkan war, and this feeling is utilised in official circles to inculcate anti-emigration ideas.

Both on the Continent and England the best policy at present was to remain passive, as a favourable turn may set in a little later.

CHAIRS FOR THE NIGHT CONSTABLES

An Innovation that is still extant in Lindsay—A Relic of the Barbarous Days.

Who broke night constable John Short's chair in the police office?

This relic of olden days has served as a haven of rest for the officer for years, when with tired feet after making his rounds he drops into for a few moments to become lost in reverie. But the unthoughful person cared not for the comforts of the man who watches and walks while the citizens sleep.

Was it possible that the subordinate officers, Foster and Parkes, were having a work out and fell over the old relic, or was there a fight on? This thought has run through the night officer's head, but he is unable to solve the hidden secret. However, Constable Short will of necessity take his rest in a perpendicular position until a new chair is purchased. — Lindsay Warder.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

Costs $500 Per Year For Hose

Fire Department Owns 5000 Feet of Hose, Which is Worth as Many Dollars

The local fire fighters are equipped with some 5,000 feet of hose, with which to combat the flames. The whole of the stock is of the two and a half inch variety (inside measurement.) The hose costs on the average between $1 and $1.10 per foot, which includes the couplings, so the total cost of the hose in possession of the local fire department is in the neighborhood of 5,000.

MORE EACH YEAR.

Each year 500 feet is added to the stock to replace any that may be burnt, too old for use, or otherwise damaged.

The old stock is turned over to the Board of Works.

Outlook is Dark But Not Hopeless Carson's Reception

Examiner Special:

LONDON, Eng., March 20.—(Special Cable)—The London "Times," Unionist, and probably the most representative of opinion of the thinking Tories, while admitting that the general outlook is dark and couldn't be much worse, says that the door to settlement has fortunately not been closed to any of the parties to the controversy, and the minority members of Parliament are still hoping for settlement at the last moment. Word comes from Belfast of an extremely violent reception to Sir Edward Carson when he arrived at that city this morning. A great crowd of people gathered at the docks when Carson's steamr arrived, and he was received with a salvo of revolver salutes and much cheering. During the night great quantities of records were removed from the Unionists headquarters. Unionists in Ulster trust the post office no more and all despatches are sent to the interior of Ulster by messengers in high-powered automobiles.

LONDON, Eng., March 20.—Despite efforts to minimize the situation, leading Liberals admit this morning that Premier Asquith and other Gov- The Marquis of Londonderry and other Ulster leaders followed Carson to Ulster this morning. It is stated that Prmier Asquith and other Government leaders have broken down under the strain.

JUDGMENT WILL BE DELIVERED TO-MORROW

Judgment will be delivered to-morrow by Magistrate Dumble, in the case in which three young men were charged with selling goods in the city, contrary to the Transient Traders' Act.

Mr. G. N. Gordon is appearing for the defence, and City Solicitor Hall for the prosecution.

The evidence is all before His Worship.

This morning Mr. Gordon addressed the Magistrate in the following terms: "We wish you to make a judgment which we can accept as a ruling in the future. The defence is briefly, that these men took orders. They have not been selling or offering for sale, but simply taking orders of prospective purchasers." Mr. Gordon also referred the Court to two previous cases that have been cited.

Mr. Hall, for the prosecution, said that they did not want to press for a conviction, unless they were sure that the defendants were guilty under the Transient Traders' Act, under which Act the charge was laid. He also referred the Magistrate to several cases which had come before higher justices.

HAD TO FLEE FOR THEIR LIVES

Special to The Examiner:

Newest Ideas in

Wall Decoration

The new things for 1914 Wall Decoration are certainly of a high order. While some features seem to stand out as superior to all others, that is a matter of the taste of each purchaser to decide. Certainly the choice of styles and new ideas in combinations is wide enough for all to be exactly suited.

FORESTRATION TO BE TAKEN OVER BY A COMMISSION

Special Wire to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, March 19.—If a recommendation of the Commission of Conservation is acted upon the Provincial Government will take over the forestry in the Trent Valley. An investigation made by an engineer of the commission shows that reforestation is greatly needed as well as protection of the forests from annual fire losses. It has been established that forest growths have a decided effect upon precipitation and this in turn effects the water supply of the canal. It is suggested that the area be taken over either by the province alone or in co-operation with the municipalities.

ONTARIO MUSEUM OPENED

Special Wire to The Examiner:

TORONTO, March 20.—In the presence of a gathering representative of the leading educationalists and legislators of the province, his Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught yesterday formally opened the magnificent new Royal Ontario Museum, the proceedings being held in the large section which is at present unused on the top floor of the new building. There was a large and distinguished audience present, which included all the members of the Ontario Cabinet, together with many of the other members of the Legislature, as well as the heads of the different faculties and colleges of Toronto University, and most of the leading business and professional men of the city. The gathering included also many ladies. After the opening ceremonies the visitors were given an opportunity of examining the many interesting exhibits, and there were general expressions of approval at the excellent arrangement of the various collections, which give no suggestion of the usual crowded jumble of specimens that is to be met in so many museums.

His Royal Highness arrived at the museum shortly before 3 o'clock, accompanied by Hon. W. H. Hearst, Minister of Lands, Forests and Mines, Sir Edmund Walker, chairman of the Board of Trustees of the museum; President Falconer, and others, and was met by a guard of honour composed of about 50 officers and privates of the University Schools Cadets under the command of Lieut. Bramfitt, of the Canadian Engineers. The party proceeding up the top floor of the building, where the ceremonies were to be held. Here a platform had been erected for the occasion, where the Duke of Connaught and his companions took their places, there being present upon the platform also Sir John Gibson and Hon. J. J. Foy, Acting Premier.

ELIMINATE THE DUST AT THE STATION

Editor of The Examiner:

Sir,—When the Council is considering the watering of the streets let them bear in mind that the greatest dust nuisance is at the two railway stations, where so many people congregate during train times; besides, the dust at these spots is peculiarly offensive, owing to the fact that one is strewn with coal dust, and the other which is not less objectionable. No doubt the railways, out of regard for their patrons, would pay for the watering of the same upon being approached by the Council for that purpose, which would be but a trifle.

Yours, etc.,

Traveller.

P.S.—Preparations should be made at once as the dust season will come on suddenly this year owing to the protracted winter.

BONAR LAW'S MOTION IS DEFEATED

Special to The Examiner.

ONDON, March 20.—The motion of Bonar Law, leader of the Opposition, censuring the Government for the refusal of Premier Asquith last Monday to give the details of his proposal for allowing the nine counties of Ulster to vote separately on the question of of being excluded from the operation of the Home Rule Bill, was defeated in the House of Commons to-night by a vote of 345 to 252.

Sir Edward Carson left the House early in the evening for Belfast. As he arose to go, the whole of the Opposition, knowing the purpose of his visit, stood and gave him a rousing cheer. Ex-Premier Balfour entered the House towards the end, and was cheered by both sides.

The word "liar" was hurled at the head of Joseph Devlin, Nationalist member for Belfast, when he declared that Sir Edward Carson, the Ulster Unionist leader, had at one time been a Home Ruler.

Ruffled Tempers.

The tempers of the members on both sides have risen hotly during the last few days. The strain has also affected the health of the leaders. Premier Asquith is not very well and Sir Edward Carson is also under the weather. He left a sick bed only an hour before the beginning of the debate. His bitterness during his speech is excused by some members on this account, but the words of his remarks and of Mr. Devlin's were sharply condemned by many on both sides.

Winston Churchill was obviously stung by Sir Edward Carson's reproaches, and a reference to his father's support of the Ulstermen, though he subsequently took occasion to say that he felt no resentment, and that he did not wish anybody to take up the cudgels for him. This alluded to Joseph Devlin's self-imposed task of defending Mr. Churchill.

HALIBURTON MAN GETS APPOINTMENT

PORT HOPE, Mar. 19.—Mr. Richard Edward Southby, of Ridout St., has been appointed to the position in the Port Hope Customs House made vacant by the death of J. F. Honor. The appointment was made on the recommendation of a very large number of Conservatives of the town.

Mr. Southy came to Port Hope some seven years ago from Haliburton, and is fortunate in securing the plum. He is well qualified for the position.

HAS TALKED 1,000,000 YEARS.

Man Had Power of Speech in Pliocene Times, Scientists Say.

LONDON, March 14.—The remarkable conclusion has been arrived at, by putting two and two together in high expert pronouncements, that man had the power of speech a million years ago.

This important point arises out of the address delivered before the Dublin Royal Society by Prof. Arthur Keith on the ancient Piltdown skull known as the Eoanthropos Dawson.

If it be granted that Prof. Keith is right in fixing the date of the Eoanthropos as a Pliocene, and that Prof. Elliot Smith, who also examined the discovery, is right in interpreting the features of the brain as indicative of speech, the remarkable revelation is made that mankind in the Pliocene period, a million years ago, or even more, had the power of forming and communicating ideas by means of speech.

Missionary Convention

Interesting Address Given at Bethany Tabernacle

The four days' Missionary Convention and Evangelistic meeting began in Bethany Tabernacle yesterday.

Rev. M. E. Ekvall, the Swedish missionary from the Thibetan Border Mission, gave the opening address in the afternoon. At the evening service Mrs. Ekvall gave a brief talk preceding Rev. F. J. Richards, the New York evangelist, who gave the principal address of the evening. He spoke on the feeding of the five thousand, as given in the 6th Chapter of Mark's Gospel. He drew some very striking comparisons between "The Bread Broken for the Multitude" and Christ as the Bread of Life. A ready response was made on the part of the people when invitation was given to assemble for prayer at the close of the service.

The service to-night will begin promptly at 8 o'clock, with a brief missionary message preceding the evangelistic address. A cordial welcome to all.

GERMANY HAS BIGGEST BANK

Also Largest Steamship Line and Greatest Brewery, it is Asserted.

BERLIN, March 18—By increasing its paid-up capital to $62,500,000 for the purpose of absorbing the Provincial Bank, the Deutsche Bank is now asserted to be the world's premier banking house in respect to capital and reserve, which aggregate $106,250,000, as well as total assets. The latter amount to $564,500,000, as compared to those of the next largest bank, the Credit Lyonnais of Paris, $505,000,000. The comparative figures are for December 31, 1912, as the Paris returns for 1913 are not yet published here.

Other big business records claimed for Germany, in addition to the biggest bank, are the largest steamship company, the Hamburg - American, with a capital of $62,875,000, (the nearest rival is the Royal Mail of England, with a capital of $38,500,000), and a tonnage of 1,307,411, comprehending an ocean fleet of 194 vessels, and the largest brewery, the Schiltheiss, with an annual output which outstrips the next biggest beer output in the world, the Anheuser-Busch of St. Louis and the Schlitz of Milwaukee, by roundly 26,500,000 gallons.

Last Social Of The Season

The monthly socials arranged by the St. George's Society during the winter finish to-night and a big crowd is sure to be present, as the next meeting will be on St. George's Day for the annual dinner. An interesting item to-night will be the singing by Mr. Edward Jones of a song written and composed by the local organist, Mr. Herbert Treneer, who will also give two instrumental solos to-night. The following artistes have also promised to assist: Mrs. B. Read, Miss Ada Lee, Mr. T. Ward, Mr. F. Wainwright, Mr. Carter, Mr. C. Thorp, Mr. W. A. Greenslade and Mr. G. Brooks. There is no charge for admission and everybody is welcome.

CENTRAL CAVAN FARMER'S CLUB

Conduct a Debate—Judges Decide in Favour of the Affirmative.

The Central Cavan Farmer's Club held an open meeting at the home of Mr. C. H. Argue on Tuesday, March 10th, and a very large number were present. After the business part of the meeting an excellent musical programme was provided by the ladies and members of the club. A debate was given, "Resolved that country life is preferable to city life." The affirmative being upheld by the Misses M. Lancashire, E. Elson and A. Russell, while the negative was upheld by Messrs. W. Elson, L. McNeill and L. Sutton. It is not going to far to say that the speeches would have done credit to older speakers. The judges decided in favour of the affirmative.

WATER SITUATION HAS ASSUMED SERIOUS PHASE

Striking and costly evidence of the careless manner in which the affairs of the Trent Valley Canal have been attended to during the past two years, is furnished at Bobcaygeon, where a vast volume of water is going to waste daily through the locks and dam, owing to the neglect of the Canal authorities.

On Wednesday Acting Supt. Kilaley and Ernie Bartlett of Peterborough were in Bobcaygeon, looking into the situation, which, it is understood, has assumed a serious phase. It begins to look as if the Scugog will reach the lowest level in its history this summer, a condition of things which will not be welcomed by boat and mill owners.

IS THE WHITNEY GOVERNMENT MORIBUND?

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, March 19. — Parliament Buildings.—A rather startling question was heard in the lobbies of the Parliament Buildings to-day, asked by a man who has followed political history closely for twenty years. The question was that,—Is the Whitney Government moribund? The man admitted that surface indications, such as the large Government majority, did not point that way, but declared there were other factors which put a different aspect on the question. He said:

"A change of Government in Ontario is an important matter and any possibility of such a development is well worth considering. Both the Conservative and Liberal Governments at Ottawa, the former in 1896, and the latter in 1911, had large maporities when they were turned out of office by the people. The mere fact of a large majority deceives no one by the Government itself."

It is significant that the Toronto World, (Conservative), is talking along similar lines and is referring to the Ontario Government as one that is running slack. "Whether it be a loosenin gof discipline or an accretion of barnacles or the slipshod methods of over-confidence or the contempt that comes with familiarity, all governments seem to tread the same path. It was hoped that the Whitney Government would be different, but there are signs which are evident enough."

Among the things mentioned in the lobbies which point to a decline in the Government, is the recent forcing through the House by the Government of the Indemnity Bill which is to apply to the future as well as to the past and which encourages rather than discourages corruption. The inevitable alliance between the Government and the liquor interests, as exemplified in its most recent form by the Snider affair which looms up as a big political issue and the shutting off last year of investigation in the Proudfoot charges involving the Provincial Secretary.

Music & Drama

"THE RED ROSE."

"The Red Rose" with its bright lines, pretty girls and catchy music proved a very popular attraction at the Grand Opera House last night. The sparkling musical comedy, which was seen here last season, has lost none of its charm, and last night's company seemed quite the equal of the organization which first presented the work here. (Miss Lottie Kendall, as "Lola," gave a delightful performance and she was assisted by a clever cast. The music, which is decidedly bright and infectious, was well presented, both by principals and chorus. "Come Along Ma Cherie," "Queen of Vanity Fair" and "Men, Men, Men," were the biggest hits and the little song, "Bohemia," was a gem.

POLICE COURT

James Robertson was charged with being drunk in a public place yesterday. He pleaded guilty. Before the fine of $2 was imposed, a voice in the court said "I'll pay his fine."

"You had better keep him," said the Court.

George Welsh was also assessed $2 for a similar offence.

BOY WHO BROKE HIS PAROLE BACK IN CELL

James Foley Taken Into Custody Just Outside Gates of Penitentiary.

KINGSTON, March 20.—James Foley, the eighteen-year-old convict, paroled sometime ago and sent to the lumber camps in Northern Ontario, from which he ran away, hereby breaking his parole, was captured by J. H. Forster, an official at the Portsmouth penitentiary, in front of the gates of the prison.

The pen. official received word by telephone from a person connected with the penitentiary, who recognized young Foley, to the effect that the paroled prisoner was walking towards the big penal institution. In a few minutes Foley had proceeded as far as the prison gates and Forster met him and took him into the office. The authorities at Ottawa were wired and instructions were given to keep him. He was committed to-day to serve the rest of his sentence. He was sentenced to the penitentiary about one year ago for theft, getting three years. He has still two years of his sentence to serve.

THE WEATHER

The present cold snap is a severe one for so late in the season. This morning the official figures were 9 below zero at 7 o'clock, but 12 below had been reached during the night. A year ago to-day the thermometer was up to 61 degrees in the shade, and the snow was entirely gone with the exception of a few remnants of old snow drifts in some of the fence corners. Colder weather, however, prevailed later, and the end of the month was quite wintry.—W.F.

BOMBAY'S GREAT DOCKS OPENED

Special to the Examiner.

BOMBAY, March 20.—Lord Hardinge, Viceroy and Governor-General of India, arrived here to-day and formally opened the new Bombay docks the foundation-stone for which was laid by King George in 1905, when he visited India as Prince of Wales. The new docks comprise the Alexandra wet dock, which provides three miles of deep water quayage, and the Hughes dry dock, which is said to be the second largest graving dock in the world and able to accomodate the largest ship afloat. The combined works are estimated to have cost more than $30,000,000.

MANUS POSTERITATIS.

When I can feel this little hand of thine
Nestling beneath mine own, my mother-heart
Rebukes itself: How can I be alarmed?
How dare I fear? 'Tis such a little hand,
All rough with play! Years upon years must pass
Ere thou art grown; and, with God's help and mine,
Before thy hand doth equal mine in size
We shall have buckled on impregnable
And shining armour; and this hand shall wield
The broadsword of high virtue with such might
That not a caitiff tempter of them all
But shall be vanquished in the fray; and yet—
I am thy mother, and this heart that shakes
With fear for what the future holds, is but
That heart that swelled with anguish and with pride
When thou wert given first to me. I know
How good a thing is knowledge; and how right
It is that man shall try his strength alone
And take his chance against the foes that press;
But ah! I'd shield thee if I could—would give
My very life itself if it would serve
Dear little hand, when thou art twice this size
Wilt thou still fold thy mate in prayer should she
Who kneels here now have passed away and gone?
Keep thyself clean, for in thy hollowed palm
Rests, oh, my son thy mother's anxious heart.
—Caroline Russell Bispham.

CLEGG'S FURNITURE SALE

At this season of the year there are few housekeeprs that do not feel the need of some piece of furniture. There is always room for another rocker, or couch, or dresser, and there are some nooks that seem just made for a little dainty parlour table, and the hall without a hat-rack looks bare. Clegg's sale of Spring furniture, which is advertised in another page of this issue, seems to fit in with all these wants. The elegant and new pieces of furniture just opened out this Spring will be an extra attraction to buyers; but the prices, which will enable you to save 25 per cent. on each article, affords an opportunity rarely found in the furniture line, for new goods. There will be chances to buy unique things at unusual prices. Read the ad. elsewhere. It's a Housekeeper's harvest.

TURBULL'S

PETERBOROUGH FAIR DIRECTORS ARRANGE FOR AMUSEMENT WEEK

The Peterborough Industrial Exhibition has arranged for the visit to Peterborough for a week of Leon W. Washburn's Mighty Midway Shows.

The committee in charge of the arrangements for the carnival, which will cause the major population of this district to flock to Peterborough during the week commencing July 6th—11th, inclusive, has just received from Victor D. Levitt, the general agent of the Leon W. Washburn's Mighty Midway Shows, a list of the attractions that are to be the centre points of interest during that big occasion.

A glittering array of handsomely decorated, hand carved fronts to the various amusement enterprises, their burnished gold filagree work reflecting the rays of the sun by day and glittering with myriad multi-coloured electric lights at night, will form a picture resembling a childhood dream of fairyland. Sensational free acts, concerts by Ladies' Military Band, riding the monster elephant Gyp, and visiting the various concessions along the Midway, will keep the multitude busy for many an hour, while the list of amusement enterprises is one of the greatest ever gathered under one management.

First and foremost of these will be the great Leon W. Washburn's Trained Animal Arena with unsurpassed collection of the denizens of forest and jungle. No expense has been spared by Col. Washburn to make his animal show the peer of any, now before the public.

The second exhibition with the thrill and the punch is the Motordrome, the latest sensation of the big cities. The portable equipment that will be seen in Peterborough, is a replica on a reduced scale, of the great Motordrome at Brighton Beach, New York City, where the world's championship contests attract thousands of spectators nightly to see the dauntless riders defy death in their fight for fame, honour and glory.

Then comes Oklahoma Bill's Wild West and Indian Congress, with its cowboys, Indians, lassoo busters and girls of the plains, giving a thrilling exhibition of the sports and pastimes of the Far West.

A Trip to the Moon, a journey replete with amazing surprises and many laughable incidents, has been developed out of that weird creation of Jules Verne's fancy, and a Dog, Pony and Monkey Circus with its Lilliputian animal performers, will be on hand to give joy to the little folk. Tanagura, the greatest of all sensational illusions, the latest novelty imported from Paris. An exact working model of the Panama Canal, showing the locks in action and a big Seven in One Show, fill in another season of the great "Fay Stewak."

Add to these a Barrel of Fun, which includes the wonderful Crystal Maze and a collection of other devices, gathered together for laughing purposes only; the Beautiful Diving Girls, giving a wonderful exhibition of aquatic sports; the Happy Family of Fat Children; the Athletic Show, with its boxing and wrestling and feats of strength; the Shadow of the Cross, a beautiful painting that will appeal to every intelligent person, the Small Animal Show, with its specimens of all descriptions from both Americas, and a wonderful exhibition of reptiles from all over the world, entitled Snake Land, and the roster of inside exhibitions is complete.

The amusement features do not end here, however, as a magnificent Merry Go Round, [illegible]an Waye and an Eli Ferris Wheel will be on the grounds. And then there are the Free Acts. To say that these are sensational, is a mild description, as one of them is Miss Elma Meier, champion lady high diver of the world, who from the top of a hundred foot ladder, plunges into a shallow tank of water only 5 feet deep. The other is Mlle. Morak in the thrilling Automobile Act, known as "The Swing of Death," during which the machine turns two complete somersaults before the daring rider glides to safety.

MARCONI HAS SOLVED WIRELESS 'PHONE PROBLEM

Special Cable to The Examiner:

ROME, March 20—Signor Guiglielmo Marconi, who has been conducting experiments with wireless telephony in this vicinity, has gone to London. The naval officers who assisted him in his experiments are convinced that he has completely solved the question of radio-telephony. They say that Signor Marconi in his experiments did not use any special apparatus. The existing aerographic installation served his purpose with slight modifications. One of these was a new receiver of his own invention, including a microphone, which is essentially different from all others.

Signor Marconi's improved high-sounding receiver, with a dictaphone arrangement, which has now been adopted in radio-telegraphy, can be employed in wireless telephony to such an extent that the human voice can be clearly heard by everybody present in addition to the operator. Communication was maintained with the slightest energy day and night with ships 45 miles away and 15 miles apart. In spite of the intervening loud sounds, whatever is said is invariably clear. Distance, instead of diminishing, increases this clearness.

Atmospheric perturbations affect aerophony considerably less than aerographs, and hence if the energy is sufficiently increased wireless telephony is possible at any distance. Signor Marconi has confided to his friends here that he will shortly aeroplane across the Atlantic.

ANOTHER VICTIM

Special Wire to The Examiner:

TORONTO, March 20.—The body of a man about two hundred pounds, was found in the ruins of the Woodbine Hotel fire this morning. This could not be Levanson, who was a small man, and this leads to the belief that the victims of the fire may reach six or seven. "In fact," said Manager Speers, as the body was taken out, "I should not be surprised if there are a dozen or more bodies found there yet. There were a number of people in the corridors at the time who were not registered."

RAILWAY NOTES

Exceptional opportunities are now being offered by the Grand Trunk Railway System in connection with Homeseekers, Settlers and Colonist excursions.

Homeseekers' round trip tickets are issued from stations in Canada to points in Manitoba, Alberta and Saskatchewan, at very low fares, and are in effect each Tuesday until October 27th, inclusive, via Chicago, St. Paul or Duluth. Tickets will also be on sale on certain dates via Sarnia and Northern Navigation Company. Through Pullman Tourist Sleeping Cars are operated to Winnipeg each Tuesday, leaving Toronto 11.00 p.m. No change of cars. Tickets are valid returning two months from date of issue. Settlers' one-way second-class tickets are also on sale each Tuesday during March and April from stations in Ontario, Kingston, Renfrew and west to points in Alberta and Saskatchewan, at low fares.

Colonist one-way second-class tickets are sold at very low fares from stations in Ontario to certain points in Alberta, British Columbia, Arizona, California, Colorado, Idaho, Montana, Nevada, Oregon, Texas, Utah and Washington, and are in effect daily until April 15, inclusive.

The Grand Trunk Pacific Railway is the shortest and quickest route between Winnipeg-Saskatoon-Edmonton, with smooth roadbed, electric lighted sleeping cars, through the newest, most picturesque and most rapidly developing section of Western Canada.

Through tickets sold and reservations made by all Grand Trunk Agents. Costs no more than by other routes. Trains now in operation, Winnipeg to Saskatoon, Edmonton, and Regina, Yorkton and Canora, Sask.; Camrose, Mirror Edson and Calgary, Alberta; also to Jasper, Tete Jaune and Prince George, B.C. Full particulars at all Grand Trunk Ticket Offices or write C. E. Horning, District Passenger Agent, Union Station, Toronto, Ont.

The News Bureau in connection with the Publicity Department of the Grand Trunk System, under the direction of Mr. H. B. Charlton, has been augmented by the appointment of Mr. Walter S. Thompson as Chief Literary Writer. The developments that are taking place in Canada through the building of the Grand Trunk Pacific are important and items of human interest with news value are sent out daily from the railway news bureau to newspapers not only in Canada but the United States and Europe. This necessitates an organized staff in connection with the publicity work of the Transcontinental railway and Mr. Thompson has been chosen on account of his capabilities to a position in this branch of the work.

Mr. Thompson is a journalist of wide experience. He began his career as a reporter on the St. James Gazette, a London evening newspaper notable for its literary standard. Later he joined the C. A. Pearson organization of newspapers, first acting as a sub-editor on the Evening Standard and afterwards engaging in special work for the "Standard" and "Daily Express" in London. Later he was associated with the Harmsworth regime, under Mr. J. L. Garvin on the "Observer."

In 1908 he left London for the antipodes, being engaged on the "New Zealand Herald," in Auckland, and later as a free lance in Melbourne and Sydney, Australia. From Sydney he came to Canada and two years ago joined the staff of the "Daily Witness." Soon after the "Daily Telegraph" was inaugurated and he was appointed City Editor of that paper. Latterly he has been City Editor of the "Montreal Herald and Daily Telegraph."

HON. BOB INDIGNANT AT ELECTORAL IMPROPRIETY

But Mr. Knowles Recalled Ministers' Profuse Promises

OTTAWA, March 19.—Hon "Bob" Rogers throbbed with earnestness, his voice trembled with indignation. With hand upraised he stood in his place in Parliament to-night. His eyes were lifted to heaven. He exhorted pleaded, anathematized, extolled, and the Liberal phalanx on the other side spoiled the effect with ruthless laughter. For Hon. "Bob" was denouncing electoral improprieties in general, and "strong-arm" methods in particular. And a sophisticated House seemed to enjoy it immensely.

"Under the terrible conditions which prevail in Saskatchewan under the present Provincial Government," wailed the Hon. "Bob," "they have in that Province neither law nor justice in any form whatever in any respect." Hon. "Bob" in quote verbatim, his reiterations being no doubt due to righteous indignation at human depravity in electioneering.

Three Homestead Inspectors operating under Hon. "Bob" in the days when he was Minister of the Interior, had been arrested under orders of the Attorney-General of Saskatchewan for intimidating voters by informing them that they would not get the patents for their homesteads unless they voted Conservative. Two of them had subsequently been acquitted, and the third was only fined $50. Their arrest moved the Hon. "Bob" to the verge of tears, and his righteous anger burned and blazed.

Mr. W. E. Knowles did something to put it on fire. He characterized the memorandum which the Minister had read the House as "drivel" and "twaddle" and "rubbish." He said that Hon. "Bob's" facts were all wrong. He also reminded the Hon. "Bob" that he came to Regina shortly before the Provincial elections and made some pre-election promises, so much so that when he was leaving Regina station on his return journey it was recorded that one enthusiast had cried out impetuously: "Now if there is any man, woman, or child who can think of anything Bob Rogers hasn't yet promised let him speak up now or forever after hold his peace."

Hon. "Bob" took Mr. Knowles' broadside sitting down. It seemed to cool him off.

MAY LOSE SAVINGS

NEW YORK, March 18.—That the 15,000 men and women who put their savings into Henry Siegel's 4 1-2 per cent. private bank will never get a penny of their $8,750,000 back, was the declaration made today by those who know the true condition of affairs in the various business enterprises of Siegel and his partner, Frank E. Vogel. Bankruptcy proceedings lasting four or five years, and involving all sorts of complications, and costly litigation, would swallow up every cent of the money realized from the sale of the stock of the stores, it was said, and in the end the only one who would be repaid for their trouble would be the lawyers in the case.

All efforts to forestall bankruptcy proceedings seem to have failed. Siegel's store in Boston is already in bankruptcy, and it is almost certain tha the Fourteenth Street and Simpson-Crawford stores in this city will soon follow suit, while there is also every reason to believe that the Uniter States District Court will grant the bankruptcy petition sought in the case of Seigel's bank. In other words there will be four separate bankruptcy proceedings, out of which innumerable complications are bound to arise to keep lawyers, creditors, depositors, courts, special masters, and what not busy for four or five years.

Siegel himself announced to-day that the $450,000 which had originally been offered as "cash balm" to depositors, was now to be set aside as a defence fund in fighting the indictments against himself and Vogel. He said the depositors had had their chance and lost it, by rejecting the first offer of about thirty cents on the dollar with his and Vogel's notes for the remainder.

STILL CURLING AT CHARLOTTE ST. RINK

There was good ice at the Curling Rink last night and the members arranged a new form of schedule to give it a try out with the possibility that it may be used next winter. There is nothing for publication on the matter at present. The games under this system will be continued this evening at 7.30 and 9.30. The rink closed last year on March 19. Recalling some of the closing dates Mr. McIntosh stated that out of twenty years the closing day for fifteen of those years had been March 22nd. The earliest closing day was March 7th, and the latest was one season when it ran along to March 22.

BASEBALL

LONDON, March 19. — Manager Reisling, of the London club, has received an application from a youngster, 20 years of age, who played in the Tri-State league last season and batted .286 and fielded .970 in the outfield. This lad weighs 180 pounds and is about 5 feet 11 inches in height. He is anxious to come to London and play under Reisling. The Tri-State league is a Class B organization and this boy must have been a good one to make such a record. He claims he can be easily secured from the club he is now with in the Tri-State and he is sure he will make good on the London club. All he asks is a fair trial. The name of the player will not be given out for a few days, as an effort will likely be made by the London club to get him.

Earl (Oskee) Neal, the former London club outfielder, who was drafted by Toledo last season, has signed a contract with that club, and is in training with it at Americus, Ga. He is getting along fine and stands a good chance for a steady place. The Toledo team will play in Cleveland this year, and will be known as the Cleveland A.A. team.

Fred Bramble, who was drafted by Fort Wayne from the Berlin club last fall, has been suspended by the former club. Bramble refused to sign a contract until given a better salary, and when March 1 rolled around he was automatically put under suspension according to minor league rules.

Roy Whitcraft, then hortstop Manager Reisling secured a week or so ago for the London club, has not yet sent his contract in. His terms have been accepted, however, and his signature will be in any day now.

DAIRYING IS NOW A SYSTEM

DAIRYING of late years has been reduced to a very perfect system with its dairy schools, inspectors, instructors and the rest.

The gospel it brings to farmers will cause them more labor and expense, for which it is said they will be more than repaid. In a word, it is this: Produce better milk and grade up the herd! To me much of the expert advice farmers are receiving recalls the tourist who slipped over a precipice while ascending the Alps, but grasped a shrub, to which he clung for life until his cries brought help—a physician. To his professional eye, the tourist seemed feverish and excited, so he wanted to feel his pulse, see his tongue and then prescribe. We may be sure the tourist insisted on first getting his feet on solid ground. So farmers will welcome professional advice when their footing is more sure.

WHAT IS MISSING

The advice our instructors give is eminently sane, but since it has met with only a feeble response and since it has been accompanied by a large annual decrease in cheese exported, there must be something lacking. I fancy if cheese could be sold on its merits, the quality of the milk would take care of itself. As for grading up the herd Mr. McDonald's critics have not made the profit very apparent.

Strange it has never been thought that the wholesale price of cheese is too low, when on the one hand it is worth twice its present price, comparing it as to food value with meats. On the other hand, there isn't a herd in the country can show a profit, all expenses considered, with milk at cheese factory prices. It is only good business tactics for a breeder of high-class cattle to show as much profit as possible, but if any dairy cow pays then the value of her milk alone should equal the expense of getting it.

CONSIDER CHEESE FACTORY PRICES

Cheese factory values should be given to milk as that is what we nearly all get. The value of the calves should not be reckoned as when we all have high-class cows their calves will bring only ordinary prices, corresponding nearly to the cost of raising them. Neither should the manure be valued as that only prevents a loss on the value of the land which dairying would otherwise produce. The following figures then will indicate the true profits of the "progressive farmer" for 10 cows in ten years, which is about the length of time a cow would be useful for dairying:

Interest on $1,500, barn and silo, 6% for 10 years	$ 900
Depreciation in value of barn for 10 years	180
Food, 10 cows, $70.40 a cow, for 10 years	7,040
Labor milking, feeding and caring, 12,000 hours, at 20c.	2,000
Allowance for sickness decrease	200
Total	$12,120
9,000 lbs. milk each for 10 years at one cent a lb.	9,000
Loss	$ 4,120

As I have intimated, progressive dairymen may be making a good profit selling young stock. This, however, will be at the expense eventually of other farmers, and when we all have high-producing cows this source of profit will cease, and we only find ourselves out of one rut and into another one. If it is a fair question, is milk not too cheap at a cent a pound? As for the hired help problem it will never be solved until you place a good value on your own labor and get it.

—Farm and Dairy.

'TWAS DIFFERENT THEN.

The conversation turned to physical prowess, whereupon Senator Thomas J. Walsh, of Montana, was reminded of how a party named Brown squeezed out of a tight place.

Brown, who was the owner of a fine farm, was showing a visitor over the estate one day, and proudly telling of the greatness of his ancestors. Finally they rambled down along the bank of the river.

"There is a story in our family," boastfully remarked Brown, "that my great-grandfather, who was a large and powerful man, used to stand right here and throw a silver dollar to opposite sides of the river."

"Impossible!" exclaimed the visitor with an expression of incredulity. "The distance is almost a mile. Nobody on earth could throw a silver dollar that far."

"So it may seem to you, my dear sir," was the glib rejoinder of Brown, "but you must remember that a dollar would go a whole lot farther in my grandfather's time than it will now."

The first underground railroad in Japan will be built between a new post office and the principal railroad station in Tokio.

IN THE WORLD OF SPORT

TORONTOS CAPTURE THE STANLEY CUP

TORONTO, March 20. — Paying more attention to the man has been seen here in any game this season, Toronto earned the right as world champions when they defeated Victoria by the score of 2 to 1. The game was a marked contrast to the previous ones, as the players mixed it up continually, and there was hardly a dull moment during the evening. Slashes, cross checks, stiff body checks and everything else on the man was furnished at some time or other, then to a regular Donnybrook in the last period, when Davidson and Genge, two cousins by the way, dropped their sticks and started pummeling each other, the local boy ending it by throwing the big visitor on the ice. McGiffin, who was on the bench at the time, jumped into the fray also.

It was easily seen from the start that the players were out for blood, with big Genge being the subject of attack every time he started down the ice. The latter is said not to possess the most courage in the world, but after last night's showing this fact should be dispelled. Poulin, the man from the Coast, was right in his element, his efforts being confined to slashing a player over the hand with the stick, or rapping him on the ankles from behind. Once Cameron swung around and beaned him with his stick, but the Western player only shook his head and went right on playing.

Had the teams furnished the stirring battle on the first night, in place of the last, the Arena would not have been able to hold the spectators last night. As it was 4,739 paid admissions, and that the large crowd enjoyed the Donnybrook goes without saying. It was not a place for a man with a weak heart, as it was one continual round of excitement, the like of which is only equalled by the second game with Ottawa here this year.

TWO GOOD BASKETBALL GAMES TO-MORROW

There will be two interesting basketball games in the Y.M.C.A. gymnasium to-morrow night when the City Basketball League will open. The curtain-raiser will commence at 7:30 o'clock, when the fast Trinity College School team of Port Hope will clash with the local Collegiate Institute team. This should be a lively battle as there is keen rivalry btween the two teams. The opening gam in the City League will follow with the Senior Leaders playing the Peterborough Athletic Club's quintette. The basketball team has the distinction of being the first Athletic Club team to get into action. They had a good workout last evening and will be represented in to-morrow's game by the following: Walter Flowers, Alex. Darling, Claude, Bartlett, Harold Long and Roy Smyth.

CANADIAN LEAGUE NOTES

(From the Ottawa Free Press.)

Hamilton Rubberneck—"If Connie Mack sends the battery he has promised Dr. Yates together with that .400 hitting third-baseman, Hamilton will sure have some ball club. No names are mentioned, but said third-sacker is a second cousin of Frank Baker and should be one awful fence buster."

Brantford Depositor — "President Tom Nelson ain't saying a word. Last spring he said the Red Sox would win the pennant and they lost fifteen straight. Tom will try the other hunch this season."

St. Thomas Bugle—"Midge Craven has just returned from a trip along the Lake Huron coast and has landed an Indian who can play any position but manager. All the big league scouts have been overlooking this guy for two years."

London Free Pest—"Dr. Reisling sends word from his dentistry at Swamproot, Ohio, he has secured the contract of Luke McClooke who hit .1492 in the Corn Beef and Cabbage League last season. The whole team is of Class A.A calibre now and there is nothing to it but the old peanut for Sam Steveley's mob."

Peterboro Exterminator — "Word comes from baseball headquarters the Petes' uniforms this year will include pink ankle supports and the club owners will sport duck pants. The hitching post off first base will be painted white instead of yellow, as horses in the past have mistaken them for seed turnips. First place sure."

Toronto Earth—"Jay Jay McCaffery has turned Tim Jordan, Bill O'Hara and Amby McConnell over to his Canadian League Club. Jay Jay will build a new park, corner Yonge and King streets."

Erie Message—"President O'Neill says he has the pennant copped if he can pull a trade in which Jack Fryer goes to Boston for Tris Speaker."

Guelph Cyanide of Potassium—"For sale. Set of blue jeans. Been in use but three years. Apply W. A. Mahoney."

In their wild scramble for baseball talent, which, we are told by their chief bank roll holders, has not yet finished, the new league may have overlooked one very important point, says Sporting News. Where are they going to farm the recruits who fail to make good?

They should have places for these youngsters, just as the majors do, but they haven't. If they carry them it will mean shouldering another big expense. If they turn them loose, Mr. Recruit is going to find himself out in the cold, hunting for a job pitching hay or squirting soda, because he is barred by the "organization."

Every big league manager of experience will tell you that it is very essential that each club own a farm in a minor league, in which can be planted the green ones for ripening. The Federals no doubt figure on some day being taken into the "organization," but until then this problem of a farm for the overflow is a perplexing one.

There is absolutely no doubt but that the Federal League could do nicely with a minor league in tow, adds the Hamilton Spectator, and there is little doubt but that the opportunity is right here for the Canadian League to link up with the Federal League. Some may scoff at the story that President Fitzgerald intimated that unless class rating was granted the Canadian League a jump to the Federal ranks would be considered, but those in attendance at thel ast Canadian League meeting know full well that the league president made the statement and that he was not in a joking mood when he said it, rather was it made in the course of his report on the reception given the application for class B rating. President Fitzgerald is not a practical joker rather is he of a serious turn of mind, and when he made the statement that he would favour negotiations being opened with the Feds in case the National Association refused to reconsider the application of the league for higher classification he was in grim earnest.

The Canadian League demands fair play from the National Association. Secretary Farrell, in his dual capacity of secretary of the National Association, and secretary of the New York State League, a class B organization, should remember this. It may be true that the New York State League does not desire to see another class B league in this part of the country.

Toronto Globe—While there is no immediate likelihood of the Canadian League jumping to the Federals, according to President Fitzgerald, the press throughout the circuit expresses the opinion that such a course might be advisable should the league meet with a second rebuff in its application for class B rating.

The National Association, apparently without making other than the most superficial inquiries, turned the Canadian League down flatly. The claim of the league to higher classification is valid and cannot be questioned. President Fitzgerald will appeal to the National commission. The appeal is not without prospect of success. Should the Fitzgerald circuit, the most prosperous of all class C leagues, and the superior to others which have been given B rating, be again denied that which is unquestionably its due, the Federal League affiliation will doubtless receive serious consideration by the club owners.

If the newspapers of the Canadian League truly reflect the sentiments of the owners the National commission will consult its own interests by reversing the totally unjust decision of the National Association.

Toronto Star — The Canadian League would be welcomed with open arms by the Federal League. Therefore, it behooves Secretary Farrell and his associates of the National Baseball commission to heed the just and fair demand of this organization for class B classification. It is only their rights, according to population, that the Canadian Leaguers claim, but Mr. Farrell insists on figures from a federal census (not to be taken again until 1921), instead of from a municipal census.

The Canadian League has a sure-enough grievance, and unless Mr. Farrell is another Charles Webb Murphy he will promptly see that it is remedied and the league given its proper standing in organized ball.

CAVAN BASEBALLERS ORGANIZE

On Wednesday of last week a meeting of the baseball enthusiasts of Cavan was held in J. R. Newton's shop, when the following officers were elected. Mr. John Cathcart being in the chair:

Ottawas Have Leased Park For 2 Years

OTTAWA, Bareh 19.—Baseball will evidently hold full sway at Ottawa during the coming summer. Two years ago when the promoters of the Ottawa club made a start they were met with a cold stare because baseball had been a loser hereabouts in the past. They had to fight for their share of dates at Lansdowne Park, as professional lacrosse had a grip a monopoly of the public interest. Last year professional soccer had to be considered in the allotment of the permits for the only suitable athletic field in the capital. This year there will be neither professional lacrosse nor soccer at Lansdowne Park.

The Ottawas signed their lease for the grounds to-day, and were given their choice of any date between the beginning of Summer and Exhibition week. It would thus seem that baseball had out-distances its competitors There was talk of Ottawa being represented in the Dominion Lacrosse Association, but the idea did not meet with favour here, and has been abandoned. The majority of the professional soccer stars have applied for reinstatement, and will figure in the City Amateur League. Though disqualified last summer, they did not receive money for their services.

Pitcher Joe McManus, who led the Canadian League pitchers in 1912, and who was drafted by the Cincinnati Reds, may come back to the Senators He was sent from Cincinnati to Nashville last spring, and is now the property of the Ottawa club. Two years ago he established a Canadian League record, winning fourteen straight games for Ottawa and cinching the pennant.

Stock Markets

Market Opinion.

A creeping upward movement for a time is considered by good authority as highly probable in the stock market. This out look is expected on account of the sold out state of the general list, the fine crop reports and the tendency of the better class of securities to ignore bad news. The receipt of favourable developments it is believed in manipulative quarters, would elicit a response from the general market of quite a vigorous character. In the meantime a bull trading position is suggested by higher conservative parties, who declare that the underlying condit ions are strong for constructive operations. Buying of Reading continues good. Union Pacific Great Northern and Louisville and Nashvilel are being well taken.

The sentiment on steel and copper stocks is favourable and these and other industrial specialties will find a good following upon any bullish operations. Central leather is destined for much higher levels according to gossip. The Rock Island issues meet liquidation on any rallies. All grain stocks are now taken on recessions. M. O. P. arranges to pay twenty-five million notes due June 1st. New Haven directors authorize note issue of $2,400,000.

12 industrial stocks advanced about 1-4 of a point.

12 railroad stocks advanced about 1-8 of a point.

American stocks in London, weak. Union Pacific is being bought for London account.

"THE MAYOR'S WIFE"

By ANNA KATHARINE GREEN

CHAPTER VI.

AT THE STAIR-HEAD.

I spent the evening alone. Mrs. Packard went to the theatre with friends and Mayor Packard attended a conference of politicians. I felt my loneliness, but busied myself trying to sift the impressions made upon me by the different members of the household.

It consisted, so far as my present observation went, of seven persons, the three principals and four servants. Of the servants I had seen three, the old butler, the nurse, and the housemaid, Ellen. I now liked Ellen; she appeared equally alive and trustworthy; of the butler I could not say as much. He struck me as secretive. Also, he had begun to manifest a certain antagonism to myself. Whence sprang this antagonism? Did it have its source in my temperament, or in his? A question possibly not worth answering and yet it very well might be. Who could know?

Pondering this and other subjects, I remained in my cozy little up-stairs til the clock verging on to twelve told me that it was nearly time for Mrs. Packard's return.

Hardly knowing my duties as yet, or what she might expect of me, I kept my door open, meaning to speak to her when she came in. The thought had crossed my mind that she might not return at all, but remain away with her friends. Some fear of this kind had been in Mr. Packard's mind and naturally found lodgment in mine. I was therefore much relieved when, sharp on the stroke of midnight, I heard the front door-bell ring, followed by the sound of her voice speaking to the old butler. I thought its tone more cheerful than before she went out. At all events, her face had a natural look when, after a few minutes' delay, she came upstairs and stepped into the nursery—a room on the same floor as mine, but nearer the stair-head.

From what impulse did I put out my light? I think now, on looking back, that I hoped to catch a better glimpse of her face when she came out again, an idea be in a position to judge whether her anxiety or secret distress was in any special way connected with her child. But I forgot the child and any motive of this kind which I may have had; for when Mrs. Packard did re-appear in the hall, there rang up from some place below a laugh, so loud and derisive and of so raucous and threatening a tone that Mrs. Packard reeled with the shock and I myself was surprised in spite of my pride and usual impassibility.

This, had it been all, would not be worth the comment. But it was not all. Mrs. Packard did not recover from the shock as I expected her to, or fine figure straightened itself, it is true, but only to sink again lower and lower, til she clung crouching to the stir-rail at which she had caught for support, while her eyes turning slowly in her head, moved till they met mine with that unseeing and glassy stare which speaks of a soul-piercing terror—not fear in any ordinary sense, but terror which lays bae the soul and allows one to see into depths which—

But here my companion drove me to action. Advancing quietly, I caught at her wrap which was falling from her shoulders. She grasped my hand as I did so.

"Did you hear that laugh" she panted. "Whose was it? Who is down-stairs?"

I thought, "I this one of the unaccountable occurrences which have given the house its blighted reputation?" but I said:

"Nixon let you in. I don't know whether any one else is below. Mayor Packard has not yet come home."

"I know; Nixon told me. Would you—would you mind,"—how hard she strove to show only the indignant curiosity natural to the situation —"do you object, I mean, to going down and seeing?"

"Not at all," I cheerfully answered, glad enough of this chance to settle my own doubts. And with a glance at her face, which was far too white and drawn to please me, I hastened below.

The lights had not yet been put out in the halls, though I saw none in the drawing room or library. Indeed, I ran upon Nixon coming from the library, where he had evidently been attending to his final duties of fastening windows and extinguishing lights. Alive to the advantage of this opportune meeting, I addressed him with as little aggressiveness as possible.

"Mrs. Packard has sent me down to see who laughed just now so loudly. Was it you?"

Strong and unmistakable dislike showed in his eyes, but his voice was restrained and apparently respectful as he replied:

"No, Miss. I didn't laugh. There was nothing to laugh at."

"You heard the laugh. It seemed to come from somewhere here. I was on the third floor and I heard it plainly."

His face twitched—a habit of his when under excitement, as I have since learned—as with a shrug of his shoulders he curtly answered:

"You were listening; I was not. If any one laughed down there I didn't hear 'em."

Confident that he was lying, I turned quietly away and proceeded down the hall toward Mayor Packard's study.

"I wish to speak to the mayor," I explained.

"He's not there." The man had eagerly followed me. "He's not come home yet, Miss."

"But the gas is burning brightly inside and the door ajar. Some one is there."

"It is Mr. Steele. He came an hour ago. He often works here till after midnight."

I had heard what I wanted to know, but, being by this time at the very threshold, I could not forbear giving the door a slight push, so as to catch at least a momentary glimpse of the man he spoke of.

He was sitting at his post, and as he neither looked up nor stirred at my intrusion, I had an excellent opportunity for observing again the clear-cut profile which had roused my admiration the day before.

Certainly, seen as I saw it now, in the concentrated glow of a lamp shaded from every other corner of the room, it was a face well worth looking at. Seldom, perhaps never, had I beheld one cast in a more faultless mould. Smooth-shaven, with every harmonious line open to view, is struck the eye with the force and beauty of a cameo; masculine strength and feminine grace equally expressed in the expansive forehead and the perfectly modeled features. Its effect upon the observer was instantaneous, but the heart was not warmed nor the imagination awakened by it. In spite of the perfection of the features, or possibly because of this perfection, the whole countenance had a cold look, as cold as the sculpture it suggested; and, though incomparable as pure physical attraction, it lacked the indefinable something which gives life and meaning to such faces as Mayor Packard's, for instance. Yet it was not devoid of expression, nor did it fail to possess a meaning of its own. Indeed, it was the meaning in it which held my attention. Abstracted as the man appeared to be, even at the point of not perceiving my intruding figure in the open doorway, the thoughts which held him were not common thoughts, nor were they such as can be easily read, even by an accustomed eye. Having noted this, I softly withdrew, not finding any excuse for breaking in upon a man so occupied.

The butler stood awaiting me not three feet away from the door. But taking a lesson from the gentleman I had just left, and, tripping lightly upstairs, I found Mrs. Packard awaiting me at the head of the first flight instead of the second.

Her fears, or whatever it was which moved her had not diminished in my absence. She stood erect, but it was by the help of her grasp on the balustrade; and though her diamonds shone and her whole appearance in her dinner-dress was almost regal, there was mortal apprehension in her eye and a passion of inquiry in her whole attitude which I was glad her husband was not there to see.

I made haste to answer that inquiry by immediately observing:

"I saw Nixon. He was just coming out of the library. He says that he heard no laugh. The only other person I came upon down-stairs was Mr. Steele. He was busy over some papers and I did not like to interrupt him; but he did not look as if a laugh of any sort had come from him."

"Thank you."

The words were hoarsely uttered and the tone unnatural, though she tried to carry it off with an indifferent gesture and a quick movement toward her room. I admired her self-control, for it was self-control, and was contrasting the statliness of her present bearing with the cringing attitude of a few minutes before —when, without warning or any premonitary sound, all that beauty and pride and splendour collapsed before my eyes, and she fell at my feet, senseless.

CHAPTER VII.

A MOVING SHADOW.

I beat to lift the prostrate form of the unhappy woman who had been placed in my care. As I did so I heard something like a snarl over my shoulder, and, turning, saw Nixon stretching eager arms toward his mistress, whose fall he had doubtless heard.

"Let el lef me" he cried, his old form trembling almost to the point of incapacity.

"We will lift her together," I rejoined; and though his eyes sparkled irefully, he accepted my help and together we carried her into her own room and laid her on a lounge.

I have had some training as a nurse and, perceiving that Mrs. Packard had simply fainted, I was not at all alarmed, but simply made an effort to restore her with a calmness that for some reason greatly irritated the old man.

"Shall I call Ellen? Shall I call Letty?" he kept crying, shifting from one foot to another in a frightened and fussy way that exasperated me almost beyond endurance. "She doesn't breathe; she is white, white! Oh, what will the mayor say? I will call Letty."

But I managed to keep him under control and finally succeeded in restoring Mrs. Packard—a double task demanding not a little self-control and discretion. When the flutter of her eyelids showed that she would soon be conscious, I pointed out these signs of life to my uneasy companion and hinted very broadly that the fewer people Mrs. Packard found about her on coming to herself, the better she would be pleased. His respect grew quite ferocious at this, and for a moment I almost feared him; but as I continued to urge the necessity of avoiding any fresh cause of agitation in one so weak, he gradually shrank back from my side where he had kept a jealous watch until now, and reluctantly withdrew into the hall.

Another moment and Mrs. Packard had started to rise; but, on seeing me and me only standing before her, she fell wearily back, crying in a subdued way, which nevertheless was very intense:

"Don't let him come in—see me—or know. I must be by myself; I must be! Don't you see that I am frightened?"

The words came out with such force I was startled. Leaning over her, with the natural sympathy her condition called for, I asked quietly but firmly:

"Whom do you mean by him There is only one person in the hall, and that is your butler."

"Hasn't Mr. Packard returned"

"No, Madam."

"But I thought I saw him looking at me."

Her eyes were wild, her body shaking with irrepressible agitation.

"You were mistaken. Mayor Packard has not yet come home."

NERVOUS PROSTRATION
Severe Case of a Philadelphia Woman—Her Symptoms.

Philadelphia, Pa.—"I had a severe case of nervous prostration, with palpitation of the heart, constipation, headaches, dizziness, noise in my ears, timid, nervous, restless feelings and sleeplessness.
"I read in the paper where a young woman had been cured of the same troubles by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound so I threw away the medicines the doctor left me and began taking the Compound. Before I had taken half a bottle I was able to sit up and in a short time I was able to do all my work. Your medicine has proved itself able to do all you say it will and I have recommended it in every household I have visited."—Mrs. MARY JOHNSTON, 210 Siegel Street, Philadelphia, Pa.
Another Bad Case.
Ephrata, Pa.—"About a year ago I was down with nervous prostration. I was pale and weak and would have hysteric spells, sick headaches and a bad pain under my shoulder-blade. I was under the care of different doctors but did not improve. I was so weak I could hardly stand long enough to do my dishes.
"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has made me well and happy and I have begun to gain in weight and my face looks healthy now."—Mrs. J. W. HORNBERGER, R. No. 2, Ephrata, Pa.

Heart and Nerves Were Bad.
Could Not Sleep.
To the thousands of people who toss on a sleepless pillow night after night, or who pass the bedroom floor with nerves on the jump, the heart action all wrong, and to whose eyes sleep will not come, Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills offer the blessing of sound refreshing slumber, as they restore the equilibrium of the deranged nerve centres and correct the wrong action of the heart.
Mrs. Charles Teal, Horncastle, Ont., writes:—"Just a few lines to let you know what Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills did for me. My heart and nerves were so bad I could not sleep, and the least noise or excitement would make me feel so that I used to think I was going to die, and I would tremble until I could hardly stand. I took doctor's medicine, but it did not do me much good. At last I tried Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and can certainly say they did me a great amount of good. I can recommend them to anyone who is suffering as I was."
Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills have been on the market for the past twenty years, and have done more to steady shaky nerves and strengthen weak hearts, than any other known preparation.
Price, 50 cents per box, or three boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Sixty-Six Per Cent.
According to the latest statistics the retail prices of the "principal articles of food" in forty cities advanced sixty-six per cent. in fourteen years. The price of
SHREDDED WHEAT
in all that time has remained the same, and it is just as strengthening and sustaining as it was fourteen years ago—a complete, perfect food, supplying more real, body-building nutriment than meat or eggs and costing much less. Your grocer sells it.
Always heat the Biscuit in oven to restore crispness. Two Shredded Wheat Biscuits with hot milk or cream will supply all the energy needed for a half day's work. Deliciously nourishing when eaten in combination with baked apples, stewed prunes, sliced bananas, canned or preserved fruits. Try toasted Triscuit, the Shredded Wheat wafer, for luncheon, with butter, cheese or marmalade.

REMOTE ORIGIN OF ALCOHOL.

No one knows when alcohol was first made. It is commonly taught that it was first distilled by the Arabians about the tenth century, but there is little doubt that they obtained the secret from Italian doctors, who had long been practising it. Paul Ritcher in the Berliner Klinische Wochenschrift shows that a knowledge of "aqua ardens," or "burning water," may be traced as far back as the second century A.D. to a Christian father named Hippolytus, who possessed a recipe analogous to those handed about during the middle ages.

WEDDING BELLS

WHITE—ROBINS

A quiet wedding was celebrated at the Baptist parsonage on the Chemong Road, Wednesday, March 18, when Miss Eliza Ann Robins, of Smith, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony, to Thomas R. White of Lakefield. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. R. J. McLaren.

Mr. and Mrs. White will reside in Lakefield.

OBITUARY

DEATH OF THOS. BANNON.

Thomas Bannon of Pontypool died on Monday of this week at the age of 70 years. He lived on the Fee farm two miles east of Pontypool for years and formerly in Cavan and South Monaghan. His wife who was a sister of the late Robert McKnight, predeceased him. Interment took place yesterday at Pontypool.

MRS. H. RICHARDS.

After an illness extending over some three years, Mrs. Harry Richards entered in rest on Saturday last. Her maiden name was Husk, and she was born in the Township of Cavan. Since her marriage she has lived in Millbrook, where she was respected for her kindly disposition and Christian character.

Two daughters and one son survive. The funeral took place on Monday to Gardiner's Cemetery, followed by a large number of friends.—Millbrook Reporter.

VIOLET MONCRIEF.

The death occurred yesterday in the Nichols Hospital of Miss Violet Moncrief, after an illness of only a few days.

This young lady was well known in Peterborough, where she won a host of friends, who will regret her demise. She was but 17 years of age.

Deceased leaves to mourn her loss, her father, and sister, Mrs. Norman Hutchinson, and brother, George, all of Saskatchewan; one brother, Bert, of Toronto; two sisters, Hannah, and Mrs. Albert McCare, of Cavan; one sister, Mrs. Gordon Innis, and brother, Albert, of 523 Patterson street, City.

The funeral will be held on Saturday afternoon at 2:30 from 573 Patterson street to the Little Lake cemetery.

DEATH OF MISS ANNIE CAMERON OF OTONABEE.

The death took place in Otonabee on Tuesday, the 17th inst., of Miss Annie Cameron, a highly respected resident. The late Miss Cameron had been in ill health for the past two years. She was a daughter of the late James Cameron, of Otonabee, and was born on the homestead, where her death occurred. She was a faithful and active member of the Presbyterian church at Westwood, and her demise will be much regretted by the numerous friends with whom she had met in the various associations of life.

She is survived by two sisters, Elizabeth at home, and Mrs. Wm. Weir, of Villiers. The funeral took place on Thursday from her late residence, lot 25, concession 1, Otonabee, to Cameron's Cemetery. Service was conducted by the Rev. T. M. Goodwill, pastor of Westwood and Keene Presbyterian Churches.

TO-MORROW IS ORANGE DAY IN CALIFORNIA

Now that the seventeenth of March is safely over Californians are releasing something which they have been holding in store for some time. The wearers of the green are to be shocked by an "orange day." As Californians will have it there will be nothing in evidence on Saturday, March 21st, save orange. For the purpose of furthering the exportation and the use of the orange, the great product of the State they have set aside this date as a "fete des oranges".

Various American railways are co-operating with the State officials of California and on these systems oranges will be the order of the day. The Canadian Pacific Railway has responded to a request made to one of the Executive heads by those in charge of the movement by stating that the day will be recognised over the Company's lines by the evidence of oranges in all the dining cars.

French chemists recently observed the centennial of the discovery of iodine by erecting a tablet on the birthplace of its discoverer.

WILL NOT REDUCE THE TAX RATE

Appropriations to the Local Hospitals Will Help to Swell the Expenditure

IS COMPULSORY

The reductions in the accounts, as presented by the two local hospitals, and relating to the care of indigent patients, will in no way depreciate the tax rate that must be struck in order to cover necessary expenditures. The accounts referred to concern indigent patients that were treated last year and the year previous. In addition to the liquidation of the old accounts, amounting to over two thousand dollars, new appropriations must be made to cover the cost of treating indigent patients for the current year. In the case of Nicholls Hospital this appropriation will approximate $3,000, and for St. Joseph's Hospital it will nearly equal, if not exceed, this amount. That will mean that a brand new appropriation of approximately $6,000, will have to be set aside to cover the cost of caring for indigent patients in the two local hospitals. This appropriation is compulsory and is provided for in the Ontario statutes. The civic authorities have no alternative in the matter.

OPENING UP A NEW COUNTRY IN BRITISH COLUMBIA

The opening up of the new territory traversed by the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway between McBride, B.C., 1135 miles west of Winnipeg, and Prince George, B.C., 1279 west of Winnipeg, in developing the important discovery that the district in that part of British Columbia is well timbered with spruce and much good cedar. The country is fairly level and the timber is probably the finest anywhere along the Fraser River. West of Willow River, an important town site, settlers have already established themselves and reports indicate that there is a large area suitable for settlers in the Salmon River country west of the Fraser River and reached through the townsite of Willow River. There are not more than two or three outcroppings of rock all the way from McBride to Prince George and when the timber is removed, the soil will be found very rich and highly productive, and this section will become a very important one in time. An estimate of the land available for agricultural purposes within four miles on each side of the railway would be approximately 75,000 acres, but this amount will be very much exceeded if the country continues similar for a further distance from the railway. This feature is eing developed as surveys are made. From a scenic point of view from McBride to Hansard, a distance of about 100 miles, the mountains are always in view, extending on both sides of the Fraser River with a pleasing softness to them, which resembles the Skeena River district to some extent. The Caribou Range, at about 1150 miles west of Winnipeg, gives promise of offering to the mountain climber and explorer as many attractions as any other Range in the Rockies or Selkirks. Many of these mountains are snow-clad and glaciers capped throughout the summer.

MONSTER DEPUTATION.

Representatives of Forty Municipalities Are Going to Ottawa.

Mr. J. W. Lyon, Guelph, secretary-treasurer of the Great Waterways Union of Canada, called on Controller Church and the city officials at the City Hall yesterday to complete arrangements for the monster deputation which is to go to Ottawa next Wednesday evening to urge upon the Government the need of an ocean waterway via St. Lawrence and Welland Canals to the Upper Lakes, also to ask the Government to grant the usual Dominion subsidies to projected Hydro-Electric railway lines.

Already representatives of over 40 municipalities have signified their intention of joining the deputation, and members of Boards of Trade in different cities, towns and villages in Ontario will also take in the trip. The Government has arranged to receive the deputation at 12 o'clock noon on the 26th inst.—Toronto Telegram.

This is the deputation Mayor Buller will likely join.

U. S. SENATE REJECTS EQUAL SUFFRAGE

WASHINGTON, March 19.—The Senate went on record to-day in favour of a constitutional amendment for equal suffrage. The vote was 36 to 34 in favour of the resolution, but as two-thirds were required to pass the resolution the Vice-President announced it had failed to carry.

This defeat is the hardest blow the equal suffrage advocates have received in their campaign to force Congress to act favourably on the equal suffrage question. Just before the final vote on the resolution test votes were taken on amendments, but were also defeated.

Sues Priest For Slander.

OTTAWA, March 21. — Action has been entered by Samuel Dalby, of Farrelltown, Que., against Rev. Father Auguste Chenier, parish priest of the same place, for $2,500 damages for alleged slanderous statements made by the latter. The statement of the claims sets forth that in an effort to have Dalby deposed from a committee on bridge building in the district the priest intimated that he knew secrets derogatory to Dalby that he was unable to divulge. An apology was demanded but Father Chenier refused to comply.

Government Scattering Forces Throughout Ulster

OFFICERS HAVE RESIGNED?

LONDON, March 21. — "War in Ulster" is the startling headline which the sensational London newspapers are displaying in the blackest type.

The Government began yesterday to dispose of its regular troops in Ireland so that they may be in a position to deal with any situation that arises. The cooler men among the loyalists and the Ulster Unionists, however, believe that nothing resembling war is yet in sight.

It is said that as a result of instructions sent by the War Office to the Curragh camp yesterday that officers who objected to serving in Ulster must resign or be dismissed from the army, one hundred officers tendered their resignations.

The Army Council some time ago considered the possibilities of Home Rule strife and instructed Lieut.-Gen. Sir Arthur Henry Fitzroy Paget, who commands the Irish garrisons, to take all necessary precautions to maintain order and safeguard property. A general redistribution of the forces in Ireland therefore was begun yesterday.

Two regiments were sent from the south to reinforce the Ulster garrisons, while the troops in Ulster were moved to new stations in conformity with the custom that, in the event of hostilities or rioting, soldiers should not be compelled to encounter people with whom they had formed friendships. In pursuance with the same rule some Irish recruits were sent from the Armagh recruiting station to England.

The possibilities of a collision between the British soldiers and the Ulster volunteers, resulting from the super-heated political feeling, are recognized, but the leaders on both sides are trying to exert a pacific influence. John Redmond, the Nationalist leader in Parliament, yesterday telegraphed the Nationalists in Belfast an urgent appeal to abandon a parade arranged for Sunday in Londonderry, which it was thought would likely result in rioting. Sir Edward Carson, the Ulster leader, and the members of the Ulster Council invoked calmness on the part of the volunteers.

Four Cabinet Ministers spoke at the Ulster situation at different meetings last night. John Burns, President of the Local Government Board, in an address on the occasion of the unveiling of his portrait in the National Liberal Club, said:

"Home Rule is a question mainly for Ireland itself. Three-fourths of the people there have demanded it persistently for years and we have no right to listen to the demand for more concessions or yield to clamor. We have no more desire to yield to lawless lawyers than to lawless laborers."

Thomas McKinnon Wood, Secretary of State for Scotland, said:

"We will carry Home Rule by agreement if we possibly can, but without it if we must."

Augustine Birrell, Chief Secretary for Ireland, in his speech, declared that the Government's proposals gave Ulster freedom from coercion for six years and that the scheme of Andrew Bonar Law, the leader of the Opposition in Parliament, meant immediate coercion if referendum went against Ulster.

Sir John Allsbrooke Simon, Attorney-General, said the Government proposed to go steadily on, adding "whatever happens we will see that law and order are unflinchingly observed in Ulster."

Armed With Carbines.

NEWBRIDGE, County Kildare, Ireland, March 21.—The Fourth Hussars and the Sixteenth Lancers at Curragh Camp are now armed with carbines instead of their usual lances and swords. Fifteen rounds of ammunition were issued to each man of the entire garrison Thursday night. Guards over the camp have been doubled and special patrols have been detailed at some distance outside the camp.

Ready For Active Service.

DUNDALK, Ireland, March 21.—Seven officers and 450 men of the Cornwall Regiment arrived here from Dublin last night and were quartered in the Royal Field Artillery barracks, there already was a force of eighteen officers and 500 men making preparations for active service.

Battalion Is Mobilized.

ARMAGH, Ireland, March 21.—A battalion of the Bedfordshire Regiment arrived here last night by special train from Mullingar. Armagh is the recruiting station for the Royal Irish Fusiliers, and a large batch of recruits who had not completed the usual course of training, were withdrawn from the station and sent to regimental headquarters at Folkstone, England.

Pickets are patrolling all roads, and only persons with passes are allowed inside the camp.

Put Wooden leg on Cow.

Dr. James M. I. Galloway, a young veterinary surgeon of Kirkintilloch, Scotland, has performed a most remarkable operation. A Holstein cow belonging to a friend broke its leg while climbing a hill. Dr. Galloway gave the cow an anaesthetic, and then amputated the injured member. A wooden leg was then designed and fitted to the cow and she now is perfectly well and contented.

GOW KILLS HIMSELF.

Hamilton Man Under Serious Charges Takes His Own Life.

HAMILTON, Ont., March 21.—James Gow, prominent business man, out on bail on a serious charge, committed suicide here yesterday afternoon by slashing his throat with a razor.

Gow shook like a leaf Thursday afternoon, being admitted to $2,000 bail. He rested uneasily Thursday night, and paced the hall yesterday like a man who had a tremendous load on his mind. He ate his dinner and then went back to the corridor, where he paced up and down. He suddenly turned into his room and then slashed his throat.

Gow was separated some time ago from his wife, who now resides in Buffalo. She sued for alimony and got an order.

It was stated on good authority here that when A. B. MacKay, now the remaining accused in the Gow-MacKay case, is brought for trial, the girl witnesses who testified at Thursday morning's police court hearing will not be called to give evidence again. The court stenographer's typewritten verbatim report of their testimony will be submitted as a substitute for their personal attendance. This would remove Crown Attorney Washington's objection to the press being admitted to the trial.

DOCTORS DISAPPROVE.

They Have Fresh Slighted In Compensation Measure.

TORONTO, March 21.—At a largely-attended meeting of the Academy of Medicine of Ontario, called to consider a report of a sub-committee appointed to deal with the workmen's compensation bill in so far as it affects the interests of the medical profession. Dr. Bruce L. Riordan, read the report. It dealt exhaustively with the various phases of the act as applicable to doctors and pointed out how the existing rights of the profession to have their services treated as part of the damages recoverable have been taken away, while no fund is provided out of which those who care for the injured are to be paid. It also bars medical men from ranking on the same awarded for compensation. Suggestions as to the proper remedy were made.

The recommendations made in the report were unanimously adopted, and a call sent out to the medical men of the province to appoint delegates to wait on the Government.

To Postpone Toll Debate.

WASHINGTON, March 21. — Consideration of the bill to repeal the toll exemption provision of the Panama Canal Act will not be undertaken by the Senate committee on interoceanic canals until late next week, despite efforts of Democratic Senators who favor the repeal to hurry action. This decision was reached late yesterday.

May Recall Missionaries.

NEW YORK, March 21.—The present conditions of unrest in Mexico may shortly result in the recall of missionaries, according to a statement given out yesterday by the board of foreign missions of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

BILL RUSHED THROUGH.

Ottawa's Plebiscite Measure Gets Rapid Handling.

TORONTO, March 21. — A quiet afternoon was spent in the Legislature yesterday. A host of little matters were advanced a stage, and several new bills introduced by members. The Toronto bill in its different sections was brought in by three city members, and first readings were granted. For the second time in the session a special Government bill was hurried through the three readings at one sitting and, became law at the sanction of Sir John Gibson, who appeared for a few moments. This measure provided for a special ballot to be used for a plebiscite on the water question in Ottawa, and both sides of the House concurred in treating it with expedition because of the local conditions prevailing in the capital city.

William Proudfoot (Centre Huron) brought in three bills for first reading. One of these provided for the creation of a divisional court of appeals to be composed of judges of the high court drawn from the county, division and district courts. The object is to reduce the work of the appellate court. Another bill aims at making all hawkers bear licenses before being allowed to work in the counties of the province.

One of the measures brought in again after a year's lapse was that of Dr. Forbes Godfrey (West York) which would by means of a medical operation tend to reduce the numbers of feeble-minded in Ontario. It was granted a first reading.

C. S. Cameron's bill to amend the Assessment Act making provision for the assessment of railway lands, wharves and docks received a second reading. Mr. Cameron explained that such property was now exempt, and it was the desire to have it assessed on account of the effect in determining the value of adjoining property.

Hon. Mr. Hanna explained the purport of Mr. Ellis' bill to amend the Municipal Act. It provides that new streets less than 66 feet in width must have the approval of the Railway Board.

"THE MAYOR'S WIFE"

By ANNA KATHARINE GREEN

CHAPTER VI.

AT THE STAIR-HEAD.

I spent the evening alone. Mrs. Packard went to the theatre with friends and Mayor Packard attended a conference of politicians. I felt my loneliness, but busied myself trying to sift the impressions made upon me by the different members of the household.

It consisted, as far as my present observation went, of seven persons, the three principals and four servants. Of the servants I had seen three, the old butler, the nurse, and the housemaid, Ellen. I now liked Ellen; she appeared equally alive and trustworthy; of the butler I could not say as much. He struck me as secretive. Also, he had begun to manifest a certain antagonism to myself. Whence sprang this antagonism? Did it have its source in my temperament, or in his? A question possibly not worth answering and yet it very well might be. Who could know?

Pondering this and other subjects, I remained in my cozy little up-stairs til lthe clock verging on to twelve told me that it was nearly time for Mrs. Packard's return.

Hardly knowing my duties as yet, or what she might expect of me, I kept my door open, meaning to speak to her when she came in. The thought had crossed my mind that she might not return at all, but remain away with her friends. Some fear of this kind had been in Mr. Packard's mind and naturally found lodgment in mine. I was therefore much relieved when, sharp on the stroke of midnight, I heard the front door-bell ring, followed by the sound of her voice speaking to the old butler. I thought its tone more cheerful than before she went out. At all events, her face had a natural look when, after a few minutes' delay, she came upstairs and stepped into the nursery—a room on the same floor as mine, but nearer the stair-head.

From what impulse did I put out my light? I think now, on looking back, that I hoped to catch a better glimpse of her face when she came out again, an dso be in a position to judge whether her anxiety or secret distress was in any special way connected with her child. But I forgot the child and any motive of this kind which I may have had; for when Mrs. Packard did re-appear in the hall, there rang up from some place below a laugh, so loud and derisive and of so raucous and threatening a tone that Mrs. Packard reeled with the shock and I myself was surprised in spite of my pride and usual impassibility.

This, had it been all, would not be worth the comment. But it was not all. Mrs. Packard did not recover from the shock as I expected her to. Her fine figure straightened itself, it is true, but only to sink again lower and lower, til she clung crouching to the stir-rail at which she had caught for support, while her eyes turning slowly in her head, moved till they met mine with that unseeing and glassy stare which speaks of a soul-piercing terror—not fear in any ordinary sense, but terror which lays bae the soul and allows one to see into depths which—

But here my companion drove me to action. Advancing quietly, I caught at her wrap which was falling from her shoulders. She grasped my hand as I did so.

"Did you hear that laugh?" she panted. "Whose was it? Who is down-stairs?"

I thought, "I this one of the unaccountable occurrences which have given the house its blighted reputation?" but I said:

"Nixon let you in. I don't know whether any one else is below. Mayor Pakard has not yet come home."

"I know; Nixon told me. Would you—would you mind,"—how hard she strove to show only the indignant curiosity natural to the situation—"do you object, I mean, to going down and seeing?"

"Not at all," I cheerfully answered, glad enough of this chance to settle my own doubts. And with a glance at her face, which was far too white and drawn to please me, I hastened below.

The lights had not yet been put out in the halls, though I saw none in the drawing room or library. Indeed, I ran upon Nixon coming from the library, where he had evidently been attending to his final duties of fastening windows and extinguishing lights. Alive to the advantage of this opportune meeting, I addressed him with as little aggressiveness as possible.

"Mrs. Packard has sent me down to see who laughed just now so loudly. Was it you?"

Strong and unmistakable dislike showed in his eyes, but his voice was restrained and apparently respectful as he replied:

"No, Miss. I didn't laugh. There was nothing to laugh at."

"You heard the laugh. It seemed to come from somewhere here. I was on the third floor and I heard it plainly."

His face twitched—a habit of his when under excitement, as I have since learned—as with a shrug of his shoulders he curtly answered:

"You were listening; I was not. If any one laughed down there down there I didn't hear 'em."

Confident that he was lying, I turned quietly away and proceeded down the hall toward Mayor Packard's study.

"I wish to speak to the mayor," I explained.

"He's not there." The man had eagerly followed me. "He's not come home yet, Miss."

"But the gas is burning brightly inside and the door ajar. Some one is there."

"It is Mr. Steele. He came an hour ago. He often works here till after midnight."

I had heard what I wanted to know, but, being by this time at the very threshold, I could not forbear giving the door a slight push, so as to catch at least a momentary glimpse of the man he spoke of.

He was sitting at his post, and as he neither looked up nor stirred at my intrusion, I had an excellent opportunity for observing again the clear-cut profile which had roused my admiration the day before.

Certainly, seen as I saw it now, in the concentrated glow of a lamp shaded from every other corner of the room, it was a face well worth looking at. Seldom, perhaps never, had I beheld one cast in a more faultless mould. Smooth-shaven, with every harmonious line open to view, is struck the eye with the force and beauty of a cameo; masculine strength and feminine grace equally expressed in the expansive forehead and the perfectly modeled features. Its effect upon the observer was instantaneous, but the heart was not warmed nor the imagination awakened by it. In spite of the perfection of the features, or possibly because of this perfection, the whole countenance had a cold look, as cold as the sculpture it suggested; and, though incomparable as pure physical attraction, it lacked the indefinable something which gives life and meaning to such faces as Mayor Packard's, for instance. Yet it was not devoid of expression, nor did it fail to possess a meaning of its own. Indeed, it was the meaning in it which held my attention. Abstracted as the man appeared to be, even at the point of not perceiving my intruding figure in the open doorway, the thoughts which held him were not common thoughts, nor were they such as can be easily read, even by an accustomed eye. Having noted this, I softly withdrew, not finding any excuse for breaking in upon a man so occupied.

The butler stood awaiting me not three feet away from the door. But taking a lesson from the gentleman I had just left, and, tripping lightly upstairs, I found Mrs. Packard awaiting me at the head of the first flight instead of the second.

Her fears, or whatever it was which moved her had not diminished in my absence. She stood erect, but it was by the help of her grasp on the balustrade; and though her diamonds shone and her whole appearance in her dinner-dress was almost regal, there was mortal apprehension in her eye and a passion of inquiry in her whole attitude which I was glad her husband was not there to see.

I made haste to answer that inquiry by immediately observing:

"I saw Nixon. He was just coming out of the library. He says that he heard no laugh. The only other person I came upon down-stairs was Mr. Steele. He was busy over some papers and I did not like to interrupt him; but he did not look as if a laugh of any sort had come from him."

"Thank you."

The words were hoarsely uttered and the tone unnatural, though she tried to carry it off with an indifferent gesture and a quick movement toward her room. I admired her self-control, for it was self-control, and was contrasting the stateliness of her present bearing with the cringing attitude of a few minutes before—when, without warning or any premonitory sound, all that beauty and pride and apl adoor collapsed before my eyes, and she fell at my feet, senseless.

CHAPTER VII.

A MOVING SHADOW.

I beat to lift the prostrate form of the unhappy woman who had been placed in my care. As I did so I heard something like a snarl over my shoulder, and, turning, saw Nixon stretching eager arms toward his mistress, whose fall he had doubtless heard.

"Let e! let me!" he cried, his old form trembling almost to the point of incapacity.

"We will lift her together," I rejoined; and though his eyes sparkled fretfully, he accepted my help and together we carried her into her own room and laid her on a lounge.

I have had some training as a nurse and, perceiving that Mrs. Packard had simply fainted, I was not at all alarmed, but simply made an effort to restore her with a calmness that for some reason greatly irritated the old man.

"Shall I call Ellen? Shall I call Letty?" he kept crying, shifting from one foot to another in a frightened and fussy way that exasperated me almost beyond endurance. "She doesn't breathe; she is white, white! Oh, what will the mayor say? I will call Letty."

But I managed to keep him under control and finally succeeded in restoring Mrs. Packard—a double task demanding not a little self-control and discretion. When the flutter of her eyelids showed that she would soon be conscious, I pointed out these signs of life to my uneasy companion and hinted very broadly that the fewer people Mrs. Packard found about her on coming to herself, the better she would be pleased. His aspect grew quite ferocious at this, and for a moment I almost feared him; but as I continued to urge the necessity of avoiding any fresh cause of agitation in one so weak, he gradually shrank back from my side where he had kept a jealous watch until now, and reluctantly withdrew into the hall.

Another moment and Mrs. Packard had started to rise; but, on seeing me and me only standing before her, she fell wearily back, crying in a subdued way, which nevertheless was very intense:

"Don't let him come in—me me—or know. I must be by myself;. I must be! Don't you see that I am frightened?"

The words came out with such force I was startled. Leaning over her, with the natural sympathy her condition called for, I asked quietly but firmly:

"Whom do you mean by him There is only one person in the hall, and that is your butler."

"Hasn't Mr. Packard returned"

"No, Madam."

"But I thought I saw him looking at me."

Her eyes were wild, her body shaking with irrepressible agitation.

"You were mistaken. Mayor Packard has not yet come home."

Heart and Nerves Were Bad.

Could Not Sleep.

To the thousands of people who toss on a sleepless pillow night after night, or who pace the bedroom floor with nerves on the jump, the heart action all wrong, and to whose eyes sleep will not come, Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills offer the blessing of sound refreshing slumber, as they restore the equilibrium of the deranged nerve centres and correct the wrong action of the heart.

Mrs. Charles Teel, Hornestle, Ont., writes:—"Just a few lines to let you know what Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills did for me. My heart and nerves were so bad I could not sleep, and the least noise or excitement would make me feel so that I used to think I was going to die, and I would tremble until I could hardly stand. I took doctor's medicine, but it did not do me much good. At last I tried Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and can certainly say they did me a great amount of good. I can recommend them to anyone who is suffering as I was."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills have been on the market for the past twenty years, and have done more to steady shaky nerves and strengthen weak hearts, than any other known preparation.

Price, 50 cents per box, or three boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

NERVOUS PROSTRATION

Severe Case of a Philadelphia Woman—Her Symptoms.

Philadelphia, Pa.—"I had a severe case of nervous prostration, with palpitation of the heart, constipation, headaches, dizziness, noise in my ears, timid, nervous, restless feelings and sleeplessness.

"I read in the paper where a young woman had been cured of the same troubles by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound so I threw away the medicines the doctor left me and began taking the Compound. Before I had taken half a bottle I was able to sit up and in a short time I was able to do all my work. Your medicine has proved itself able to do all you say it will and I have recommended it in every household I have visited."—Mrs. MARY JOHNSTON, 2110 Siegel Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Another Bad Case.

Ephrata, Pa.—"About a year ago I was down with nervous prostration. I was pale and weak and would have hysteric spells, sick headaches and a bad pain under my shoulder-blade. I was under the care of different doctors but did not improve. I was so weak I could hardly stand long enough to do my dishes.

"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has made me well and happy and I have begun to gain in weight and my face looks healthy now."—Mrs. J. W. HOSHAUSER, R. No. 2, Ephrata, Pa.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

BREAK WHISKY'S GRIP ON YOUR LOVED ONES

Drunkards will tell you with tears of sincerity that they do not want to drink. The craving coming from the inflamed membranes of the stomach drives them to it.

Gospel Truth About Zutoo

We tell you truthfully and conscientiously that one of our little tablets called ZUTOO, harmless as soda, will cure your headache sick, nervous or neuralgic in twenty minutes and always leave you feeling good.

We tell you further that these tablets will break up a cold, will relieve indigestion and the monthly pains of women.

Every user of ZUTOO will tell you the same thing. So will every druggist and dealer who sells them.

Generally you accept what every body says as being so, but we don't ask you to take anybody's word about ZUTOO tablets. Try them. Know for yourself what these remarkable little tablets will do. 25c at dealers or by mail postpaid. B.B. Robinson & Co., Reg'd Costicook, Q.

Sixty-Six Per Cent.

According to the latest statistics the retail prices of the "principal articles of food" in forty cities advanced sixty-six per cent. in fourteen years. The price of

in all that time has remained the same, and it is just as strengthening and sustaining as it was fourteen years ago—a complete, perfect food, supplying more real, body-building nutriment than meat or eggs and costing much less. Your grocer sells it.

Always heat the Biscuit in oven to restore crispness. Two Shredded Wheat Biscuits with hot milk or cream will supply all the energy needed for a half day's work. Deliciously nourishing when eaten in combination with baked apples, stewed prunes, sliced bananas, canned or preserved fruits. They beat all the old ideas —for improving soups and gravies

Oxo Cubes are easily assimilated nutriment, with all the strengthening properties of prime beef—in handy cube form. Soups, gravies, and other dishes which hitherto took hours to prepare, now—with Oxo Cubes—take only a few minutes.

Absolutely uniform in size, strength and flavour, Oxo Cubes were fortunately invented for saving much of the drudgery of cookery.

And they do this, and more.

By their remarkable power of strengthening the digestion Oxo Cubes enable the system to extract more nutriment from other foods.

An eastern publisher announces the early appearance of a 300-page volume with the title "Shall I Drink?"

It must be very dry reading by the time the last page is reached.

Don't you love the softly tinted soda fountain,
With its parti-coloured syrups, all in rows;
Where, as from a gushing spring upon the mountain,
The sweet ambrosial - flavoured liquid flows?

There is something in the carbonated bubbles
That seems to set your sleeping heart on fire;
It soothes away your petty cares and troubles,
And satisfies your longing and desire.

REFRAIN.

O, the bang of the cover on the big tin can,
And the buzz of conversation everywhere;
And the anticipation in the soda's destination,
While the hurry-gurd's quaver fills the air—
With a pretty girl beside you, looking in your eyes,
Till you really have forgotten how to frown—
O, the sweet squazle-guzzle as the water turns the nozzle,
And the gurgle as the dope goes down!

When you're weary of life's cares and more dull and drear,
When the present fails to furnish new sensations,
And the future holds no joy nor pleasure near—
Then there's always some entrancing little girlie,
Who'll drink her coco-cola by your side;
Whose face, o'erhung with locks so soft and curly,
Will thrill your heart with love you cannot hide.
When the daily tasks seem still tribulations,

Joe Jeannette knocked out a Langford in Paris the other night, but the Langford was an Alfred instead of a Samuel.

The Canny Scot

Sir Thomas Lipton, having made his fortune out of tea, tells some good stories about the beverage. One of them, illustrating the "canniness" of the Scot, is as follows:

An old farmer of Dumfries-shire was the guest of a fine lady in that country. When the afternoon tea was served the hostess observed that the old man griped down his before she could serve the other guests. Again and again the farmer passed his cup to be refilled. At the ninth cup the lady, becoming uneasy as to the supply on hand, ventured to ask:

"How many cups of tea do you take, John?"

"How many do ye gie?" asked John warily.

RECORD STONE QUARRIED

Excavators in Syria Find 1,500-Ton Stone

What is said to be the largest stone ever quarried is a great monolith in the ruins of Baalbec, in Syria. It is 69 feet long, 14 feet broad and 17 feet deep, and is estimated to weigh 1,500 tons. It is thought by archæological scholars that this huge stone was intended by the ancient builders to adorn the Temple of the Sun, nearby—now, of course, in ruins.

Herein is a wall which careful measurements show to be 62 feet long and 18 feet high. And, more remarkable still, the stones are placed in position 19 feet above the ground level. Moreover, although no sign of any cementing mixture is to be found in these ancient buildings, the stones have been squared and polished so evenly that only after the most minute search can the joints be found, and when traced it is impossible to thrust the blade of a pocket knife between them.

GERMANY AND THE LATE KING EDWARD

Prince Von Bülow's new book on Germany contains the following reference to the late King Edward: "He was a monarch ofextraordinary insight into the character of men, who knew to a nicety the art of handling them, and had a wide and varied experience. English policy (under King Edward's influence) did not so much aim at directly opposing the interests of Germany as at gradually checkmating her by shifting the balance of power in Europe. By a series of enemies, for the sake of which considerable British interests were several times sacrificed, she sought to attach herself to other States of Europe, and so to isolate Germany."

LIEUT. J. C. PORTE

Noted for his fearlessness and his quick judgment in an emergency, Lieut. J. C. Porte of the British Royal Navy was chosen as one of the two pilots to guide a hydroplane across the Atlantic as part of the celebration of the British-American Peace Centenary.

TRICKS TO GET ASLEEP

The Purposes of Lord Rosebery's Motoring by Night

Inability to sleep, which is proving a serious complication after Lord Rosebery's operation, has been his enemy for years. To combat it he has been in the habit of taking motor car drives just before bedtime, changing his bedroom, and counting imaginary sheep passing one by one through a gate.

"Insomnia is one of the penalties of the increasing strain modern life throws upon our brains," said a physician of St. Bartholomew's Hospital. "The man who works with his muscles and lives in the open air is rarely a victim of sleeplessness.

"The essentials for a good night's rest are mental repose, a requisite amount of muscular fatigue, comfortable body heat, and plenty of ventilation. The most difficult to secure is lessened brain activity. An excellent plan, is to take a brisk halfhour's walk just before bedtime, followed by a hot bath and a rub down, and then a cup of warm milk and a biscuit or two as one gets into bed. If, in addition, the mind be focused on some pleasant but not exciting topic a night's rest is assured to all but the most chronic sufferer.

"The type in which the sleeper suddenly wakes an hour or so after having fallen asleep, usually means that more outdoor muscular exercise is required."

Fire to Frighten the Ghosts

A seventeen-year-old domestic servant, Agnes Mabel Smith, who was bound over at Staffordshire Assizes for setting fire to a clover stack, pleaded in defence that when left alone in the evening in a large house near the churchyard, she became nervous and frightened of ghosts.

Gin Pills

Will Take Away the Ache and Cure that Pain in The Back—

PAIN in the back means Kidney Trouble. It may be Kidney Cold—damp, rainy weather may have inflammed the Kidneys—it may be acute Inflammation, due to Uric Acid—it may be Rheumatism or Lumbago, brought on by weakness of the Kidneys.

Whatever the Pain, The CAUSE is The Kidneys
Whatever the Pain, The CURE is Gin Pills

GIN PILLS are as soothing and grateful to the inflammed kidneys, as a cooling, healing ointment is to an angry burn.

Three or four hours after taking a dose of GIN PILLS you SEE, as well as feel, that the wonderful Medicinal Properties of GIN PILLS have reached the Kidneys and Bladder, and are doing you good. The pain gets easier—the soreness leaves the muscles—the stiffness works out of the joints—and you are soon able to straighten up and step out without a hint of pain.

Don't belittle Nature's warning. Pain in the back means that there is something wrong with the Kidneys. To neglect them, is to run the risk of having Bright's Disease, Diabetes or Dropsy.

Hundreds and hundreds of people are taking GIN PILLS right now to protect themselves against just such attacks. Do the same. Get GIN PILLS to-day—and take three or four every day until hot weather comes. A pill of prevention saves many a pain.

LONGING FOR WORK

An Oxford Man's Appeal to a Town Council

The following letter from Mr. H. E. Lee, Guildford, was read at a meeting of the Guildford Town Council: "As a resident in Guildford I am writing to offer my services to the town in whatever capacity they may be of use. I came to Guildford three years ago, and hoped I should in time find employment of some kind here, but have found very little after much search. I am a teacher by profession, with a university education (Oxford), 47 years of age. I want remunerative work, but have a greater wish to be of some use in the town, and am quite willing to work for nothing if I can help in such ways as checking the abuse of public advertisements, suggesting improvements in roads, etc., traffic, especially motor traffic. I should like, of course, to be given some definite work. I am not a fanatic, and, being quite unconnected with trade or business, I have no axe to grind." On the suggestion of the Mayor the letter was referred to a committee for consideration.

Brother Saves Sister's Life

At Wrexham the mayor made an interesting presentation to a little hero named Leo Collins, aged nine, who, seeing a two-horse conveyance coming towards him, saved his little sister, aged two, by pushing her away. He himself was knocked down, and the wheels went over both his legs.

KINDNESS IN CHILDREN

Duke of Connaught Advocates Teaching Kindness

"Teach the children to be kind to animals," was the principal theme in the address of the Duke of Connaught in addressing the Toronto Humane Society. "Among all the societies that exist—and they are many, there is none that ought to appeal more to the juvenile members of the family than this society which teaches kindness to animals. We all know the natural affection that children have for and the great pleasure that dumb animals give to children.

"I hope, therefore, that the parents will do all they can to inculcate into their children the habit of kindly treatment of animals. We must all have felt that if animals could only speak, we would know what to do for them. But as they cannot, we must be kind to them."

MODERN MARTYRS!

The age of martyrs is not passed. There are thousands of women all over the country enduring physical torture and mental anguish almost beyond description. They are not victims of persecution, like the martyrs of old; they are not called on to face the scaffold or the stake, but their sufferings—borne in silence and hidden from the world at large—are scarcely less intense.

These ladies, as a rule, are women and girls of refined and sensitive nature. Knowing that their sufferings are due to disordered condition of the female functions, their native modesty deters them from seeking relief in the earlier stages; and when they do consult a physician, they usually get some drug mixture to take internally, which is not more effective for troubles of this kind than it would be for a toothache, a bruise, or any other strictly local ailment.

The seat of the trouble being in some one of the female organs, the remedy, to be effective, must act on this portion of the anatomy.

This is the secret of the success which always follows the use of ORANGE LILY in derangements of this kind. It is a strictly local treatment. It is absorbed directly into the parts that are inflamed and congested and its beneficent, soothing influence is noticeable from the start. The irritation of the delicate membrane is relieved, the congestion is overcome by the discharge of the watery matter which served to oppress the nerves and cause mental depression; the nerves are toned and invigorated; and the sunshine and joy of life again becomes part of her being. Read the following letters:

Archer, Ont., Feb. 1, '09.

Dear Mrs. Currah:—I received your kind letter some time ago, but was feeling so well, and not needing medicine, that I neglected replying sooner. I must say I have more confidence in ORANGE LILY than any other thing I have ever used. Before I knew or found out anything about this medicine, I doctored away hundreds of dollars, and when I thought I had it with inflammation of the womb a box of ORANGE LILY was sent me through the mail from a friend. The first suppository I used I was greatly relieved, and in a few months completely cured. That was nine years ago this winter, so you can imagine with what esteem I hold the ORANGE LILY. I am thankful there is a relief for poor, suffering women, for I have been one of them and can sympathize with others. Yours sincere friend, MRS. NORMAN WEAVER. Trenton, Ont., Dec. 4th, 1909.

Mrs. E. E. Currah, Windsor, Ont.—

Dear Friend—I feel that it my duty to write you a testimonial as to what Orange Lily has done for me. Last winter I was feeling very miserable indeed. I could scarcely do my housework during my menstrual period, and for two months or more I was never free from pain in the womb and ovaries. The pain would run down the limbs, and I would frequently nearly double up. Then the pain began going up the back of my neck to my brain until I hardly knew what I was doing at times. Life was a burden indeed. I finally could endure it no longer, so went to our leading doctor and had an examination. He pronounced it (I forget the word) a condition of the generative organs, produced by repeated attacks of inflammation. He said I would have to take a course of treatment, and if that failed to strengthen the weak condition I might, in time, be compelled to have the ovaries removed. I objected to that, so filled out Dr. Cowley's symptom blank and forwarded it to him, and he diagnosed the disease the same as my local doctor, so I decided to take Dr. Cowley's Treatment. I have used two jars of Cerate Massage, two packages of Herbal Womb Tonic and six bottles of Orange Lily. It is eight months since I began the treatment, but I feel like a new woman. I work right through everything now. Hardly know a pain, even during menstruation now. I often say, "I would not take $100 and be in the state that I was last March." I feel that Dr. Cowley's Home Treatment is a Godsend to suffering womankind, and will continue to sound its praises whenever I have an opportunity.

Yours gratefully, MRS. T. H. HATTON.

ORANGE LILY as a remedy for these ills, as well as for leucorrhoea, painful periods, irregularities, especially in their earlier stages, tumors, displacements, ulceration and all ovarian troubles, has long since passed the experimental stage. So confident am I of this that I will send ten days' treatment, which is worth 25 cents, to any sufferer ABSOLUTELY FREE. The treatment is inexpensive, used at home, and no physician is necessary. Send at once for the

FREE TRIAL TREATMENT

which will demonstrate that ORANGE LILY will cure you. Enclose stamps, and address MRS. FRANCES E. CURRAH, WINDSOR, ONT., Can. Rep. Cowley, Med. Co. Others are dangerous.

PROTECT YOUR HANDS

The spring is hard on the hands of the woman who is much out of doors. Before the muff is discarded the hands become overheated and when they are withdrawn from the muff to cool off, they often chap and roughen. And after the muff is put away the hands are perhaps sensitive, because they have been protected throughout the winter, and a late touch of spring frost roughens and reddens them.

Almost any woman can make her own nails attractive — can file and trim and polish them, if she has time and the proper implements. It is a little more difficult to keep the hands soft and white. One of the best ways to do this is to use cold cream and wear gloves during the afternoon rest hour or at night.

Special gloves are sold for this purpose. But cheap white cotton gloves will answer all requirements. They must be kept clean, as rancid cold cream remaining inside them might do much harm to the hands. Wash them at least once a week in soapy water, using a little borax occasionally to freshen them.

Dry them thoroughly, always, before putting them on. It is a good plan, too, to warm them before putting them on each night. Rub the hands thoroughly with cold cream of a bland, pure make, and then pull on the gloves.

The gloves must be loose and roomy, for if they bind the wrists they might make the hands numb. The fingers, too, should be loose enough not to press at the seams.

For the simple reason that they cannot be kept perfectly clean it is not a good plan to use old kid gloves. But cotton gloves can be bought for a very small price, and if anything is left of them when summer comes they can be used to soothe sunburned hands, or else used for gardening gloves.

KISSING THE ROD.

O, heart of mine, we shouldn't worry so!
What we've missed of calm we couldn't have, you know!
What we've met of stormy pain, and of sorrow's driving rain,
We can better meet again, if it blow!

We have cried in that dark hour, we have known,
When our tears fell with the shower, all alone—
Were not shine and shadow blent, as the gracious Master meant?
Let us temper our contents with His own.

For, we know, not every morgow can be sad;
So, forgetting all the sorrow we have had,
Let us fold away our fears, and put by our foolish tears,
And through all the coming years just be glad.

—James Whitcomb Riley.

How To Cook Fish

I want particularly to draw the attention of readers to the value of fish as a food. We have it in such abundance all round us, and it is sold at such a low cost that many of us don't value it sufficiently. Above all, for the very young and very old it is a most valuable diet, being so easy of digestion, and yet how many mothers ever think of giving their children a meal of fish. I have known old people who for years and years never tasted meat. They were hale and hearty, and lived to a good old age because their stomachs were not overworked and had not to digest heavy meals of meat. Professor Knight, of Glasgow, tells us that fish contains a large amount of water, a varying amount of fat, and nitrogenous matter, chiefly of the gelatine forming order. Isinglass, the finest form of gelatine, is obtained from fish bones, but more especially from the sounds of cartilaginous fishes, such as ray and sturgeon. He also tells us that fish is not so satisfying or so stimulating as animal flesh in general, but it is readily digestible, and therefore very suitable for persons of feeble digestion with whom the golden rule "should be small and often."

On acount of the large amount of phosphorus in fish it has been vaunted as a brain food, but this is simply owing to the fact that since fish is so easy of digestion, it is admirably suited to persons of sedentry habits. Fish are at their best before spawning, when they are said to be in season; after that, they become poor and flabby. Immature fish are, of course, always in season.

Fresh water fish are best when taken from deep water with a rocky or stony bottom, and it is this which gives pre-eminence in Europe to the fish of the Alpine lakes.

The perfection of fish cooking is obtained when the fish is transferred from the water to the kettle, and, if from the sea, boiled in sea water. An exception must be made in favour of cartilaginous fishes such as ray and sturgeon, which improve by keeping, since the muscular fibres become more tender, as in game when "hung."

When smoked, salted or pickled, they are much less digestible than when fresh, and in this state they are much better avoided by dyspeptics. The best suited for smoking or otherwise preserving are firm, oily fish like salmon and herring.

In choosing fish the following are the main indications of freshness. The flesh is stiff and firm, the animal being in a state of rigor; the scales do not come off easily, and, above all, the eyes and gills are bright, the gills bright red, while the tail is firm and not drooping.

Cod, haddock and whiting keep best; flat fish keep better than herring or mackerel.

Boiling, or, still better, steaming, is the most wholesome way of cooking fish. The addition of vinegar and salt to the water helps in boiling fish to keep the flesh firm, and the vinegar helps to dissolve small bones. Before giving detailed methods of cooking fish I shall give a few general rules which will prove useful to those in doubt.

When boiling fish all fish should be put into warm water, with the exception of salmon, which is put into boiling water to preserve the colour and curd. Also all shell fish, such as crabs, crayfish and lobsters, go into boiling water alive, so that the water must be hot enough to kill them at once. Oysters require very special care in cooking. Never allow them to become overheated, boiling them turns them up into a leathery, indigestible mass. When eaten cooked they should be just warmed and no more. The oyster eaten raw is practically self-digested, therefore very wholesome, and may be given to invalids. Mussels and cockles are very foul feeders and not safe eating, unless obtained from a pure source.

Having given these few hints on fish in general, I shall now give the individual cooking of fish.

Boiled Salmon—Scale the fish by rubbing a blunt knife against the scales, or a coarse cloth will remove them; clean the fish, cutting it open at the stomach and removing all the inside and blood; remove the gills if the head is left on, and also remove the eyes, punching them out with a cloth, to some not a very agreeable duty. Wash the fish well in cold water, dry it and put it into a saucepan of boiled salted water, to which has been added vinegar, a couple of tablespoonfuls to the gallon. Boil quickly until tender; allow each pound 8 minutes. A skewer run through to the bone is a good test; if the flesh of the fish is tough, boil it longer. Be very careful never to underboil fish; it renders it most unwholesome. Drain the fish from the water, lifting it carefully with a fish slice or flat strainer. Dish it on a napkin of a fish paper on a hot dish; have some lemon finely sliced in rings round it, some sliced tomatoes if in season, and some fresh green parsley; serve with any sauce liked, hot or cold—and sliced cucumbers when in season.

Cream Sauce—One-third of a pint of cream (or milk), 2 oz. of butter, 1 tablespoonful of flour, salt and cayenne pepper to taste, a small quantity of powdered mace and a squeeze of lemon juice. Melt the butter in a saucepan, then add the flour, stir until both are well blended, add the milk or cream, simmer the sauce for five minutes, stirring all the time. Lastly add the seasoning. If after all care any lumps occur rub the sauce through a strainer or sieve. Serve very hot.

Note.—The above sauce may be varied by adding capers, or chopped gherkins may be used. These give a sharp taste, which improves the flavour of the salmon. Add them just before serving the sauce.

To Arrange Cucumbers.—Cut off the green rind and slice the cucumber very thinly into a glass dish. Shake pepper and salt over the slices, pour a little vinegar over all, and if liked a little olive oil. Allow the cucumber to stand on ice if possible for an hour or more before serving. Some people say that if you put salt and water on the cucumber, pour this off after an hour, then dress the cucumber, it is more digestible, but I cannot answer for this. Cucumber at all times is very difficult of digestion and should be avoided by those who suffer from indigestion.

Salmon Cutlets.—Cut slices of salmon one inch thick with a sharp knife, shake pepper and salt over them, rub butter or olive oil over each slice and grill the cutlets over a clear fire, or fry them in a very hot clean dripping in a pan. A piece of buttered paper wrapped round the ing wrapped round the salmon helps salmon before grilling or frying helps mon cutlets with a very sharp sauce, such as anchovy sauce.

Anchovy Sauce.—Four anchovies, 1 oz. of butter (or 2 tablespoonfuls of anchovy essence), half pint of cream sauce as above, a little red colouring, such as cochineal. Bone the anchovies and pound them in a mortar with 1 oz. of butter. Make the cream sauce very hot, add the pounded anchovies or the anchovy essence, simmer for 3 or 4 minutes, add the colouring, a little cayenne and a squeeze of lemon juice.

Boiled Cod—Take some warm water, all salt and vinegar, place the cod in it and boil until tender; a small cod or piece of cod takes from 25 to 35 minutes to boil; a large thick cod requires 8 minutes to the pound. Boil the cod very thoroughly, remove from the water and dish on a dish paper or clean napkin. Garnish with parsley, lemon and tomato; serve with egg sauce.

Egg Sauce.—Make some white sauce by boiling half pint of milk, adding ½ oz. of butter, and when boiling stir in 2 level teaspoonfuls of corn starch, boil three minutes, stirring all the time. Boil an egg hard, giving it 6 minutes in boiling water (drop it into cold water to prevent it turning black), break the shell, remove it, slice the egg, then chop it and stir into the white sauce; serve very hot.

Fish Cakes.—With the remains of the fish these can be made. Chop the fish meat very fine, remove all bones, all equal quantities of mashed potato. Make a thick white mixture, using quarter pint milk, 1 oz. of butter, 2 level teaspoonfuls of corn starch, pour this over fish and potato, ad pepper and salt to taste, a little mace or nutmeg if liked, and a few drops of lemon juice. Mix all together into a thick paste, spread it out on a plate, smooth it over with a knife dipped in hot water; allow to get quite cold. Take a little of the paste in the hand, previously flavouring in them; roll the mixture into a ball, flatten it into a cake, dip it in egg beaten up on a plate, brushing it over with a brush, then dip the cake in fine white bread crumbs; shake the cake from hand to hand to get rid of any loose crumbs. Fry in very hot fat until a golden brown colour; drain on soft paper; dish on a hot dish with a paper of, napkin folded on it.

Note.—These cakes are excellent for breakfast, and any fish left over may be used for them.

HINTS TO HOUSEWIVES

When a fish kettle is not available for boiling the fish, place an old plate at the bottom of the saucepan and tie the fish in a piece of muslin.

A little fine salt placed inside an inverted gas mantel will, when lighted, clean the mantel and it will give as bright a light as formerly.

Get a few large knobs of chalk and lay them at the back and sides of a fire. They will burn as red as coal.

Lemons may be kept a long time without becomin gdry if put into a jar of water with a lid. The water should be changed once a week if the lemons are to be kept long. When used, they will be quite as warm as when fresh and, if anything, more juicy.

HOUSEHOLD RECIPES

DELICIOUS MUFFINS.

Three cups entire wheat flour, one cup rye meal, one egg, one-half cup sugar, one quarter cup melted butter, one teaspoonful of soda, two teaspoons cream of tartar; add milk enough to make a batter, not too stiff. Bake in hot muffin pan. These are very nice.

SOFT GINGER COOKIES.

Put one pint of molasses on the stove to get hot. Break one egg in a dish, add one cup sugar, one tablespoon ginger, one teaspoon salt. Stir this up thoroughly. When molasses is hot put in two teaspoons saleratus, beat it and while foaming pour over the mixture of egg, sugar, etc. Now take one mixing spoon of good vinegar, put in the molasses dish and clean the molasses all out. Pour it into the mixture, use a large dish as it foams. Mix stiff and knead hard. Bake in a quick oven.

JOHNNYCAKE.

One and one-half cups of meal, one and one-half cupfuls of flour, three teaspoonfuls of baking powder, one-half cupful of butter, not quite one-half cupful of sugar, three eggs, two cupfuls of sweet milk. Beat butter and sugar, then eggs, then milk, lastly meal and flour with baking powder mixed in. Bake one-half hour.

SALLY LIND.

One pint flour, two teaspoons baking powder, one-half teaspoonful salt. Beat two eggs, whites and yolks separately, add to yolks one-half cup sweet milk or water. Stir slowly into flour and add one-half cup melted butter. Stir in whites last. Bake in muffin pans two-thirds full.

TORTURE RELIEVED RHEUMATISM CURED.

Superintendent Of Sunday School In Toronto Says "I Am Pleased To Tell You That I Am Cured", After Taking "Fruit-a-tives".

R. A. WAUGH, Esq.

55 Dovercourt Road, TORONTO, Oct. 1st, 1913.

"For a long time, I have thought of writing you regarding what I term a most remarkable cure effected by your remedy "Fruit-a-tives". You may publish this letter, whole or in part, if you wish to do so. I have lived in this city for more than 12 years and am well known.

I suffered from Rheumatism, especially in my hands. I have spent a lot of money without any good results, until I used "Fruit-a-tives". I have taken "Fruit-a-tives" for 18 months now, and am pleased to tell you that I am cured. All the enlargement has not left my hands and perhaps never will, but the soreness is all gone and I can do any kind of work. I have gained 35 pounds in 18 months. I am very grateful for what "Fruit-a-tives" has done for me".

R. A. WAUGH.

Rheumatism of any kind—whether in hands, arms, feet, legs, joints or back—is caused by uric acid in the blood. Uric acid is formed when there is any stomach trouble, coupled with any disturbance of the kidneys, bowels or skin, which prevent these organs from properly ridding the system of waste matter. This waste, or urea, acted upon by an acid condition of the stomach, forms uric in the blood. The only way that Rheumatism, Sciatica and Lumbago can be cured, is to cure the kidneys, regulate the bowels and improve the digestion and skin action. "Fruit-a-tives" cures Rheumatism because this wonderful fruit medicine gives new strength and vitality to the stomach, liver, bowels, kidneys and skin—purifies the blood and prevents the formation of an excess of uric acid. Rheumatism is an stubborn disease, but "Fruit-a-tives" will always cure it when faithfully used according to directions.

DOG SAVES HOUSEHOLD

Lord Morley's Private Secretary Loses His Home

How a pet Pomeranian dog averted grave risk to the lives of an entire household is revealed in the story of Denis Cunningham, the eleven-year-old son of Viscount Morley's private secretary, after a fire at Mr. Cunningham's residence, The Square, Fernhurst.

At three o'clock in the morning the boy was awakened by the dog scratching his cheek. He found the room full of smoke, and promptly gave the alarm. The house, a new one, was blazing furiously, and in the end it was burned to the ground, whilst the adjoining garage and a motor car worth $4,000 were also destroyed.

The Haslemere fire brigade found a scarcity of water, the nearest hydrant being two miles distant; but a pond a quarter of a mile away furnished a supply, and this was pumped dry before the flames were extinguished. Although much of the furniture was saved from the fire, it was drenched by the heavy rain. The total damage is estimated at $50,000.

Preaching at Ninety-five

The Rev. Robert Church, of Peterborough, who is the oldest Nonconformist minister in the country, has celebrated his ninety-fifth birthday. He has been in receipt of a pension from the Primitive Methodist Connection for about thirteen years, but he still preaches on the Peterborough circuit.

Roman Grave in Cheshire

While excavating work in connection with a new infirmary at Chester was being carried out the grave of a Roman lady was revealed, which Professor Newstead estimated to be 1,700 years old. It contains the skeleton with a coin inserted in the mouth, a mirror, sandals, and fragments of Roman pottery and glass.

Football Not Pingpong

In a Yale scrimmage practice one big chap smashed through a guard and hit into the man opposite him in rugged fashion. He helped his opponent to his feet at the end of the play saying: "Excuse me, old man, I didn't mean to get into you so hard." Coach Jones heard the remark and strode into the mix-up. "Here you," he said calling to the humble one, "what are you excusing yourself for? This is a man's game. I don't want to hear any more of this 'excuse me' business Now give us your signal, Mr. Quarter back."

TRAIN CHILDREN IN COUNTRY LIFE

Town Them, Says Lloyd George, Country Life is Superior to Town Life

The cost of education in England and Wales between 1901-2 and 1906-6 had just doubled, rising from just under £12,000,000 to just under £24,000,000, while since then it had gone up to £28,000,000, said Mr. Lloyd George in the British Parliament. He wished he could feel confident that they were getting their money's worth. Education had been until recently very unsuitable in rural districts for it had not fitted the children for country life. He was glad that there had been a great change in recent years in the whole direction of education, but he wanted a more revolutionary change. Children ought not merely to be equipped for country life, but to be trained to take an interest in it. He hoped that during the next few years whichever party was in power a real effort would be made to teach the children something about their own surroundings, and how very much superior country life was to town life for any one who had been trained to take an interest in the country. A good deal of the money which had been given to the Development Commissioners had been spent on agricultural education, but even now we were not spending nearly as much as the United States with its enormous amount of virgin soil. We were working up in that direction and he hoped the State in future would take a greater financial interest in agricultural development. On education generally speaking the cost had increased enormously, but the proportion which the State contributed was less by four or five per cent. than it was some years ago.

Queen Alexandra's Shilling

Queen Alexandra paid a visit to the King Edward Labor Tent of the Church Army, in Chadwick street, London. Her Majesty inspected the various departments of the tent, going first to the kitchen, where she closely examined the arrangements and stirred some of the food.

The wood sawing shed was next inspected, and the party then proceeded to a tent set apart for meetings and religious service. There each of the 130 inmates of the tent was presented by Queen Alexandra with a warm shirt and a pair of knitted woollen socks. On top of each parcel her Majesty also placed a shilling. "I am very glad I came; I have been most pleased with my visit, and I sincerely hope that all the men will soon be in good work again," was the parting wish of her Majesty.

Death Follows Tooth Extraction

The death of a young man named Edward Denobles of Garrow, near Newbliss, took place following the extraction of a tooth. He went to a chemist and had a tooth extracted. After a week a doctor was called in and found the patient suffering from inflammation of the throat and neck. The doctor subsequently opened an abcess which had poisoned the man's system, and death followed in a day or so.

Tragedy of Ignorance

Dr. Holt, medical officer of health for Burnley, speaking at the opening of a School for Mothers at Burnley, said the effect of the want of knowledge in Burnley could be seen when they considered that in one year 2,500 children were born, and that 434 died before they reached the age of one year. At least 150 of the children died from complaints they ought not to have died from.

A Woman Hermit

Miss Elizabeth Lovell, on whom an inquest was held at Kingswood, near Bristol, was found dead in bed, but a doctor said death probably took place a week or ten days before. It was stated that her next door neighbor had not spoken to her for twenty-five years and that she would not allow even her mother to live with her.

Postman's Defence

Sued at Exeter County Court on a judgment summons, a postman stated that he earned $1.50 a week, of which he paid $1.10 in rent. Asked if he lived on 40 cents a week, he said he was given his dinner, but he had a family of four. The case was struck off.

Thief and Philanthropist, Too

I want all women to know how Dr. Chases Nerve Food helped me. Mrs. M. A South

A Message to Women

From one who has learned to appreciate Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

Modern life whether in the office, factory or home means an enormous strain on the more delicate nervous system of women. Whether it is the girl behind the counter or the lady going the round of society functions, the nerves are at high tension and require an abundance of rich, red blood if health is to be maintained.

Because Dr. Chase's Nerve Food forms new, rich blood, it is eminently successful in curing the ailments which cause the greater part of woman's suffering and has become duly popular among those who have learned of its merits.

Mrs. M. A. South, Grand Prairie, Alta., writes:—"I cannot begin to tell you how much good Dr. Chase's Nerve Food has done me. I was all run down, had no appetite, and suffered each month in a way only women will understand. After having followed this treatment for some weeks I feel like a different woman, sleep well, have a good appetite and am able to do my own work, even during the time that I formerly had so much suffering. I have no pains whatever now, which is an entirely new experience for me. You may publish this letter as I want all women to know how Dr. Chase's Nerve Food has helped me, and I feel sure it will do as much for any woman."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

Honey and glycerine, mixed in equal proportions, is an excellent remedy for cracked lips. It should be applied every night till the cracks are thoroughly healed.

When a cup of strong tea is required, instead of putting an extra spoonful into the pot, add a spoonful of sugar. This opens the leaves of the tea, and makes the tea stronger.

A mixture that will remove grease from the finest fabrics is made of one quart of rain water, two ounces of ammonia, one teaspoonful of salt petre, and one ounce of shaving soap cut up very fine.

If at any time you have a gathered finger or poisoned hand, take a cabbage leaf, roll it out with a bottle until the juicer comes out, and tie it on the affected part. This will draw and cleanse it far better than a poultice.

STRANGE ANIMAL LIFE

QUEER BEASTS WHICH INHABIT OUTSKIRTS OF EMPIRE.

New Zealand Breaks All Traditions With the Remarkable Nature of Her Birds, While Australia Takes the Palm For Weird Animals—The Duck Billed Platypus Is Nature's Greatest Joke.

Two strange animals, the great white rabbit and the little musk ox, have been the means of keeping life in the bodies of the Cook and Peary companies almost to the pole. The former is the largest of all rabbits—much bigger, indeed, than the "jack-rabbit" of our western plains. Like the latter, it is, properly speaking, a hare. It is usually called the "Arctic hare," and is one of the few creatures in existence that, without being albinoes, like the ordinary white rabbit, is perfectly snow-white.

But one does not have to go to such impossible spots on the globe to find the strangest beasts.

In the matter of feathered creatures, New Zealand is undeniably the most remarkable country in the world. It is particularly the home of the flightless birds, of many species, which flourished there in earlier times, owing to the fact that there are no large carniverous beasts to prey upon them. Unfortunately, the white man in establishing himself in the land of Maori, has brought with him his dogs and cats, which are rapidly driving the non-flying birds to extinction.

The best known of these birds is the ki-wi, or apteryx — the latter, which is its scientific name, signifying wingless. It is, indeed, practically without wings, and lives in thickets, often covering itself with dead leaves and twigs for concealment. About the size of the average turkey, it is thick-set with plumage long and hairy. Worms and insects furnish the bulk of its food, which it seeks at night, hiding itself by day.

The ki-wi is especially interesting because it is a close relative of the gigantic moa—a New Zealand bird, rivaling the roc in size, which became extinct not more than a century ago. When full grown it weighed half a ton, exceeding the aepyornis, of Madagascar, in weight, though less in stature. Its leg bones were enormously heavy, and it was very sluggish in its movements.

But the most curious of all New Zealand birds in some respects is the kea, a very large native parrot. It is a killer of sheep, actually preying on these animals, and the loss it causes in this way is so great that the sheep farmers destroy it as often as they can.

In Australia all the mammals, without exception, are marsupials, carrying their young in breast-pouches until they are big enough to take care of themselves. Thus the new-born baby of the giant kangaroo, which attains a height of seven feet, is hardly bigger than a lima bean when it comes into the world. At once thereupon it is placed by its mother (together with 10 or 12 brothers and sisters, perhaps) in the pouch afore-mentioned, and does not emerge therefrom until it is the size of a rat, when it is able to make its way in the world.

Unquestionably the most remarkable of the Australian animals are the echinda and "the duck-billed platypus"—for these are the only mammals that lay eggs. The platypus, indeed, is a veritable zoological paradox, inasmuch as it is a quadruped with a stout fur-covered body, a toothless beak like that of a duck, webbed feet and a short tail. It feeds on mollusks, insects and crustaceans, and is of aquatic habits, living in and about streams like the otter and muskrat.

The marsupials, as already explained, are back numbers in mammalian creation: Under the rules they ought to have passed from off the earth many thousands of years ago. But nature has strange and unaccountable ways. Thus, for another example, there is the queer bird called the hoatzin of Guinea and eastern Venezuela, which in infancy, so to speak, is a reptile. At all events, it is reptile-like during the first months of its existence, climbing about on the branches of trees by the help of well developed claws attached to those portions of its wings which correspond anatomically to the thumbs of our hands. Of course, a bird's wing is merely an arm modified for flight.

The sloths of Central and South America are another strange survival of an ancient epoch. Mammals of their primitive kind roamed over a wide range of latitudes in North and South America 100,000 years and more ago—some of them of gigantic size, weighing as much as six tons—but to-day they are represented by only a few tropical species, such as one on the Isthmus of Panama, which is two feet long, feeds on the leaves of trees, and almost never comes to the ground. It must be the original "moosback," for a lichen, growing on its hair, colors it green, and renders the animal almost indiscernible as it hangs immovable from a hospitable bough. There could be no more curious example of natural disguise, protective against enemies.

It may be said, perhaps, that in its way, the most remarkable artistic effect of nature is shown in the designing of the wings of the Argus pheasant, which is an extremely shy bird of the Malay Peninsula, Sumatra and Java. So wary is this feathered creature that snares of special and highly ingenious construction are employed for its capture by the natives of these far-off islands.

Contracted A Severe Cold After An Operation.

DR. WOOD'S NORWAY PINE SYRUP
Effected A Complete Cure.

Mrs. Thos. A. Julien, Almonte, Ont., writes:—"Just a few lines to let you know how thankful I am for what Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup has done for me. A few years ago I was operated on for appendicitis, and was confined to the hospital for five weeks. When I returned home I contracted a severe cold which left me with a bad cough. A neighbor told my husband about Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup so I decided to try a bottle. When it was finished it had done me so much good I took another which completely cured me. I can very, very strongly recommend it."

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup contains all the lung healing virtues of the famous Norway pine tree, which makes it the very best preparation for Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, and all Throat and Lung troubles.

SIMPLE REMEDIES.

When my baby was three years old he had a bad sore throat. I did all I could for it, but it still got worse. He got hoarse and his breathing sounded something like a croup. So, on Monday morning I sent for the doctor. I also made up my mind to try onion poultices. I made two little bags and filled them with raw chopped onions. I put one on his neck as hot as he could bear it and I changed it every half hour. I had the onions on the baby's neck when the doctor came, in the afternoon. He said it was diphtheria, and he had no antitoxin with him, although he was told that we thought the baby had diphtheria. He said, as there was none around the neighbourhood, he thought it could not be diphtheria and came without the antitoxin. He couldn't go back to the city and get it and come back here until about noon the next day, so he told me to keep the onion poultices on until he came back with the antitoxin. I did so, and I believe they kept him from choking to death. He breathed easier when the onions were on.

I have also used onions, since then, on the same child when he had croup, with good success. Another good thing for croup, which I have used time and again, is alum and sugar. Take a little powdered alum about the size of a bean and mix with it two teaspoonfuls of sugar and give the child a little at a time until relieved.

NEW PAPER BEGINS

"Beck's Weekly" Makes Charges of Corruption in Montreal

STORM IN THE COUNCIL

MONTREAL, March 21. — Editor Edward Beck's eagerly awaited charges of graft in civic affairs began yesterday afternoon with the first appearance of his new paper "Beck's Weekly," containing the initial instalment of what Mr. Beck declares will be a sensational exposure of corruption in Montreal municipal politics.

The first person accused by Mr. Beck in an article over the editor's own name is Jules Crepeau, secretary to the city clerk. The article accuses Crepeau of being the go-between in several "dummy" deals brought about by the agency of Burns' detectives and it alleges that "detectaphone" records can be produced to show that Crepeau accepted "retainers" to act as agent for the pretended privilege-buyers. The article proceeds to give details of the alleged acts of corruption.

The City Council happened to be in session yesterday afternoon when Mr. Beck's new paper appeared on the streets, and Mr. Crepeau at once addressed a letter to Mayor Lavallee asking the council to suspend judgment on the accusations made against him. He added that he would be able to vindicate his honor.

Ald. O'Connell moved that Mr. Crepeau be brought before the council forthwith to explain the matter.

Several members objected to this proposal, on the ground that the powers of the council in relation to such charges were indefinite.

Ald. O'Connell, however, persisted in his motion. "My name is mentioned in this report as having been reported by Mr. Crepeau to these people," said Ald. O'Connell, "and I tell the council straight that unless Mr. Crepeau is brought right now I will to-morrow morning take out a warrant against him."

Mr. Crepeau was thereupon summoned and he repeated his declaration that he could vindicate his honor and disprove the charges.

Mr. Crepeau said he had already instructed his lawyer in the matter. The article, he said, was a tissue of malicious and criminal allegations made for the purpose of ruining his reputation and blasting his career."

Mr. Crepeau yesterday afternoon went to his lawyer, J. L. Perron, K.C., and asked him to proceed to take out a warrant against Mr. Beck.

Embassy Can Execute Arms.

MEXICO CITY, March 21. — Provisional President Huerta yesterday agreed to permit the American embassy here to receive arms and ammunition consigned to it by the United States Government for the protection of American citizens in the event of disturbances in the federal capital. The arms and ammunition, however, have not yet been received from the customs house. "Little by little" is the manner in which Gen. Huerta proposes to permit their delivery to the embassy.

W. M. German, M.P., Ill.

OTTAWA, March 21.—W. M. German, Liberal M.P. for Welland, is seriously ill at his apartments in the Victoria Chambers. He is suffering from an affection of the heart. Mr. German came into prominence in 1911, when he opposed his party on the reciprocity issue.

SPRING BLOOD IS WATERY BLOOD

How to Get New Health and New Strength at This Season

Spring ailments are not imaginary. Even the most robust find the winter months most trying to their health. Confinement indoors, often in overheated and nearly always badly ventilated rooms—in the home, the office, the shop and the schools, taxes the vitality of even the strongest. The blood becomes thin and watery and is clogged with impurities. Some people have headaches and a feeling of langour. Others are low-spirited and nervous. Still others are troubled with disfiguring pimples and skin eruptions, while some get up in the morning feeling just as tired as when they went to bed. These are all spring symptoms that the blood is out of order and that a medicine is needed Many people take purgative medicines in the spring. This is a serious mistake. You cannot cure yourself with a medicine that gallops through your system and leaves you weaker still This is all that a purgative does. What you need to give you health and strength in the spring is a tonic medicine that will enrich the blood and soothe the jangled nerves. And the one always reliable tonic and blood builder is Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. These Pills not only banish spring weakness, but guard you against the more serious ailments that follow, such as anaemia, nervous debility, indigestion, rehumatism, and other diseases due to bad blood.

Mrs. Freeman Leslie Greenwich, N. S., writes: "We have found Dr. Williams' Pink Pills the very best family medicine there is. I was completely run-down and could not sleep or do my work. I was very nervous and the least sound startled me. I began using Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and they soon brought me back to the best of good health. They also cured my husband when he was suffering from a severe attack of rheumatism."

If you are ailing this spring you cannot afford, in your own interest, to overlook so valuable a medicine as Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

GAUTHIER ENTERS CABINET.

French Senator Comes To Assistance of Government—Royalist Shot.

PARIS, March 21.—The gap in the French Cabinet caused by the resignation of Ernest Monis from the Ministry of Marine was filled yesterday by the appointment to the post of Senator Armand Gauthier, a former Minister of Public Works.

Premier Doumergue, who had been much disturbed by the upheaval in the Government specially requested Senator Gauthier, a member of the same political group, to assist him.

Senator Gauthier, after some deliberation, consented to take the portfolio.

The police and military authorities took great precautions yesterday to prevent any disturbances during the funeral of Gaston Calmette. All along the route of the procession detachments of police were stationed in readiness to suppress demonstrations. In one disturbance a Royalist sympathizer was shot.

Girl Shot Cleaning Gun.

GUELPH, March 21.—A shooting accident occurred at the home of William Anderson, near Campbellville, when Annie Anderson, a girl nine years of age, had a narrow escape from instant death. John Anderson, her brother, was engaged in cleaning a rifle when his sister Annie came from school. The young man was not aware that the gun was loaded and snapped the trigger. An explosion followed, the bullet striking the girl in the neck just below the base of the skull. She is in a critical condition and is partially paralyzed.

Naval Tug in Danger.

CURLING, Nfld., March 21.—The United States naval tug Potomac which was boarded Thursday by a salvage crew of six men, after drifting derelict in the Gulf of St. Lawrence for six weeks, was swept by offshore winds yesterday into a position of danger for both vessel and crew. The Potomac last night was twelve miles northwest of Keppel Island, off Ingornachoix Bay, still fast in the drift ice that packs the gulf.

CORRESPONDENTS DIFFER.

Strength of Ulstermen Seen From Two View-points.

LONDON, March 21.—In view of the partisan claims regarding the number of men, the organization and equipment of the Ulster volunteers' statements by Col. Descourt, military correspondent of The London Times, and H. W. Nevinson, a prominent Liberal writer of The Nation, who have been touring Ulster, are important.

Col. Descourt says the 110,00 men enrolled are in the flower of their age and of excellent physique. Decentralization has been the system of organization. Each county forms a separate unit. There are 65 battalions, of which there are eighteen in Belfast. The volunteers have 400 motor cars, 200 motor cycles, and a complete system of communication by flags, lamps and heliographs. Eighty thousand rifles, according to Col. Descourt, have been distributed in parcels each containing five, to selected men so that wholesale seizure of the weapons would be impossible.

Mr. Nevinson intimates that between 20,000 and 100,000 men will respond to call for the mobilization of the volunteers. He thinks the rifles of the volunteers obsolete and of several different patterns, and that ammunition is scarce.

"In scattered groups," continued Mr. Nevinson, "they would try to harass the regular army sent to occupy the country. The movement, therefore, is not a bluff proper. Neither is it formidable from a military point of view. The intention is serious though fantastic, and it is formidable because no one wants to shoot his own people."

For Freckled, Rough Or Spotty Complexions

The freckling, discoloring or roughening to which delicate skins are subject after exposure to wind or sun, often appearing in early spring, may readily be got rid of. Mercolized wax, spread lightly over the face before retiring and removed in the morning with soap and water, completely peels off the discolored skin. Get an ounce of the wax at any druggist's. There's no more effective way of banishing freckles or other cuticle defects. Little skin particles come off each day, so the process doesn't even temporarily mar the complexion, and one soon acquires a brand new, spotless, girlishly beautiful face.

Wrinkles caused by weather, worry, or illness, are best treated by a simple solution of powdered saxolite, 1 oz., dissolved in ½ pt. witch hazel. Bathing the face in this produces a truly marvellous transformation.

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES.

Charles Ballard, a Texan, has been kidnapped by five Mexicans near Carrizo Springs, Texas.

The conference of the trans-Atlantic shipping companies broke up at Berlin yesterday, to meet again May 1, without reaching any settlement.

An elaborate exposition was opened with great ceremony in Tokio yesterday in commemoration of the opening of the reign of Emperor Yoshihito.

Cadet Gilbert Fry, Montreal, of the Royal Military College, Kingston fell off a water tower yesterday, a distance of over a 100 feet, and was killed instantly.

Mrs. John D. Ross, of Nairn, Ont. whose husband died only a week ago narrowly escaped death when she was thrown from a buggy down a thirty foot embankment.

Harry Schaefer, aged 19, was found guilty in New York yesterday in the second degree of the murder of Wm. Martin, of Toronto. He will be sentenced March 25.

The business section of Dunrea, Man., was wiped out by a fire which started at four o'clock yesterday morning in the town hall, causing property damage of nearly $30,000.

BIG CRACKS ON HAND AND FINGERS

Eczema for Three Years. Broke Out on Head in Scales. Itched and Burned Badly. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Cured.

Lyons Brook, N. S. — "I suffered with eczema for three years. It started on my hands first in sores between my fingers and all over the palms of my hand and fingers were big cracks. Then it broke out on my head in sores. It itched and burned so badly I could not sleep. It was so itching and burning that I scratched and made sores and my hair came out awfully bad. I did not know what it was.

"I was treated for a long time and it did not do any good. I gave up my work for a month but as soon as I started doing my house-work again my hands got just as bad as ever. I used two bottles of ——— and it did not do any good. One day I read about Cuticura Soap and Ointment and decided to try them. I sent for a sample and I used them till I saw it stopped the itching and burning, so I got three cakes of Cuticura Soap and a box of Cuticura Ointment and then cured me." (Signed) Mrs. P. J. McKearney, May 27, 1913.

Not only are Cuticura Soap and Ointment most valuable in the treatment of eczemas and other distressing eruptions of skin and scalp, but no other emollients do so much for pimples, blackheads, red, rough skins, itching, scaly scalps, dandruff, dry, thin and falling hair, chapped hands and shapeless nails, nor do it so economically. Sold by druggists and dealers everywhere. For a liberal free sample of each, with 32-p. book, send post-card to Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Dept. D, Boston, U. S. A.

IF KIDNEYS ACT BAD TAKE SALTS

Says Backache is Sign You Have Been Eating Too Much Meat

When you wake up with backache and dull misery in the kidney region it generally means you have been eating too much meat, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid, which overworks the kidneys in their effort to filter it from the blood and they become sort of paralyzed and loggy. When your kidneys get sluggish and clog you must relieve them, like you relieve your bowels; removing all the body's urinous waste, else you have backache, sick headache, dizzy spells; your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment, channels often get sore, water scalds, and you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night.

Either consult a good, reliable physician at once or get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize acids in the urine, so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

Reject Compulsory Service.

LONDON, March 21.—The House of Lords, by a vote of 53 to 24, yesterday rejected the bill introduced by Lord Willoughby De Broke for the purpose of making military service compulsory amongst the well-to-do. Lord Harris dubbed the proposal one to "form a kid glove brigade." Lord Methuen said that it would be better to establish national cadet training; and Lord Lansdowne expressed the fear that the proposition if adopted, would establish a military caste which would be repugnant to British public opinion.

Miss Pankhurst Reappears.

LONDON, March 21—Sylvia Pankhurst, the militant suffragette, ill and haggard, made a dramatic appearance at a meeting of suffragettes in the Limehouse district last night. Lying in an ambulance, attended by nurses who administered stimulants to her, Miss Pankhurst delivered a brief speech, which aroused her audience to great enthusiasm.

KING AN INVENTOR.

His Majesty Has Sold Patent For a Novel Fireplace.

LONDON, March 21. — King George's has just sold the patent for a movable fireplace. In a new workingmen's flat being erected in South London on the estate of the Duchy of Lancaster, which is the property of the Prince of Wales, this novel fireplace is being used. It is so constructed that when fixed in a wall dividing two rooms it can be moved backwards or forwards to make one fire serve the two rooms, thus economizing fuel. The fireplaces were the idea of the King, and a provisional patent was taken out. The King refused $15,000 for the patent two years ago. The contractor who is building the flats has now purchased the patent for $25,000, and the money has been settled on Prince John, the King's youngest child.

SIR GEO. W. ROSS' ESTATE.

Probate of Will Shows That It Amounted to $46,692.

TORONTO, March 21.—The will of the late Sir George Ross disposes of an estate of $46,692, made up as follows: Real estate—Leasehold, 2 Elmsley place, $8,000; freehold, 169 Macpherson avenue, $3,500; 257 Davenport road, $3,000; a house on Richmond street, Strathroy, $1,000.

The balance of the estate is personal.

To Lady Ross, in view of her dower, is bequeathed an income of $1,000 a year and the use of 169 Macpherson avenue for life. Margaret Ross, a sister, is granted the use of the Strathroy house for life. The balance of the estate is divided in eight equal shares among his children, Jennie, Nellie, George W., Talt, Mabel, Florence, and Duncan, and the children of his deceased daughter Margaret.

PETERBOROUGH, SATURDAY, MARCH 21, 1914

THE WAR OFFICE IS ACTIVE AND RESERVES ARE CALLED UPON

The British Cabinet is Awake to the Seriousness of the Situation in Ulster.

TO-DAY'S DEVELOPMENTS

Special Cable to The Examiner:

LONDON, Eng., March 21.—There is reason to believe that the Curragh officers' resignations so far from taking the ministry by surprise have been forced by the Government which is tired of the growing talk of the officers refusing to obey orders to move against Ulster, and resolved to test their loyalty before that real crisis arose. The reports say that the War Office ordered a notification to be submitted to the officers that, if unprepared to undertake military service in Ulster they could resign and would be dismissed from the army, forfeiting their pensions.

The Morning Post declares it will be the duty of the Unionist party to insist that under such circumstances the officers shall be reinstated without the loss of seniority. Sir Edward Grey, asked for a statement of views on the Irish crisis, declared he had nothing to add to the statements made by the Prime Minister on behalf of the Government. It is known, however, that Sir Edward Grey is in full accord with his colleagues at the present crisis, and the cabinet is working unanimously.

The Ulster men express confidence that the troops will refuse to obey orders to threaten the north.

CABINET AWAKE.

The cabinet is fully awake to the seriousness of the outlook. To-day ing the Nation, Henry W. Nevinson, a distinguished Liberal politician and war correspondent, reports as a result of investigation, that there are from 60,000 to 80,000 Ulster men who would answer the order for mobilisation, of whom about 25,000 are resolute on "Holy War." The men's equipment is modelled on the Boer method—bandolier, greatcoat, bag belt, water bottle, and leggings. These are trained for a guerilla warfare. Nevinson has clearly a great admiration for the volunteer officers, and reports many of them, while determined in preparations, are anxious for a wise settlement.

CONFERENCE WITH KING.

LONDON, Eng., March 21.—Colonel Seeley, Secretary for War, was summoned to Buckingham Palace, early this morning and had a long conference with the King. His Majesty is anxious that nothing should be done that would tend to inflame Ulster at the present time. All movements of troops will be confined to such operations as shall be considered necessary for the protection of public property. Orders have been sent out in the name of the King asking the soldiers to avoid any show of antagonism in their vigilance toward maintaining order. To-day being a general half-holiday, and followed by Sunday, it is thought that if Monday morning can be reached without disturbance one crisis will be past. All Protestant churches in Ulster will hold special services to-morrow with special prayers that justice may be obtained without recourse to force of arms.

WAR OFFICE ACTIVITY.

The greatest activity was shown around the War Office and the Admiralty Office this morning. All leaves of absence have been cancelled, and reserves are ordered to join the colours immediately. Sir Edward Carson and other Ulster leaders remained at Craig Avon to-day, under guard of an armed volunteer battalion.

LONDON, Eng., March 21.—The mutiny of two companies of the Dorsetshire Regiment stationed in Belfast is reported by the Pall Mall Gazette.

CASTLE OCCUPIED.

BELFAST, Ireland, March 21.—Carrick Fergus Castle, overlooking Belfast Lough, and commanding the approaches to this city by water, was occupied at dawn this morning by half a battalion of Yorkshire infantry and a battery of artillery brought there overnight by H.M.S. Pathfinder. This fortification has been unoccupied for years and commands the city. This is an adroit move of the Government to prevent Ulster volunteers taking possession of it. The place is historic as being the landing place of King William of Orange.

LONDON, Eng., March 21.—The Asquith government to-day issued an official statement that the movements of the troops in Ireland was not in any way aggressive, but merely to protect government property in case of necessity. This was the only reason, the statement said, and would remain the only reason for such movements.

PARADE IS OFF.

LONDONDERRY, Ireland, March 21.—On advice of John Redmond, who is desirous of restraining any provocation to conflict, the Nationalist volunteers here have called off the proposed parade arranged for to-morrow.

EGGS WERE DOWN TO 23 CTS. TO-DAY

Supply Was Plentiful and Demand Brisk—Butter at Average Price —Chickens Were Scarce and 'Away Up

ARRANGEMENTS WORK WELL

The price of eggs was pretty well flattened out on the market this morning. They were selling around 25 cents at 10 o'clock, but you could get supplies all the way to 23c. The demand was active, but it was not keen enough to hold up a 25 cent quotation. The eggs were too plentiful for that. Butter ranged around 35 cents, with some prices one and two cents lower. The supply was normal. Chickens were not plentiful and the farmers' wives quoted as if they were Dodo birds. One dollar and $1.25 each was a trifle high for most buyers. The outside market was small. Pork sold around 14 and 15 cents. A small quantity of lamb brought a stiff price. Orange day was recognised by an unusually heavy supply of the California product. It might be remarked on the side that the people are taking kindly to the new entrance and exit arrangements. This morning there was practically no confusion, no flocking like sheep. The Market Committee of the Council did a good stroke of business when they prepared the present directions.

BIG REWARD IS OFFERED FOR ARREST

Chief Thompson has received a circular from the Chief of Montreal police department, offering $1,000 reward for the arrest of Ismael Bouret, and Alphonse Foucault, who are wanted there for murder and robbery. Bouret is a saddler by trade; 33 years of age, 5 ft. 6 ins. tall, and weighs 130 lbs. slim build and grey hair, with blue eyes, and scar on the upper lip. Foucault is 5 ft. 5 ins. tall, dark complexion, dark hair, smallpox marks on his face, third finger on right hand amputated, brown eyes and 140 lbs. weight.

MISSIONARIES FOR THE HOME FIELD

TORONTO, March 21—The Home Mission Board concluded its meeting at a late hour last night. The day was spent in considering the claims of the various Presbyteries for the past quarter, in fixing the grants for the new year and in appointing missionaries to the various mission fields for the summer months. For the first time in many years the Home Mission Board found that they had more missionaries than they were able to find fields for. There were before the Board over 500 applications. About 400 were assigned fields. There were many applications from the universities of the Old Country, also from theological seminaries of the United States.

Misionaries were assigned to the various Presbyteries in part, as follows:

Peterborough—G. Telford, E. A. Thompson.

Lindsay—Rev. J. A. Mann, W. J. Scott.

PROGRAMME FOR THE COMING WEEK AT "THE GRAND"

Next Monday evening "The Grand" will again commence its usual six re programme of motion pictures. For Monday and Tuesday an exceedingly fine feature has been secured, entitled "Brother Officers." This is a four reel subject and deals with life in the British Army. In addition to this two other good reels will be shown, changing every day. The prices will be 10c. for adults and 5c. for children. The management wish to thank the public for the splendid patronage given the celebrated "Kleine" feature pictures and feel confident that the programme which has been arranged for the coming week will please their patrons. Next week the first performance will commence at 7.30 and the second at 9 o'clock p.m. Matinees will be held on Saturdays only at 2.30 and 4.00 p.m.

STAFF OF THE ENGINEERING DEPARTMENT

Has Been Cut Down—The New By-Law Respecting Dogs and the Licensing Thereof

CITY HALL NEWS

The staff of the City's engineering department has been reduced. Miss Adamson, who for some months past has occupied the position of stenographer, having retired in favour of Mr. T. Q. Quartermaine. The latter will undertake the duties of Miss Adamson in addition to his own. It is understood that the present staff will be kept intact for this year at least

The Dog By-law.

Owners of dogs will have until May the first to conform to the provisions of the new by-law respecting dogs. Canines caught running at large after that date without the regulation tag will render themselves liable to enforced incarceration, and subsequent destruction unless claimed within forty-eight hours. A special effort will be made to see that every dog in the City is properly licensed.

The Relief Officer.

It is practically understood that Mr. F. W. Miller, Relief Officer, will be appointed by the Council to undertake the work of investigating applications for admission to the local hospitals under the indigency clause. Mr. Miller has stated that he will have to relinquish his duties as Dominion Immigration Officer in event of such an appointment being made final. This will necessitate an increase in salary for Mr. Miller, as the new apointment, combined with that of City Relief Officer, will require his whole time. During the first two months of the year, Mr. Miller had over fifty cases to investigate. The new arrangement will occasion an even larger number.

MARTIN LIBBY RELATES TRAGIC CIRCUMSTANCES OF HIS BROTHER'S DEATH

The Two Were Working on Top Floor of Five Storey Building Martin Reached the Street Safely and Looking Saw His Brother at a Window---Then He Disappeared.

The remains of the late Walter Libby, who was burned to death in a Detroit fire on Thursday last, arrived in the City on the C.P.R. midnight train last night.

Mr. Martin Libby, his brother, relating the incidents of the fire, said that both he and his brother were working on the top floor of a five storey building. At the time the fire occurred all were busily engaged, and as soon as the alarm was sounded, a rush was made for the street. He had reached the bottom floor, and looking up, saw his brother at the window of the top storey. He then disappeared into the blazing building. It is not known for what purpose he returned. Some say that he went to send a telephone alarm for the Fire Department, and others say that he returned for the company's books, but the real object of his mission into the blazing building will never be known. It seems from facts which can be gathered, that when he wanted to get out, he was cut off by the flames and smoke.

When he appeared at the window, a string lader was thrown for a means of escape from the horrible death which was his ultimate fate, so it must be concluded that some important mission had to be fulfilled in the mass of flames, but what—no one will ever know. His body was later found, charred among the ruins, along with other unfortunate employees.

The funeral will take place on Monday afternoon at 2.30 to the Little Lake Cemetery. Service will be held at the house at 2 o'clock. The Rev. H. J. Keith will officiate.

FIRES IN PETERBORO' COUNTIES HAVE STRIPPED 150,000 ACRES OF PINE

OTTAWA, March 20.—The Trent Watershed Survey by C. S. Howe and J. H. White, issued by the Commission of Conservation, serves to exhibit in detailed manner the consequences of the old system of timber licenses, consequences which the commissioners declare warrant a discontinuance of that system.

At the present time the pine has practically all been taken from the Trent Watershed, and fires have repeatedly swept the remaining timber growth so that it is of little commercial value, and a man-made desert has resulted over much of the area. In the Townships of Methuen, Anstruther, and Burleigh alone, nearly 150,000 acres of such desert exist. After half a century of the opening of settlement in this region 1,100 square miles contain less than 15,000 people, and hardly 10 per cent. of 35 townships included in the survey have been cleared for farm purposes. That farming on a shallow glacial drift is a mistake is shown by the multitude of abandoned farms, 1,904 of which were for sale for taxes in 1911. The decrease in population has been 156 per cent. in the last decade.

The annual loss from an average of 14,000 acres burned over each year is calculated at $30,000. There is nevertheless still prospects of values in the young pine and poplar of protection of 8,000,000, the capital value of this young forest if property managed, is set at $50,000,000. The bulk of the land is privately owned, 725 square miles only being crown lands under the Province.

The commission recommends the relocation of the farming population of the Trent Valley, upon suitable lands elsewhere, and reforestation under Provincial ownership.

GRAND TRUNK RAILWAY PAVILION

PANAMA-PACIFIC EXPOSITION, SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., 1915.

The Grand Trunk Pavilion, which will occupy a prominent position in the railway plaza at the northeast corner of the grounds of the Panama-Pacific Exposition, will be directly opposite the mammoth machinery palace, adjacent to the passenger ferry slips, and overlooking San Francisco Bay. As will be observed the design is simple in outline and Spanish renaissance in character, making a handsome and ornate structure. The walls will be of stucco, rough finish and tinted a soft cream shade, relieved with an ornamental enriched band carried around the building under the eaves. Shields and fountains have been effectively placed to enhance the decorative effect of the building. The roof will be covered with a rich Spanish tile. The design for this building was the one accepted by the Exposition authorities as the standard for all the other buildings which will be erected on the railway plaza. This pavilion will house the exhibits of both the Grand Trunk Railway and the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway. Messrs. Ross and Macdonald of Montreal, are the architects.

EASY TO HIDE IN CITIES

NEW YORK, March 21. — How easy it is to hide one's identity in a big city was exemplified in a police court case here recently. An elderly woman and a young man, giving the false names of Mrs. Florence Miller and Samuel J. Miller, were arraigned, charged with having attempted suicide last Friday in a west side flat they had hired.

They are mother and son and had sunk from a stage of affluence to that of starvation.

They had not revealed their identity to the attendants of the hospital, where they were taken after they had tried to die by gas asphyxiation, nor did they tell the magistrate who they were. To aid them, Mrs. Wise, wife of Dr. Stephen S. Wise, of the Free synagogue, appeared in court.

"I understand this woman and her son were formerly wealthy," said Mrs. Wise to the magistrate. "They suffered misfortunes and became discouraged. Her husband once was worth nearly a million dollars. They have prominent friends in New Orleans, who will doubtless come to their aid. I am ready to take care of them until help arrives."

The "Millers" were discharged and went away with Mrs. Wise. Later Mrs. Wise said she had communicated with friends of the couple in the South and that they would care for them.

OPPOSE IRON BOUNTY

OTTAWA, March 21.—The H... spent most of the day in committee of supply on estimates of the Public Works Department.

Supplementary estimates for present fiscal year, which ends March 31, were tabled in the Commons yesterday. They total $3,196,444. ... includes the following items: Loss by fire at Central Experimental Farm, $25,000; administering Meat and Canned Foods Act, $30,000; administering Destructive Insect and Pest Act, $16,000; immigration agents, $200,000; seed grain to settlers on unpatented lands, $30,000; maintenance for militia, $6,000; expenses on commission before Railway Board, $25,000; Interprovincial and International Rideau Hall improvements, $2,... steam service by Atlantic to Australia, $6,666; naval patrol of northern waters, $125,000; fisheries patrol service, $17,500; expenses under Canada Temperance Act, $20,... liquidation of Union Life Assurance Co., $30,000; relieving distress as result of great lakes storm, $25,... telegraph lines, $96,000; rural mail delivery, $215,000; for railways on account of new rates, $135,000.

A rather long drawn out discussion arose in committee of supply over an item in the Public Works estimates for the new departmental buildings in Ottawa.

W. F. Maclean (South York) ... that the Government, before embarking upon such a large expenditure of money, had first to consider the possibility that Parliament might, some future date, decide to move the seat of government to some other place. Personally, Mr. Maclean favored some place on the Bay of Quinte. Ottawa was very hot in summer and cold in winter.

In his opinion it would be a wise plan for the Government to acquire a large area of land, which could be converted into a national capital such as Australia has created.

Hon. Mr. Rogers, in reply, ... that the Government had appointed a committee some time ago to draw up a plan for making Ottawa the Federal district. The people of Ottawa had already voted in favor of the project, but the Government could not act in the matter until they received the commission's report.

At the evening sitting, Mr. Fa... (W. Lambton) took occasion to refer to the House an article which appeared in last evening's Montreal Star. The Star despatches quoted Yorkshire Post as saying that Orangemen of Ulster have been armed by Col. Sam Hughes that no obstacles would be placed in the way of the thousand picked Canadians who are leaving in the spring to take part in the Ulster uprising. Mr. Fa... dee thought the Minister of Militia should be directed by the Government to refrain from giving such assurances.

Hon. Robert Rogers said in the absence of Col Hughes it was unfair to presume that he was correctly quoted by the British newspapers.

Mr. Kyte (Richmond, N.S.) ... ed that no items in any way related to the expenditures of the Militia Department should be considered ... till Col. Hughes said to the House whether or not he was correctly quoted.

Hon. Mr. Lemieux took occasion to remind the House of Mr. Carvell's presence at the Carson ... quet. Was it the intention of the present Government, he asked, to stand behind the Ulster men?

Some estimates of the Public Works Department in which the Militia Department is interested will be held over until the colonel explains whether or not he was correctly quoted.

A deputation representing the Dominion Council of Agriculture waited upon the Premier and ... W. T. White yesterday to protest against the reported proposal to give further assistance to the iron and steel manufacturers either by way of bounties or by imposing a duty on pig iron, iron rods, bars or other ... products.

The deputation was promised that its representations would be given full consideration before any ... changes were announced.

ULSTER AND HOME RULE.

There is a good deal of sensational news sent across the ocean in regard to the danger of serious uprising in Ulster over Home Rule—the rumours ranging from disorder to civil war. It is very probable that the situation is greatly exaggerated. The enterprise of the news agents should be reckoned with. Some of them must have a "story" to cable, even if there is not the best foundation in fact for it. It is more than possible that the worst happening in Ulster will be a tempest in a tea-pot. It must be remembered that Ulster is not entirely opposed to Home Rule as the loud mouthings of a few agitators would lead us to believe. The nine counties of Ulster send a majority of Home Rule members to the Imperial parliament. True, it is only a majority of one, but it shows how equally sentiment in Ulster for and against Home Rule is divided. This division is so equal that talk of oppression of the minority is as unwarranted as is the anticipation of overt resistance to the will of the Imperial Parliament, a danger so remote that the situation may be playfully treated by suggesting that if there is "ruction" in Ulster over Home Rule, the legend of the Kilkenny cats might be applied to the opposing parties.

There is a veiled threat that if Home Rule is "forced" upon Ulster, the minority in the only two counties where the opponents of Home Rule are in a considerable majority, may be made very uncomfortable. This would not be likely; first because it would be bad policy. There are minorities in all parts of Ireland, and it would be a bad thing if Ulster set the example of bad treatment of minorities. It is unlikely that when it comes to the point, any section of Ireland imbued by centuries of enjoyment and familiarity with the principles of equal treatment inherent in British institutions, would so far forget itself as to disregard a great national principle.

Home Rule is not a religious question. In Ireland's long struggle for the elementary rights of self government, the cause has been led by almost as many great Protestants as Catholics. In Ulster itself there is a large Protestant element in favour of Home Rule; even one division of Belfast sends a Home Rule member to Parliament. Four counties of Ulster—Down, Antrim, Derry and Armagh, contain 80 per cent. of all the Ulster Protestants, though in Derry and Armagh the religious divisions are nearly equal. Outside these four counties the rest of Ulster, the other five counties, is overwhelmingly Catholic in population. So that rebellious Ulster becomes narrowed down to four, or even two, counties, where the Protestant element is in large majority. Home Rule is not a question of religion, but of fair play. We have self-government in Canada and we are loyal to the Crown and the Empire, largely because of this fact. Ireland demands Home Rule almost unanimously—out of its thirty-two counties, only two, by any considerable majority, are opposed to it. Under such circumstances it seems that the rebellion of Ulster, its dictation of term, is a case of the tail wagging the dog. The opponents of Home Rule are not improving their case as the time goes by. Asquith has given the Ulster recalcitrants a chance to vote themselves out of Home Rule, but their lack of sincerity is shown by re jecting the offer. If Ulster want vote, is it likely to fight?

FIRE WASTE AND SAFETY.

During the past winter Toronto has suffered from more than its normal proportion of big fires—unusually destructive of life and property. Whether or not all of these fires were due to the cause which made the burning of the Woodbine Hotel such a holocaust, that of itself is a lesson. There seems to be no blame attached to the fire fighting department of the City, that was efficient; in that regard the city had value for the money spent upon it. Criminally indiffrent building was the cause of the late fire, and the city is to blame for not exercising more rigid supervision and more exact compliance with the building by-laws. There is no doubt that buildings can be built to be practically fire-proof, and if not perfectly fire-proof, so "slow burning" that loss of life can be avoided; there would be abundant time to escape. There is no excuse for not building so well that the danger of fire is virtually eliminated. While, of course, in the case of the hotel mentioned, the contractors or builders are to blame, the primary blame rests upon the city authorities who neglected proper supervision.

This should be, and is, a lesson to Peterborough. Though the efficiency of our fire department and our generally better class of buildings compared with other cities, may be, a fair explanation of our immunity from serious fire, yet, there should be care taken to preserve and improve these conditions. Any cheeseparing that would tend to lessen the efficiency of our fire department would be fatal false economy; and any relaxation of our building by-laws would come under the same condemnation. Building by-laws are devised in the public interest, and should not be relaxed in the interests of individuals—just for the sake of saving a few dollars at the risk of creating dangerous conditions. Such exemptions, while wrong in principle, tend to defeat the ends of a building by-law. The general public will have a right to expect similar favours, or if they do not, will be inclined to disregard the by-law. They can reasonably reason that the by-law will not be strictly enforced by authorities that themselves break it by relieving individuals from its requirements. Every citizen should be placed upon an equal footing. A law, or bylaw designed to apply to all should apply to all. If it is unfair or inadequate it should be improved. But, in any event, let the building bylaw be enforced so that the danger of accident from fires, or other accidents, will be reduced to the lowest point. Then our rate of fire loss will be kept at the low point to which our excellent fire department keeps it, which they will continue to do more easily if they are helped by the erection of buildings that are reasonably fire proof. In the case of the Turnbull building, while so much attention has been given to secure undoubted strength of structure, incidentally it has been made virtually fire proof. The floors are about all the wood used in the structure, and being made solid with a thickness of six inches of pine spiked into one solid piece, the thickness is increased to seven inches by the finish of maple flooring. A floor of this kind, while not actually fire proof, would be as slow burning as a saw-log, without assisting fuel; and no danger of loss of life from rapid combustion could arise or exist. "Safety First" is an admirable motto, and it would pay the city to have our authorities bear this in mind when dealing with our fire department and our building by-law—complementary elements in securing the city and citizens from the danger of extensively destructive fires.

The world's production of tin last year is estimated at 120,000 tons, a gain of about 7,500 tons over 1912.

The purchase of 24 pieces of motor driven fire apparatus and a motor fire boat is planned for London.

4. A Court of Revision will be held on the 7th day of April, 1914, at 8 o'clock p.m., in the City Council Chamber, for the purpose of hearing complaints against the proposed assessments, or the accuracy of frontage measurements, and any other complaint which persons interested may desire to make and which is by law cognizable by the Court.

5. The special assessment, showing the special rate per foot frontage, the properties assessed, the name of owners and other particulars is open for inspection in the office of the undersigned.

Dated at Peterborough, March 19th, 1914.

S. R. ARMSTRONG,
Clerk.

Do You Suffer From Nervous Headache?

If so you know the distress of it, the despondency it breeds, the incapacity for any real enjoyment, not to say for the strenuous work of life. Why suffer longer?

Of all the known remedies Dr. Stohr's KEPHALDOL is the safest, the quickest, and in results the most permanent. It cures and leaves no injurious after-effects. Even where the heart is weak KEPHALDOL may be taken with confidence. Can that be said of other remedies? This absence of cardiac depression after the use of Kephaldol explains above all else the enthusiastic endorsement by medical men in all countries.

KEPHALDOL, discovered and introduced by Dr. Stohr of Vienna, not only takes the place of dangerous Headache powders, but is equally valuable in all Nerve Pains, Neuralgia, Neuritis, also in Gout, Rheumatism, etc. KEPHALDOL is the pain-reliever that NEVER FAILS.

Dr. Stohr's KEPHALDOL does not cause intestinal irritation and is far preferable to Quinine, Phenacetin and the like. Many thousands of letters from medical men testify to the innocuous usefulness of this natural remedy. Pain cannot resist it. Its effect is immediate, safe, positive and permanent.

No one who uses KEPHALDOL fails to praise it.

MISS E. MOSS, Cambria Cottage, Ruardean, Eng., says: "I have suffered from Headache for many years, and find the KEPHALDOL Tablets give greater relief than any other remedy. I used to be utterly prostrate when I had an attack, but am now able to continue my ordinary duties."

"I find KEPHALDOL Tablets all you say. Each time they have cleared my headache off in a few minutes. I shall always keep them by me." MRS. J. WHITE, 21 Prince of Wales Ave., Reading.

622 Lafontaine St., Maisonneuve, Montreal, Sept. 5th, 1913.

"I have suffered from Nervous Headache 8 or 9 years and have spent over seventy dollars for doctors' bills and drugs and got no relief. I saw an advertisement in an English paper for KEPHALDOL, addressed to my sister and had a small bottle sent out, and I am pleased with the results. It is the only remedy that has given me any relief."

Life Problem Club.

Mr. J. W. Firth, B.A., of the Collegiate staff will address the Club Sunday afternoon at 4.15. All young men are invited.

Senior Leaders Corps.

The Senior Leaders Corps will meet for floor work at 6 o'clock to-night, when every member is requested to be present. Supper will be served at 7 o'clock.

Arrangements for the great "Tramps' Reunion" are well under way and, judging from the way the boys are taking hold, bespeaks an even larger attendance than the 'Hayseed Carnival". April 2nd and 3rd are "Tramps" days.

Trades And Labour Notes

By Official Scribe

The usual fortnightly meeting was held on Wednesday last, J. J. Hartley presiding.

The 25c Minimum.

The city clerk sent a reply to the Council's request for a 25c minimum for city street employees. Mr. Armstrong stated that the chairman of the Board of Works had to give work to aged and infirm men, to whom such a sum per hour was excessive. The Trades and Labour Council decided, after the latter was read, that old men have to be cared for as well as their younger brethren, and a strong committee was nominated to interview the Board of Works at its next session, and personally plead the cause of the city's labourers.

Labour Leaders Needed.

On a motion brought forward by a representative from the largest existing local, the Council decided that a movement would be made in the direction of labour education, by asking speakers, prominent in the labour world, to speak on subjects of vital importance to the working man. The meetings would be open and announced in the local press, and it is to be hoped that the working men of the city would attend and take advantage of lessons learned from wide experience, as a galaxy of talent is always available.

A Technical Point.

Representatives from Local 191, American Federation of Musicians, wanted to know why the Council endorsed the Claytoff houses and placed the Grand Opera House on the unfair list. The Foyal employed union stage hands and non-union musicians, the Grand union musicians and non-union stage hands. A warm discussion took place over this point, the union musicians of the Grand saying they could not come out without the sanction of their International, and objected to being vilified for their action in not leaving the Turner House in sympathy with the stage employees. The secretary then read a communication from Owen Miller, Secretary of the A.F. of M., who reported himself looking into the matter so as to bring about a settlement.

FOOLED THE EXPRESSMEN

Some young lady with a misguided conception of humour put a practical joke over on half a dozen expressmen in the City lastnight. She telephoned each expressman and delivered a message that two trunks were to be taken to the Station. Different addresses were given and there were expressmen in all parts of the City looking for mythical trunks and calling on citizens who knew nothing of any luggage to be transported.

All Day Meeting In The Tabernacle

The four days' special meetings being held in Bethany Tabernacle will close with an "All-day Meeting" to-morrow, with services at 11 a.m., 3 and 7 p.m. Rev. E. J. Richards, the New York Evangelist, spoke last night on the subject of the "Complete Christian." He said the complete Christian must be enlightened. He must "taste the Heavenly gift"; he must be a partner of the Holy Ghost; he must have an appetite for the Word of God, and he must be a partaker of the "Power of the age to come."

To-morrow afternoon Mrs. Ekvall will address the audience in the Chinese native costume.

The service to-night will begin promptly at 8 o'clock. All are welcome.

"UNCLE TOM'S CABIN"

An Old Favourite in a Brand New Way.

If press opinions count for anything, Kibble and Martin's production of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" which will be seen at the Grand Opera House Thursday, March 26, matinee and evening, has caught the public fancy. The theatres where the offering has been made are said to have been crowded at every performance and no reasonable doubt remains that business on the season will reach a figure that will astonish the dramatic world. For a play holding the stage over fifty years within which period not a single season has elapsed during which it was entirely absent from the theatre, "Uncle Tom's Cabin" still exhibits wonderful vitality. Scorned, ridiculed and rejected of the elect in the more important theatres a few years ago, it is now ensconced in the very homes of art and thousands are weeping and laughing over its various incidents nightly. I doubt whether there ever has been so lavish and adequate a production of this play as that which Kibble and Martin will bring to our City. The scenes which are displayed could not easily be improved. Each pictures the reality as closely as paint and canvas will permit, and the stage perspective is so deep that the effect is exceptionally pleasing. The company is also worthy of its environment. So many actors of pleasing reputation have never before been seen engaged together in this play. The most pleasing chorus of twenty coloured men and women is a decided novelty, and at all points Kibble and Martin have made plain what brains, money and energy can accomplish.

FALLING HAIR AND ITCHING SCALP

Entirely Needless — Use Parisian Sage. It Quickly Removes Dandruff—Your Head Feels Fine.

Now that Parisian Sage—a scientific preparation that supplies hair and scalp needs—can be had at any drug or toilet counter, it is certainly needless to have thin, brittle, matted, stringy or faded hair. No matter how unsightly the hair, how badly it is falling, or how much dandruff, just spend a few minutes each day for a week and rub a little Parisian Sage into the scalp and through the hair. All dandruff is removed with one application, the hair roots are nourished and stimulated to grow new hair, itching scalp and falling hair cease—your head feels fine. Best of all, the hair becomes soft, fluffy, abundant and radiant with life and beauty.

Parisian Sage is one of the most pleasant, invigorating and refreshing hair tonics. No cheap perfumery odour—no disagreeable concoctions—but a daintily perfumed tea-coloured liquid that proves its goodness the first time it is used.

You will be surprised and delighted with Parisian Sage. Try at least one fifty cent bottle. The Warne Drug Co. will refund the purchase price if you are not satisfied.

Look for the trade-mark—"The Girl with the Auburn Hair"—it's on every package—accept no other.

Presentation To Mr. Edds

Mr. Frank Edds, who has been advertising manager for the Cressman Company, Limited, was the recipient of an address and presentation by the employees of the store last evening on the occasion of his severing his connection with the company.

Mr. Edds during his year and a half in Peterborough, has made many friends, and he will be greatly missed here. He was a capable advertising man and window decorator, and is leaving for Weyburn, Sask., to handle advertising extensively for the largest firm there. He has the best wishes of the friends he made in Peterborough for success in his new home.

Mr. Edds' successor will be in the city shortly.

The New Millinery Spring Modes

Pretty Showings at Mrs. W. B. Armstrong's Peterborough Millinery Parlours

There are many fantasies in this season's millinery creations, and the display made by Mrs. W. B. Armstrong in her Peterborough millinery parlours, show that careful discrimination so essential to the varied tastes of ladies. For the success of one's spring or Easter suit or dress, much depends upon the selection of the hat. Unless the lady is strong minded it will be difficult to refrain from buying more than one headpiece from the fetching styles in shapes, materials and trim-up displayed among Mrs. Armstrong's beautiful creations of imported hats, or the excellent trims by her own skillful trimmers. Show rooms are upstairs in the well-lighted old T.A.S. rooms, George Street.

Horses Buried Under Load Of Logs Still Live

An accident occurred on the "Cage Hill," Haliburton, last week that might have been much more serious than it was. Wm. Spiers was driving down the hill, which is very steep and covered for about 40 or 50 yards with a snow shed, with a heavy load of new-sawn hardwood lumber, when the chain broke. The top of the load and the teamster were thrown clear over the horses, while the main part of the load slid forward and buried the horses. There they remained until help was brought from the village. To the surprise of all neither man nor team were at all seriously injured, all being able to resume work the same afternoon.

ADDRESS BY MISS M. McCARTHY AT T.A.S. LADIES' LIT.

Interesting Paper on One of the Latter Day English Poets—Musical Programme

The Ladies' Literary Society of St. Peter's T.A.S. held a meeting last evening, when a very interesting paper on "Francis Thompson" was read by Miss Mamie McCarthy. The musical programme, under the direction of Miss L. Hurley, the chairlady, was as follows.

Instrumental solo— Miss M. Gorman.
Recitation—Miss Carr.
Vocal solo—Mr. Collins.

Miss McCarthy gave a brief sketch of the life of Francis Thompson, the English poet, who was born in 1859, and died in 1907. His short life was indeed a varied one, marked as it was, by poverty, disease and suffering from beginning to end. He had a constitutional tendency towards consumption, and was habitually addicted to the use of opium. This habit, contracted after reading De Quincey's "Confessions of an Opium Eater," that startlingly realistic account of the temptations and vicissitudes of a drug fiend, was doubtless the cause of his early death and of the loss to the world of further manifestations of his strange genius. He lived for years a life of helpless destitution, sleeping in cheap lodging houses and in the city parks, selling matches and newspapers, and finally becoming an odd man in the shop of a friendly bootmaker. From this life he was rescued by Mr Wilfrid Meynell, the father of his biographer, who watched over him with almost paternal devotion, sending him to a private hospital, where for a time he overcame his opium habit. Mrs. Meynell, the poetness, encouraged, consoled and tended him with perfect sweetness and devotion. But his temperament could brook no restraint, however loving, and he would wander away, frequently changing his lodgings, leaving no address, and something departing from London altogether.

It was while he was living for a time in a monastery in Sussex ,that the flame of his genius blossomed suddenly, and he wrote that magnificent poem, "The Hound of Heaven," his masterpiece. This poem, which portrays the undying love of the Creator for man, and His unceasing pursuit of the soul which is vainly seeking happiness is earthly things, has been termed, "the sweetest, deepest, strongest song ever written in the English language." Although comparatively little known now, people will still be learning it by heart two hundred years hence, for it has about it the unique thing that makes for immortality, it is the return of the nineteenth century to Thomas A. Kempis. Of the name itself, "The Hound of Heaven," it has been written, "The name is strange. It startles one at first. It is bold, so new, so fearless. It does not attract at once; rather the reverse. But when one reads the poem, this strangeness disappears. The meaning is understood, as the hound follows the hare, never ceasing in its running, ever drawing nearer in the chase, with unhurrying and imperturbed pace, so does God follow the fleeing soul by His divine grace. And though in sin or inhuman love, away from God, it seeks to hide itself, Divine grace follows after, unwearingly follows ever after, till the soul feels its pressure forcing it to turn to Him alone in that never ending pursuit."

At the conclusion of the paper, Rev. Dean McColl spoke for a few minutes, enlarging on the subject.

ST. GEORGE'S SOCIETY

Wind up Concert of the Season Was a Decided Success

There was a considerable gathering last evening in the hall of the Woodmen of the World on George street; the room was nearly filled by those members of St. George's Society and their friends as were desirous of taking their respective parts, whether as performers or listeners, in the wind-up social and concert of the season.

And last evening's programme was by no means the least—although last—the general consensus of opinion being that it was the best of this winter's series. The programme follows:

Instrumental Solo—Mr. H. Trencer.
Vocal Solo—Mr. C. Thorpe.
Vocal Solo—"Where the River Shannon Flows." Miss Ada Lee.
Reading—"The Revenge," Mr. Geo. Brookes.
Vocal Solo—Mr. H. Carter.
Quartette—"Dear Little Shamrock." Mr. F. Wainwright.
Humourous Song—Mr. F. Wainwright.
Vocal Solo—(a) "O That Smiled for Ay." (b) "Sadness and Gladness (composed by Mr. Trneer). Mr. E. Jones.
Vocal Solo—Encored, Mrs. B. Read.
Vocal Solo—Mr. Tom Ward.
Musical Romance—Mr. H. Carter.

How Dodd's Kidney Pills Cured Mrs. Lance.

Pembroke Woman Suffered for Fifteen Years Before She Found Quick Relief and a Complete Cure.

Pembroke, Ont., March 20.—(Special).—Of peculiar interest to women is the story of the cure of Mrs. Morile Lance, well known and highly respected here. Let Mrs. Lance tell that story in her own words.

"For about fifteen years I was a very sick woman," she says. "My sleep was broken and unrefreshing and I had a bitter taste in my mouth in the morning. I was often dizzy and flashes of light floated before my eyes. My limbs were heavy and I had a dragging across the loins.

"At last Rheumatism was added to my troubles and I also suffered from lumbago, dropsy and gravel. I felt that my kidneys were the cause of all my troubles and decided to try Dodd's Kidney Pills. From almost the first they did me good, and after taking twelve boxes I am again a well woman."

Women who suffer should learn that the cause of their troubles is bad kidneys. Having learned that, the rest is easy. Thousands of Canadians will tell you out of their own experience that Dodd's Kidney Pills always cure bad kidneys.

THE GOODS TRAFFIC WITH CANADA

Some days ago the Austrian Association of Manufacturers held a meeting which was numerously attended by the manufacturers and exporters who are accustomed to export their Austrian-made goods through the Canadian Pacific Railway, via Trieste to Canada. As a result of the hindrance to which the Canadian Pacific have, as is well known, be subjected in regard to their emigration traffic, they have decided to suspend their Trieste Service and have already, in fact, withdrawn their February sailings. A deputation formed from the most powerful members of the Association, headed by Deputy Friedman, waited on the Minister of the Interior yesterday, and called the latter's attention to the great change which was accruing to the export of Austrian goods to Canada, by the suppression of the Canadian service. On the basis of a most interesting demonstration of figures it was shown how favourable the export terms of the Canadian Pacific were on gods like glass, bentwod furniture, washing, felt, matches, porcelain, jewels, articles of luxury, etc., etc. Stress was further laid on the acting influence possessed by the Company in disposing of the goods of Austrian manufacture in Canada, and the fact was especially made clear that owing to the favourable direct connection between Trieste and Canada business traffic with the United States had been stimulated. The Minister showed great interest in the formation he was receiving and expressed the hope that the traffic, such as it had originally been planned by the Minister of Commerce, would very soon now be reestablished to the entire satisfaction of all concerned. The Minister of the Interior further declared that in regard to the transient Russian emigrants, the formerly existing obstacles had now been completely removed, so that no further hitch existed to hamper the Canadian Pacific in handling their business.

JOY—On March 21, to Mr. and Mrs. C. P. Joy, 527 Gilmour Street, a son.

Monthly Meeting Of Temperance Union

The regular monthly meeting of the Women's Christian Temperance Union will be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. T. Micks, 495 Stewart Street, on Friday afternoon next, at 3.30 p.m.

Reports will be given by Mrs. S. R. Armstrong and Mrs. J. S. Knapman, and Mrs. J. S. Knapman, the delegates to the Dominion Alliance Convention, which was held in Toronto the last week of February.

As this promises to be a specially interesting meeting every one is cordially invited to attend.

FORMER LOCAL MAN'S PATENT

In the window of the Morgan Hardware oC. on George Street is exhibited a square, and it will be to the surprise of many to learn that this tool is the patent of a Peterborough man, Mr. A. A. Harvie. Mr. Harvie, some 24 years ago, served his time with the William Hamilton Co. of this City, and from there branched into the States, where he eventually connected himself with the Nicholls Manufacturing Co. of Ottumwa, Iowa, where he shared some interest in that manufacturing concern, after he had brought out his patent, upon which he now receives a royalty.

The main feature of the new take down square, is that it will always stay true. It is constructed that the tongue is held down to bevelled bearings by a spring, and these bearings are made so as to take up constant wear, which comes in taking the square apart and putting it together, thereby producing constant accuracy. Another feature is, that the corners are hardened. In all former patents, it has been impossible to harden the edges, without hardening the whole square, but Mr. Harvie's latest device provides for that also. Several firms in the States, and one Toronto firm, have the exclusive right to sell these articles.

ADD HALIBURTON TO PETERBORO'

OTTAWA, March 20.—While the plan of Ontario redistribution is treated as confidential among members of the Committee until it is formally considered by them, it is understood that its provisions have been practically determined.

The redistribution in the western part of the Province will cause Grey, Huron and Middlesex to each lose a member. The Northumberlands will be joined and Brockville and Russell wiped out. Haliburton may be added to Peterborough, Thunder Bay and Rainy River, and also Nipissing will be divided so as to have two members.

It is quite likely that when looking around for a Spring Suit, you will call into a number of places that can supply your need.

You will most probably be confronted with statements as to superior quality and best fit and, like most men, you will not care to question the truthfulness of what you are told.

But what could be more satisfactory to you, dealing in a business way from man to man, than for us to say when we show you our nobby line of Spring Suits, "that your money is refunded if the Clothes do not come up to your expectations."

Could we act with more fairness or with a more liberal guarantee?

We make Suits to measure, or we can fit you with partly ready clothes, the choice resting with you. In both cases prices range between $15 and $30.

We Would Also Remind You that we are now selling Hats

FOR SOME TIME PAST the need of this Department has been keenly felt in our Men's Section. But now it is our pleasure to announce that we can give you competent service in the fitting of headwear of all kinds. We Specialize on a Hard Felt Derby, at $2.50.

A Few Suggestions For The Council's Consideration

Before the Council strikes the estimates for the present year there are several little items that should be provided for. They may not be necessities, but before a Council striving to do something out of the ordinary for the working man, they should receive some attention.

Several years ago Ald. Duncan was largely instrumental in securing King Edward Park for the residents of the extreme south end. Mayor Buller may have had a hand in the affair, but the consideration of those who were active in urging the purchase is not of present importance. It is suggested that some effort be made this year to throw the Park as wide open as possible for the citizens. That pre-supposes that the grounds are, or can readily be, placed in proper condition. The use which might be made of them is a matter for discussion. The Park is well located, and if it is necessary to direct the attention of the citizens towards its use something along these lines should be undertaken. There is ample space for games, and possibly some arrangement could be made to hold occasional band concerts at night.

Ald. Duncan or Ald. Saunders might please the residents of the south end by taking up this matter, and with Mayor Buller to lend a hand there should be no difficulty in making the Park serve some of the purposes for which it was intended.

Another suggestion arises out of the street watering question, and presents Ald. Duncan, as chairman of the Board of Works, to score another point if the way is open to him. It is considered that some effort should be made to water or oil the streets in the vicinity of the C.G.E. works. The narrow gauge sidewalk on the west side of Park, north of Albert, is altogether inadequate for the throngs who pass north and south from the two gates. In spring it means steps out into the mud where the workers crowd, and in summer they are forced to walk on the dusty road.

Ald. Duncan is no doubt aware of the dust clouds that are kicked up by this traffic. It seems really barbarous that after working through a five hour stretch the employees should have to pick their way through a mist of dust. The heat of summer is sufficiently irritating, but the dust — what's the use of going into details. The road should be oiled or watered.

This applies to the Colonial Weaving Company, and further south to the De Laval plant. The offices of this company are comparatively close to the street where the dust has as much license as on the Warsaw road.

These are little points that surely must be appreciated. The fact that nothing of this nature has been done in the past should be all the more reason for a little attention this summer. There are possibly a few other factory localities where something of the same nature could be applied.

Local Men In The South

Have Purchased Extensive Acreage For the Purpose of Growing Fruits and Vegetables

The "South Florida Banner" of a recent date contains an interesting article concerning the arrival in Dade County, Florida, of Messrs. Milton, A. Hunt and O. A. Bracken of Havelock, A. O. Sawyer of Lakefield, T. Collard and J. Savigny of Peterborough. The party is interested in grove land, Mr. Hunt alone being a purchaser to the extent of 435 acres.

Mr. Ronald McKee of this City is a relative of the Mr. Hunt referred to above.

FINE IMPOSED UNDER TRANSIENT TRADERS' ACT

Magistrate Dumble this morning gave judgment in the case of Thompson versus Robertson. He found defendant guilty, under the Transient Traders Act, and imposed a fine of $20. This was reduced to $10, after Mr. G. N. Gordon, acting for the defendant and explained that this was the first case that had been brought since the new act had been amended.

A local man was assesed $2 or 10 days in jail for being found drunk in a public place.

DEATH'S SUDDEN CALL

Cobourg Resident Walked in His Garden for the Last Time.

COBOURG, March 21—Mr. Harry Richardson, a well-known resident, was walking in his garden after the noonday meal, and as he re-entered the door of his home he fell. A physician was summoned, but he passed away in a few minutes. He was 81 years of age, and came to Cobourg from England 55 years ago. His wife, three daughters—Mrs. Will. Rashbrooke, Newmarket; Mrs. J. Horne, Cleveland; and Mrs. Wm. Russell, Cobourg, and two sons, Edward and Frank of Cobourg, survive.

Substantial Addition to A. Blade & Son's Floral Capacity

A splendid new greenhouse has been erected by Messrs. A. Blade & Son, florists, corner of Park and Dublin Streets. This makes the third glasshouse which has been erected by this firm since the establishment of their business three years ago, and is an evidence of the gratifying growth of patronage. The new greenhouse is 91 feet long by 17 feet wide. It is equipped with modern patent ventilation fixtures, a convenient system of iron supports to the glass roof and an abundance of hot water pipes for efficient work throughout. There is a total of 2400 feet of glass contained in the greenhouse. It has already been stocked with seedlings and flowering plants, the centre bench alone displaying over 3,000 healthy geraniums.

ARCHBISHOP OF OTTAWA

To Visit Peterboro' in April—St. George's Day Service to Be An Interesting One

The arrangements for the second annual service on the anniversary of St. George's Day, April 23rd, are now well advanced. It will be held in St. John's Church on Monday evening, April 20th. It will be a most unique service in the history of Peterborough. It is expected that the Archbishop of Ottawa will be present and take part in the service. He will pronounce the blessing. The sermon will be preached by the Bishop of Kingston (Dr. Bidwell). Rev. Canon Davidson has very kindly offered the Rector and Church Wardens of St. George's Church the loan of St. John's Church for the occasion. The change of date from the 23rd to the 20th is necessitated by the fact that the 20th is the only day in the month on which the Archbishop can come here. Archdeacon Warren will be here on this occasion as well as the Canons and a large number of the Clergy of the Archdeaconry of Peterborough. It will also be interesting to English Churchmen to know that this is the first visit ever made to this City by an Anglican Archbishop. Further details will be given later.

The Four C's Of Religion

Friday was a great day at Park St. Baptist Church.

At 3:00 p.m. Evangelist Pugsley delivered a very helpful address on "The Joy of the Church." Then followed an address to the school children from 4 to 5 p.m. on the subject "A Hive of B's." About 110 of the school children assembled and listened with rapt attention. At the close about forty came to the front confessing the Saviour.

The evening service was largely attended to hear the sermon on the "Four Cs," Courage, Conflict, Conviction and Commission. The sermon was a strong presentation of Gospel truth, and every division of the sermon was fully demonstrated in the after meeting, when six publicly confessed Christ, four adults and two young boys.

God is working mightily in the hearts and conscience of the people.

Sunday will be one of the biggest days in the series.

At 11:00 a.m.—Subject "Scars."

At 3:00 p.m.—Address to women only. Subject "My Mother."

At 7:00 p.m. — Subject "What Is Hell?"

A large chorus choir will lead the singing.

Everybody invited.

You may boast of the songs of Burns and of Moore
And of other sweet singers of songs galore;
But sweeter than all to you and to me,

FRECKLES

February and March Worst Months For This Trouble—How to Remove Easily.

There's a reason why nearly everybody freckles in February and March, but happily there is also a remedy for these ugly blemishes, and no one need stay freckled.

Simply get an ounce of Othine, double strength, from your druggist and apply a little of it night and morning, and in a few days you should see that even the worst freckles have begun to disappear, while the light ones have vanished ntirely. Now is the time to rid yourself of freckles, for if not removed now they will stay all Summer, and spoil an otherwise beautiful complexion. Your money back if othine fails.

LACK OF CARE WILL RUIN THE MOST BEAUTIFUL HAIR

Save It With Herpicide

Aside from combing it when they think necessary many people give no attention whatever to their hair. Then when the hair begins to fall out it never occurs to them that their trouble is the result of personal carelessness.

An occasional application of Newbro's Herpicide will not only prevent loss of hair but permits a luxuriant growth. Hair losses are attributable to dandruff and the germ that causes it. The results following the intelligent use of Herpicide are frequently of a surprising nature. It removes the scale-like accumulations, leaving the scalp clean and free of dirt and thus allowing the hair to grow unhampered by dandruff.

Newbro's Herpicide in 50c and $1.00 sizes is sold by all dealers who guarantee it to do all that is claimed. If you are not satisfied your money will be refunded.

Applications may be obtained at good barber shops.

SPLENDID ADDRESSES TO WOMEN'S COUNCIL

Mrs. Middleton and Mrs. Rollins Discuss Important Subjects Before Local Body

WOMEN'S SUFFRAGE

Supervised Playgrounds.

A most enthusiastic meeting of the Women's Council, which is the local branch of the National Women's Council, was held in the Assembly Hall of the Public Library yesterday afternoon, Mrs. J. C. Davidson, President, in the chair.

The matter of selecting three representatives from the local Council to the general meeting of the National Council to arrange for the Centenary Peace Celebration, was left over till the next meeting.

Mrs. Scott was elected Convener on the Committee of Laws for Women and Children, while Mrs. Gardner was appointed to a similar position on the Committee for Objectionable Printed Matter.

Mrs. Middleton then gave the following address:

SUPERVISED PLAYGROUNDS.

In this age, when we boast of our 20th century civilization with all its advantages to promote health and happiness, is it not well for us to ask ourselves if these benefits are divided, in proper proportion between the child and the adult?

In the early history of our country child life was a vastly different problem from the complexity of things we find in our crowded cities to-day. In the open country there was such a diversity of ocupation for the child that the play element was largely combined with the struggle for existence. The physical part developed often out of due proportion to the intelectual and moral, but a great essential foundation was being laid and it required only a proper environment to make the being master of the other phases.

MORE PLAY.

We hear the statement of, and, see on every hand, the many ills that are besetting the average city child of to-day, and that city will do well which provides a means of prevention rather than a cure, when the case is almost hopeless.

One of the natural, heaven-sent tendencies of childhood is play, and under what great difficulties is this trait developed in our City. Our authorities and guardians of our city property would seem to place more stress on blades of grass than on boys and girls. Our plea, then, is more playgrounds, more play, and a better kind of play.

MAN OF HIGH CHARACTER.

Rev. John McCoy of Massachusetts and a great mover in organized playgrounds, in a lecture delivered at a church in his native city, said, in part:

"The word playground does not mean simply a place to play, where children can gather and follow their own sweet will. It means a place where play is under trained and wise direction, where a game master, as skilled in his line as a grammar master in his, or a high school teacher in his, controls. This game master, or director, must, of necessity be a man of at least as high character as the school teacher. He deals with boys in their tensest hours when the blood is leaping, when every enthusiasm is flaming, and to direct them in such an hour for the greatest good, a superior man is needed. He must know games, and if an athlete himself, so much the better, but this is not the half of it. He must be a real man, clean, truthful, firm, fair, gentle, enthusiastic, with imagination and with kindly heart. Any other will be a failure with the young, whose vision is clearer than that of their elders, where goodness lies.

POSSIBILITIES WIDEN.

The promoters of the playground idea had in mind at first only the physical and moral dangers of the streets, and wished to take the children from these dangers. Every season the posibilities for good in the playgrounds widen, become more surely defined, and now we look for ideals not only in conduce but in educationol advance as well. Dr. Curtis says that six things are sought in the playground:

Second.—The development of physical strength.

Third.—The development of vital, organic strength.

Fourth.—The establishment of right habits.

Fifth.—The development of energy and enthusiasm.

Sixth.—Pleasure.

BREATH OF GOD.

The open air is the breath of God and it heals forever. The Germans lookupon playgrounds as the first and best of santaria, and find it cheaper and more wholesome than hospitals. The study of the great white plague has made playgrounds in the fatherland a multitude. The child in the City has little chance for exercise. He has no work and a few minutes each day in school under a teacher of gymnastics is all that keys him up to the muscular measure required for a vigorous manhood. He is deeply wronged when not given chance for play. Most games of children have to do with running and leaping where in their feelings have vent in shoutings. Al lthis strengthens the lungs and heart and other vital organs. To this end they must have place to play. The finer side of the child nature has small chance for development when the child is alone. He should have his sense of loyalty and friendship awakened. Team-work, the glory of his playground in every contest, does this, and the greater glory of love for country is not far away. Loyalty and enthusiasm are many akin and both are good. The joy that comes from play, makes the heart sound, and victory begets hopefulness and courage. The playground hours, even more than the school hours are the very best seeding time for all of this.

ENERGY AND SERIOUSNESS.

Directed play begets energy and seriousness. Children, wholesome children, are always in dead earnest at their play. All they have, or are, depends upon the outcome, and life for them at that hour has rosy skies or gloomlight night, just as the victory comes home to them or flies from them to their adversaries. The young baseball or football captain has as much at stake in his boy's world, as afterwards that same boy, a General, has in his battles, or a merchant in his ventures, or a maker of mines or railroads or canals, in his nation-changing enterprises."

Having satisfied ourselves that our granted play is of transcendent importance to the child life of our City, should we not endeavour at once to make a beginning in this movement?

It is suggested that in the near future a meeting be called with representatives from your Local Branch of the National Council of Women, the Board of Education, the City Council the Y.M.C.A., the Y.W.C.A., the Canadian Club, and the Big Brothers' Organization, with the hope that some workable scheme may be arrived at and thus help the boys and girls to a better citizenship.

THE GENERAL EXECUTIVE.

Mrs. Rollins, who was appointed as representative to the meeting of the General Executive of the National Council, which was held at Ottawa some three weeks ago, then gave an able and very instructive address.

She thanked the Local Council for electing her representative, and said that it was a delight for her to be present at a meeting of women of such abilty, such executive ability; women who had such clear logic, and courtesy, no matter how much difference of opinion existed.

The Social Service Congress was held in the Normal School at Ottawa.

SOCIAL RIGHTEOUSNESS.

The object of the Congress was to enlist and assist all Canadians in behalf of social righteousness, with the purpose of improving social, economic, and ethical conditions in Canada. It was planned under the direction of the Social Service Council of Canada, in which the following bodies are federated: The Church of England in Canada; The Presbyterian Church in Canada, the Congregational Church in Canada; the Dominion Grange and Farmers' Association; The Methodist Church in Canada; The Baptist Church in Canada; The Salvation Army; The Trades and Labour Congress; The Canadian Purity and Education Association, and the Evangelical Association of North America.

The Social Service Congress believes that righteousness can be realized in complex conditions of modern life only through the application of human affairs to the principles of the Kingdom of God.

THE COUNCIL'S DECLARATIONS.

The Social Service Council declares for the aplication of Christian principles to the industrial associations, whether of labour or of capital.

For a more equitable distribution of wealth.

For the abolition of poverty.

For the protection of childhood.

For the safeguarding of the physical and moral helth of women in industrial life.

For the adequate protection of working people in case of industrial and occupational diseases.

For the Sunday rest of every worker.

For conciliation and arbitration in industrial disputes.

For proper housing.

For the reclamation of criminals.

And, for international peace.

SPIRIT OF TIME AND MAN.

Continuing, the speaker said: "The spirit of the time is the spirit of man struggling to get into touch with the reality. It is a movement of the sensibilities rather than the intelligence toward some new consciousness of God or man, and such ages are epoch-making. Just now, as in the time of the Crusades—only now the better way—it is a wider heart throb of humanity: man seeking his brother man. The call is coming from that high place, whence all such calls come, and we must answer. No time, nor government, can stand between us and it—nothing shall hinder us till we arrive, because this is the new reality—the truth to which we must eventually adjust ourselves. The mistake we make, is to suppose that the 'truth' comes to us in an orderly way, from any one established source, and so we fail to look with discernment into the affairs and walk in life, gain wisdom, and simple intelligence, with the virtues, and vices, which are really moulding society.

MODERN SPIRIT—NEW REALITY

What is the modern spirit—the new reality? It is this: that we must not claim for ourselves alone, but for others, the right of opportunity to strive for libety; happiness; for life in its brightest significance.

That all men in the State act for the good of all; that all men should share and share alike in the opportunity of making a worthy contribution to this end of life—justice, truth, liberty, happiness, etc.

RISE OF DEMOCRACY.

The rise of democracy, therefore, is only the evidence of persons of this new spirit. Men are no longer toiling, that the existence of certain prevailing conditions should be justified, there are a few beginning to grasp that end of life—they demand that all should know and have the right of the opportunity to do so. The power of democracy is being manifested on a tremendous scale. When Mr. Gladstone passed his great Franchise Bill, democracy came really into power. Men saw that it had arrived, and that it would be strong armour. Since then, the people had been in power, but they did not know it. Now they know it. Nor can there be any substitute for this root idea, that the moral right lies with the people. Every other instrument of power has been exhausted, and flung aside, and from the judgment of the people there is no escethly appeal.

SELFISH AND WARLIKE.

The people may prove selfish, or warlike—may make terrible mistakes as in the French Revolution; but the fact confronts us that democracy is the last experiment—there can be no other. The aim of the people is perfectly clear; popular power is being used for popular comfort. The people are resolved to have a fuller, better, easier life. They are moved to enthusiasm, only by such things as will ameliorate, brighten, and lighten existing social conditions. It is evident that the realization in any measure of the ideal that terminates the modern spirit, cannot be achieved through political reforms alone.

THE NEW DEMOCRACY.

The storm centre in the new democracy is increasing in the sphere of social relations and in the struggle toward greater freedom. Left to these, the people, the masses, the mob, if we will so designate them, can learn only by mistakes, which may lead through unguessed depths, to suffering and despair. But here we catch the real significance of this Social Service Congress. We turn our eyes, and there, parallel with the movements of democracy stands the Church of the living God—the living Church of the Living God. With clear discernment, she sees that this is the day of opportunity for the Christian Church. She awakes to the truth, that the only hope for the masses is tat they become Christians. The Church is not the mere socia force held together by Christ's teachingsing as a moral philosopher.

SUPERNATURAL AUTHORITY.

She is greater than democracy or any other force in the world to-day, because she is clothed with supernatural authority, and divine grace.

We have heard not a little wailing about the Church losing her grip on human affairs. This Congress disputed my misgivings for I learned there that even the Church in Canada has been sending forth her sons to work in lowly guise in obscure places, with out any blaze of trumpets. The attitude of the Christian Church to-day toward the masses is "He that is greatest among you, shall be servant to you all."

SERVICE OF HUMANITY.

The Church of to-day will be the service of humanity because she is the greatest permanent force in the world. Greatest because she guides and controls the public conscience, establishing the moral standards of people who direct affairs, not merely in the council chambers and senate, but in the factory and shop.

She alone can link those new democratic impulses with those spiritual forces, to sustain, fortify, elevate and inspire human life. She can call attention, and rouse the national conscience to the sense of its responsibility, as well as insist upon each member realizing his own responsibility in the brotherhood of the race. The Church realizes that this is her business, to teach other men what it is to sacrifice in order to help.

BELONGS TO POLITICIANS.

The Church of to-day is no longer willing to deal with the by-products of crime, sin, and vice, but asserts its right to deal directly with the conditions which produce a maimed and broken humanity. The Church to-day asserts that Christianity does belong to politicians—has the same power to deal with the millions as with one, for it is not each unit in the millions, man potentially, all that the race has expressed.

The great call of to-day is for leadership, and it depends upon the leadership which way the people will go.

In this crisis of national development the demand is made that every woman shall assume this responsibility. This is the day of woman of character should be prepared to stand for the ends that are strong. This is women's day, and I say it with solemnity rather than boasting. We must play our part and play it worthily. Life is too complex to be shut out of any important area to-day.

NEW STANDARDS.

The eradication of commercialized vice is no longer turned upon as hypocracy. We must bring our powers and ability into play, and see that a new standard of purity is set up. In order to do this, they demanded women's suffrage. All the battles that will be fought in the future will be and we want the women to stand side by side with the men. It is no good for those women who sit at home in ease and luxury saying they do not want to vote, that their place is not at the poll, but we have to think of the defenceless woman who has no power to protect herself, and who is slaving her life out, and it has been said on good authority that women are walking our streets in a hell more lurid than any picture of imagination. That does not say that we want to be militant; but then, we should not require that in Canada. We must look around intelligently, and see what women have done for women.

EDUCATION.

Dr. Robertson, head of the Educational Department in Ottawa said that occupation had more influence upon character than anything else. There are 400,000 women workers in Canada. He claims that the boys and girls have not a fair chance. We find that the picture shows are good, but they must be made educational. Other countries are very much wiser. Ten years ago, in Scotland, 900 boys took vocational training, and to-day there are 10,900 taking the same instruction. The women of Ontario call have industrial training in our schools that would revolutionize the moral life of children. We should make our schools a social centre. The mothers' clubs were enrolined, and the school should be made one of the social centres of the community.

MOVING PICTURES.

Moving pictures should be there, little boys' clubs should be there, mothers' clubs should be there. All should give their interest, and come with one spirit to these school meetings, wherein lies the destiny of the North American continent.

Is it reasonable to suppose that the great lands of Canada have been left untouched for centuries, without God providing, that her fields should raise humanity to higher circles. Her means have been left for centuries, guarded by invisible powers. Now, in the fullness of time, God has spoken, and now many men are coming here, to open up great resources. We despise these foreigners, in many instances. But we should remember that each one may have the potentialities of the greatest of his race, and so we should be very careful, just because they speak a different language. We are not here to play, to dream, to drift; we are here to work.

The singing of the National Anthem concluded the meeting.

SOME OF THE NEW FACES ON THE PETERBOROUGH BALL CLUB ROSTER FOR THE COMING SEASON

Catcher M. Ryberg

Catcher Elmer McClure

CURLEY BLOUNT
Peppery Leader of the 1914 Petes

Outfielder John R. Bane

Outfielder G. Miller

Manager Curley Blount, the new leader of the Peterborough Canadian League ball team, believes in youth and speed as two of the principal assets of a winning machine. The above photographs give local fans their first chance to glimpse the features of some of the Petes' 1914 hopes. Ryberg and McClure are two of Blount's back-stop candidates. They are young, but fast, and have the necessary weight, each tipping the scales at 175 pounds. Bane is a big, fast youngster whom Blount expects will make good in the outfield. He has a reputation as a fence-buster and loks good according to the dopes. Miller will try for an infield berth.

Bane comes from Uniontown, Pa.; Miller's home is in Massilon, O.; Ryberg hails from Ridgeway, Pa., and McClure from Dunkard, Pa.

A NEW FIRST BASEMEN SIGNED FOR THE PETERBOROUGH BASEBALL CLUB

E. Flanagan, Last Year With Erie, Will Look After the Initial Corner For the Petes.

FOOD FOR THE FANS

Curley Blount is still signing players for the Peterborough Ball Club, and his string is now over the twenty mark. To-day's mails brought the news that Blount has grabbed a most promising first-baseman in E. Flanagan, a big youngster who was on the initial corner for Erie, Pa., last year in the Inter-State League. Flanagan is a dainty little thing, weighing 180 pounds and standing 6 feet 2 in. in his hole proofs.

Frank Fox will be tried in the infield this year. The Buffalo boy, whom the Petes secured from Ottawa, last year, writes that his injured ankle is as strong as ever now, and that he expects to have a good year. He starts training with the St. Bonaventure College team at Alleghany, next week, and will report on April 15th in good condition. Going right, Fox will make all the infield candidates look to their laurels. He played fine ball for Peterborough last year in spite of a very painful ankle.

Blount has decided to give a trial to Sid Tirrell, a Rochester semi-pro. pitcher, with a great record as a spit-ball artist. The dope on him is so good that Blount will bring the youngster to Youngstown and give him the once over.

The top of a new typewriter desk is unbroken, the machine being mounted on a shelf beneath, which swings outward and upwards.

In many families where Lent is observed the housewife is somewhat put to much thought to provide a variation of diet.

These menus for a week have been provided by the Sisters of Santa Maria and can be used for a guide throughout the entire fasting season:

WHY THE P. A. C. SHOULD APPEAL TO YOU

To every lover of clean amateur sport the Peterborough Athletic Club should appeal.

To every friend of young men the new organization should be welcome.

To every father who wants to see his son developed along rational lines the club should be a benefit.

To every young athlete, association with such a body should be an inspiration.

It is on these grounds that the Peterborough Athletic Club is appealing to the public for support in its campaign to establish suitable headquarters. Those at the head of the new club have nothing personal to gain, they are actuated by the desire to do something for the young men of the city. The need of such an organization is plainly evident. For years it has been talked about, but now it has advanced beyond the talk stage, and is going ahead by leaps and bounds. The establishment of club rooms will be a long step towards success. The people of Peterborough can make this step possible. Will YOU help?

"I WANT A GOOD PITCHING STAFF AND I'LL HAVE ONE"
—CURLEY BLOUNT

Manager Curley Blount, writing from Youngstown, says: "I am not going to promise the fans a pennant winner because that is not good policy. But you can rest assured that I am going to give you a club that will always be hustling until the last man is out, or it will be my fault. I am just as anxious to be fighting for the top of the ladder as the rest of them. I will have a young team and I want a hustling bunch. If they won't hustle, they will be looking for a job soon. The only man I want in our ranks now is Pitcher Sterling, and just as soon as he signs we needn't worry about the others. I want a good pitching staff, and I am going to have one."

MAY PUT ON A BOXING TOURNAMENT

If enough interest is shown the Peterborough Athletic Club may conduct a boxing tournament for the city championship this Spring. The matter has been discussed informally and if local mitt artists show interest in the proposition it will likely be taken up. In the meantime any local boxer who is interested might write Secretary M. L. Dobson of the Peterborough A. C., or leave his name with the Sporting Editor of the Examiner.

BASKETBALL

The Senior Leaders will pick their line-up for their City League game with the Peterborough A. C. from the following: A. Flowers, Cunningham, Rew, M. Turner, E. Brown, C. Stewart.

TWO GOOD GAMES ARE BILLED

A Treat for Basketball Fans at the Y. M. C. A. To-night

With the Trinity College-Collegiate game thrown in for good measure the opening game in the City Basketball League at the Y.M.C.A. to-night should be well attended. The rival schools will clash at 7.30 o'clock o'clock and a red-hot game may be expected. The City League fixture will bring together the Senior Leaders team and the Peterborough A. C. five and promises to be a battle all the way. Both teams are confident of a win.

The following team will represent the Peterborough Athletic Club in the opening game in the City Basketball League to-night:

Defence—Bartlett, Darling.
Centre—Flowers.
Forwards—Smyth, Long.

Defence—Peever, Rogers.
Centre—Canniff.
Forwards—Knapman, Horsfield.

NEW SOUTH PAW FOR THE PETES

Won Eleven Out of Fourteen Games Last Season

Edgar Moran, the southpaw who pitched for the Barons last year, and lost but three games out of the 14 he pitched, will be given a trial with the Peterborough team of the Canadian League.

The fact that he made such a good showing last year and looks good enough for fast company, caused Curley Blount to sign him. He will report with the balance of the team here on April 16, when the Canadian team starts to train at Wright field.

Public Is Interested

Peterboro' Athletic Club Campaign is Well Received

The collectors for the Peterborough Athletic Club report that they have been splendidly received in their first day's campaign for funds for the establishment of club headquarters, and the public seems to have welcomed the new organization as a step in the right direction. As an example of how the club is being viewed by sporting enthusiasts it might be mentioned that one well-known local man called up one of the officers and asked him to send round for a cheque. Others have expressed their appreciation by substantial donations. The campaign for funds will be carried on vigourously until the next meeting.

VACANCY FILLED.

Senator Gauthier Takes Monis' Place In French Cabinet.

PARIS, March 21.—The gap in the French Cabinet caused by the resignation of Ernest Monis from the Ministry of Marine was filled yesterday by the appointment to the post of Senator Armand Gauthier, a former Minister of Public Works.

Premier Doumergue, who had been much disturbed by the upheaval in the Government specially requested Senator Gauthier, a member of the same political group, to assist him.

Senator Gauthier, after some deliberation, consented to take the portfolio.

The police and military authorities took great precautions yesterday to prevent any disturbances during the funeral of Gaston Calmette. All along the route of the procession detachments of police were stationed in readiness to suppress demonstrations. In one disturbance a Royalist sympathizer was shot.

Jury Convicts Hagel and Westlake of Plotting for Krafchenko.

WINNIPEG, March 21.—The jury yesterday afternoon, as the assizes in the Hagel-Westlake case, returned a verdict finding Percy Hagel and J. H. Westlake guilty of conspiring to release John Krafchenko from the jail where he was confined pending his trial for the murder of H. M. Arnold.

On the second indictment the jury returned a verdict finding each of the accused guilty of aiding Krafchenko to escape. The maximum penalty on each indictment is seven years in the penitentiary. Each prisoner took the verdict coolly.

Stock Markets

The Stock Market opened up strong this morning with C.P.R. quoted at 108 1-8, U.P., 159 1-2, Rdg., 166 3-4, St. Paul, 100; U.S.S. 64 7-8, and A.C.P. 76 5-8. The large interests regarded this as a satisfactory condition, and the buying in conservative quarters showed considerable improved confidence and the majority of the leading commission houses advised the purchase of the general market, and the copper issues. Montreal was a large buyer of C.P.R. again this morning. St. Paul, whose purchase we have been advising these last few days, had a rise of 1 1-2 points. The undertone of this market is strong, and we would not be surprised to see this advance go considerably further with a good bank statement, which is looked for to-day. Twelve industrials advanced on an average of 7-10 of a point and twenty active railroad stocks advanced about 7-10 of a point.

Failures this week were 200 as compared with 240 last week.

The Market closed easy, most of the important stocks selling at from 1-2 to a point below their high of the day.

He leaves to mourn his loss, three brothers, Fred, Harry and Leo, and three sisters, Mary, Martha and Katie.

The funeral will take place on Monday morning at 9 o'clock from 500 Concession Street, to St. Peter's Cathedral and thence to St. Peter's Cemetery.

MRS. DANIEL BAKER.

On Saturday morning last, Catherine Tinney, wife of Mr. Daniel Baker, passed away at the age of forty-five years. She was a sufferer of chronic rheumatism for seven years, the immediate cause of death being la-grippe. The deceased was born in the Township of Percy in the year 1868 and came to Hamilton Township about thirty years ago, and resided there until her death. She is survived by her husband and one daughter, Miss Ella Baker, and four sons, William, Ernest, Lewis and Alfred. Her youngest brother, Mr. James Tinney, of Peterborough, and two of her sisters, Miss Martha Tinney, of Rochester, and Mrs. Edwin Davey, of Precious Corners, were present at the funeral which took place from the family residence on Monday to Lent's

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON SOCIAL SERVICE AS PRESENTED TO PRESBYTERY

The following is, in part, the report of the Committee on Social Service and Evangelism, presented at the last meeting of the Presbytery of Peterborough by the convener, Mr. Lees, and published by request of the presbytery.

Following a suggestion of the Board of Social Service and Evangelism, letters were written to a limited number of ministers in some of the important centres asking for opinions or information on matters that should be brought to the attention of the Presbytery. To these a number of replies were received. The matters they deal with principally are the liquor traffic, the social evil, observance of the Lord's Day and gambling. The presence of a considerable number of foreigners, where railway construction or public works are in progress, seems to have greatly complicated matters. Among these people, drinking in their homes, especially on Sundays, with the accompanying desecration of the day prevails. In some cases, it would seem that they have imported liquor into local option territory, and in one case, as many as 28 persons are reported to have been fined for being drunk in such territory.

A matter that receives attention in all the communications is the laxity of many parents in exercising a supervision over the conduct of their boys and girls. This results in street walking, with all the evils that attend or follow. Whatever the Church can do to emphasize and magnify, the duty and responsibility of parents should be done with tact, vigor and insistence. Reports all indicate the prevalence to a greater or less extent of the social evil.

In the City of Peterborough, if one were to judge from the revelations of the past few months, he would be led to conclude that things are rapidly going from bad to worse. This, however, is probably not the case, and the fact that some things have been dragged into the light, the existence of which was undreamed of by most of us, is probably a healthy sign. There is on the whole a more enlightened public opinion, and no doubt not a deeper sense of responsibility than has prevailed for some time.

The Board of Social Service and Evangelism.

It is fitting that there should be introduced here some reference to the work of the Department of Social Service and Evangelism of our Church.

The Department includes:

1. Evangelism—All the evangelistic work of the Church.
2. The suppression of the vices, drinking, gambling, social vice, political corruption, bad literature, unclean or suggestive amusements, etc.
3. The suppression of the white slave traffic and the exploiting of all human vices.
4. The promoting of the due observance of the Lord's Day:
5. The redemption and restoration of fallen girls.
6. The prevention by educational legislative and other means of the downfall of girls—and boys, too.
7. Teaching English to non-Anglo-Saxons, and of Canadian citizenship to all immigrants.
8. Reclaiming the slums of our great, and growing cities by evangelical, social settlement work and the prevention of the development of slum conditions.
9. The reclaiming of human wrecks of both sexes and all ages in evangelistic missions.
10. The study and solution of the problems of country life, the result of the depletion of rural population.

The department of social service and evangelism has been in existence for six years and has a remarkable record of accomplishment to its credit. One of the greatest of these is the union or common effort of the social forces of the Dmision in the Social Service Council of Canada, which represents all the Protestant churches as well as the Evangelical Association, the Dominion Grange and Farmers' Association, the Salvation Army and the Canadian Purity Association.

Social Service Congress.

It was the privilege of the convener of your committee to be present at the great congress in Ottawa, which was planned and carried out by the Social Service Council, which believes:

That righteousness can be realised in the complex conditions of modern life only through the application to all human affairs of the principles of the Kingdom of God; and declares

For the application of Christian principles to the operations of industrial associations whether of labour or of capital.

For a more equitable distribution of wealth.

For the abolition of poverty.

For the protection of childhood.

For the safeguarding of the physical and moral health of women in industrial life.

For the adequate protection of working people in case of industrial accidents and occupational diseases.

For the Sunday rest for every worker.

For conciliation and arbitration in industrial disputes.

For proper housing.

For the reclamation of criminals.

For wholesome recreation.

For international peace.

The congress lasted for three days and was in many ways entirely unique. Never before did so many people of different creeds, diverse callings and varied social standing meet together for the avowed purpose of bringing nearer the establishment, in its fullness, of the Kingdom of God in our land. There appeared on the platform and took part in its deliberations, officials and dignitaries of all the Protestant Churches, a bishop of the Roman Catholic Church, the Premier of the Dominion, and four of his cabinet ministers, a cabinet minister of the Province of Ontario, the leader of the Opposition in the Commons, representatives of organized labour, the president of the Federation of Farmers and last, but not least, the Royal representative of the Crown in Canada.

Not only was the congress unique in the character of those who took part, but quite as much, if not more so, was it in the character and variety of the subjects it discussed. One feature that impressed itself on all was the fact that only a very few years have elapsed since it would not only have been impossible to get together a gathering with the aims and objects that animated the congress, but the people who listened last week, with thoughtful and earnest concern, would have refused to hear. A new attitude towards these things has grown up both within and without the Church.

The congress held 6 day and 3 evening sessions of the former, one whole session was devoted to each of the church and industrial life, commercialized vice and the white slave traffic, political purity and temperance One forenoon was devoted to sectional conferences on child welfare, the problem of the city and the problem of the country.

At the evening meetings speakers of note who took part were Dr. Charles Shetzle, consulting sociologist of New York, who spoke on "The Call of the New Day to the Old Church," and "Capturing the Labour Movement." Prof. Graham Taylor of Chicago spoke on "The Great Social Awakening." Dr. G. C. Pidgeon, Vancouver, discussed Immigration and the Labour Situation Dr. C. W. Gordon (Ralph Connor) dealt with the "New Church and the New State," and Ven. Archdeacon Cody who spoke on Gambling.

Dr. Stelzle in his great address on capturing the labour movement, said: This is the area of comman man. Slowly but surely the mass of the people are coming into their own. For ages they fought for religious democracy and they won. For centuries they strove for political democracy and again they won. To-day they strive for industrial democracy and if I read the signs aright, they will win. Labouring men are familiar with this spirit of democracy in the clubs, in their lodges, yea in the saloon. They must meet this spirit of democracy in the Church. Some day God will raise up a prophet who will win unto himself the common people, and that day will decide whether the Church is to capture the labour movement or the labour movement is to capture the Church."

Professor Andrews of Regina in one of the most thoughtful and convincing addresses of the congress, speaking on political parity, enunciated and elaborated three principles:

1. Christ will never be king till he is supreme in politics. There is no salvation but through politics.
2. We are living in an age in which the functions of parliament are gradually widening
3. Enormous increase in the resources of the world makes them now, for the first time equal to the needs. Therefore poverty and war, the age-long crimes of civilization must cease.

Resolutions.

Resolutions were passed dealing with the following matters. The Dominion government was called on

To appoint a Royal Commission to investigate and make a report on the coal miners' strike on Vancouver Island.

To prevent the manufacture, importation and sale of cigarettes in Canada.

To establish free employment bureaus.

To appoint a Royal Commission to investigate the unemployment problem.

To enact a policy that will raise the Indians to a level of citizenship.

To adopt a closer inspection of immigrants from Southern Europe.

To create a de partment of child welfare, to give pensions to mothers.

To initiate an old age pension scheme and.

To assist the extension of co-operative societies.

The congress went on record as being in favour of women suffrage, labour unions, total abstinence, and social survey work, and passed a resolution recommending that civil servants be appointed for the outside service in the same way as for the inside service.

"SERMONS IN STONE"

Rev. Henry J. Keith, M.A., will deliver his illustrated address on "Sermons in Stone" in St. Andrew's lecture room Monday evening at 8 o'clock. Mr. Keith will treat of the great cathedrals, and his address might properly be called, Poems in Stone.' Cathedrals are among the world's greatest treasures and are worthy of careful study.

SOCIAL SERVICE

Rev. James Rollins, continuing the discussion of subjects along the line of social service, will speak Sunday evening on Work, Wages, and the Unemployed.' Mr. Rollins thinks something should be done to give work to the unemployed, and may have something of a practical nature to suggest. Employers of labour and those out of work are invited.

"The House of Quality and Service."

A STORY OF THE DUKE OF CONNAUGHT.

An amusing incident is told of H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught when he was at the Ranger's Lodge, Blackheath, pursuing his military studies. His sister's former governess was staying in the neighbourhood, and each morning he was in the habit of walking to her home to inquire after her health, and in doing so, passed by the apple stall of an old Irish woman, named Kitty, who, from his cadet's dress, took him for a private in the artillery. One day she asked a policeman if he could tell her who "that 'tillery chap was that passed by every day, adding: "He looks such a graceful, nice young man that I'm sorry in my heart to see him as he is; for I'm shure he comes of dacent people, he looks so genteel. And I be always thinking, shure, if his people is anyway well off, isn't it a wonder they don't buy him out?" One can imagine old Kitty's eloquence when she was informed that he was Queen's Victoria's son.

Star Gazing Is A Hobby Of Former Peterborough Man Now Resident In Toronto

H. B. Collier, Former Member of Peterboro' Astronomical Society is Still Studying the Heaven of Nights at His Residence on Indian Road, Toronto—An Interesting Sketch

LITTLE SON IS INTERESTED

"As a rule people must have a hobby of some kind or another, but very few occupy themselves with anything that is of benefit to the community at large. An exception to the general rule, however, is Mr. H. B. Collier, (formerly of Peterborough), of 273 Indian road, whose particular occupation in his spare moments is astronomy, that ver fascinating business of observing the fluctuations of the sun, moon and stars.

This gentleman can be seen in his back garden any clear night with his eyes glued to his beloved telescope, looking carefully and intently at the heavens. Between his gazes he will make notes that to the ordinary individual mean nothing in particular, but to him might represenot some peculiar and unaccountable disturbance occurring in the vast space above.

"Would you care to have a look at the moon at close quarters?" he asked. "The glass brings it to a distance of 2,000 miles, and on a bright night such as this it looks even closer."

LOOKED LIKE A NICKEL.

The juggle with the heavenly bodies in this careless manner is deeply awe-inspiring and mysterious to the layman. The vastness of space cannot be lightly approached, even through the magic of the telescope's lense, and the resultant vision was vividly startling, even when the memory was exerted to realize that the moon was or was supposed to be, some 240,000 miles from the end of the instrument. As it appeared on the lense it was about the size of a five cent piece, but nevertheless every point of detail could be discerned quite distinctly.

"Take a good look at the left hand corner and see if you observe an line that resembles anything," said the amateur astrologist.

Following this advice the eye discerned something which began to take shape and dimly resembled somebody holding a book.

"That's the reading girl," said Mr. Collier. "Now look at the top right hand corner and tell me what you find there."

"There" appeared to be an old lady's face, which was the correct answer. She is known to the elect as "The lady with the hooked nose."

As the eye became more accustomed to the focus several bright streaks appeared at intervals on the moon's surface.

VOLCANIC ERUPTIONS.

"That is the result of violent volcanic disturbances, even greater than have been experienced on this planet," was the explanation. "There is a volcanic crater that stretches one hundred and fifteen miles from side to side, which is of course larger than Lake Ontario and probably very much deeper. In fact, the moon is covered with craters, some two thousand of them, and all are named after scientists of different nationalities who have studied astronomy almost since time began. Looking at the moon, do you notice the peculiar 'dried up'' appearance, as if it might crumble and crack at any time. But it has looked like that ever since I remember, so I imagine it is safe for a while to come at any rate."

The telescope used by Mr. Collier is quite powerful and was procured from one of the astronomical professors, though those they used at the Observatory are much larger and have stronger lenses.

SUN INHERITS IT.

"Astronomy has been my hobby since I was just a lad," said Mr. Collier abandoning the stars to their fate for a time, "and I am beginning to think it must be hereditary because my own boy Bruce, who is ten years of age, is beginning to take a deep interest along the same line and very frequently I find him 'gazing' when he ought to be at his lessons."

He then drifted to the subject of meteorites and produced a piece of metal which weighed about three pounds and looked very like Cobalt ore. Both sides were rough and jagged, this condition having been brought about by the friction of the air as it fell to the earth. It is this same friction which set up an intense heat and caused the metal to be susceptible to impression while in an almos molten condition.

ROMANCE IN METAL.

"The history of that fellow is unknown," went on Mr. Collier, "at least with any degree of certainty, but we think it fell in Mexico. Analysis shows it to contain 90 per cent. of iron: 8 per cent. nickel, and the remaining 2 per cent. is composed of other elements. There is a world of romance in that piece of metal if it could only speak of its vast journey through space to Mother Earth."

"Many shooting stars are seen through the glass, but only an occasional one drops to earth," concluded Mr. Collier. "In fact, I can't account for them getting here at all, since we are protected by an 'air wall' many miles in thickness."

General Villa Wins Preliminary Fight at Torreon

FEDERALS LOSE HEAVILY

CONSTITUTIONALIST HOSPITAL BASE, Bermejillo, Durango, Mexico, March 23.—The rebel net about Torreon and vicinity was drawn closer Saturday, and Gen. Herrara fought the most important engagement of the advance near Hacienda Santa Clara, 22 miles north of Torreon. In the engagement, 106 Federals were killed, according to report. The rebel loss is reported as slight, three killed and seven wounded.

The fight took place over possession of a spot on the banks of the big Tlahuallio irrigation ditch, where Herrera wished to throw a bridge and the construction of which he began immediately on retirement of the enemy, whose numbers he estimated at 400.

At other points the Federal advance guards retreated precipitately, burning and wrecking as they went. At Noe, the small railroad shops were burned.

Gen. Villa was elated beyond measure, and when he took possession of a telephone wire which was working into the city of Torreon, he lost no time in calling up the office of the Federal commander, Gen. Refugio Velasco. An officer of the latter's staff answered the call.

"I am coming to have supper with you," Gen. Villa began.

"Who are you," inquired the Federal officer politely.

"I am an hombre called Francisco Villa," replied the chieftain.

"Well, come whenever you are ready," came the answer.

Villa talked from this city which he took at a gallop without resistance. His scouts brought word that the Federal had made a poor job of wrecking the railroad tracks.

This camp, where Villa has an immense store of ammunition, is just outside the city, and was the scene of great activity Saturday, as cartridges and shell were being forwarded by rail and pack mules and burros to Herrera, Benavides, Co ttreras and other generals.

Federals Join Rebels.

VERA CRUZ, Mexico, March 23.—Gen. Aguilar and his 500 Federals at Tuxpam have revolted and joined the rebels. This will compel the Government to abandon its plans to recapture Victoria for the present.

Nelson O'Shaughnessy and T. B. Hohler, respectively American and British charge d'affaires at Mexico City, arrived here yesterday. Mr. O'Shaughnessy went to the hotel with his wife and later conferred with Envoy Lind and the Consul of Canada at the United States consulate.

MME. CAILLAUX ON STAND.

Slayer of Editor Says She Tried to Stop Letters Being Published.

PARIS, March 23. — Mme. Caillaux, in her preliminary examination before Magistrate Henri Bouard, on Saturday afternoon, recounted the motives which induced her to kill Gaston Calmette, editor of Figaro.

Mme. Caillaux declared that since her girlhood she had been a reader of The Figaro. When it joined the enemies of Mr. Caillaux in the campaign against him, her indignation was intense.

"On Friday, March 13," she said. "The Figaro published a fragment of a letter signed 'Thy Joe.' That letter, I knew, was in the possession of a woman, as well as two other private letters written to me by M. Caillaux before our marriage. I sought counsel for the purpose of having the publication of these letters legally prevented, but in vain. All these things preyed on my mind and I determined to put a stop to the calumnies."

The investigation will be taken up again this week.

SCHEME WON'T DO.

Australia Will Never Submit to Jap Protection, Says Massey.

LONDON, March 23.—(C.A.P. Cable)—Winston Churchill's utterances regarding naval defence in the Pacific continues to excite attention. Speaking Saturday at Creymouth, Premier Massey of New Zealand said Churchill's statement that the Anglo-Japanese alliance had secured the safety of Australia and New Zealand did not appeal to him. He did not want to do Churchill an injustice, but if the latter meant that the people of Australia and New Zealand were to be satisfied with the protection of Japanese ships and sailors then he was very much mistaken.

Premier Massey said he did not for one moment believe that the Anglo-Japanese alliance had secured the safety either of Australia or New Zealand. The Government intended to ask Parliament at the earliest possible moment to authorize the building of a cruiser of the Bristol class to cost $2,000,000. He believed that the best policy for the Dominion was to prepare its own ships. New Zealand must look forward to the time when a British navy in the Pacific would be ready to cope with any foe that came along.

DUELLIST GOES TO PRISON.

Germany's Great National Pastime Is Liable To Languish.

METZ, Germany, March 23.—Lieut. von La Valette Saint George of the 98th German Infantry Regiment was Saturday sentenced to thirty months' imprisonment in a fortress on a charge of killing Lieut. Haage in a duel on Feb. 26. He was also dismissed from the army. The court found the prisoner by his conduct had provoked the duel and had gravely wronged the honor of Lieut. Haage.

The severe sentence imposed upon Lieut. von La Valette Saint George is the first really severe blow delivered against duelling among army officers.

The court, by its judgment, has virtually given notice that officers who wrong the family honor of fellow-officers are not to be treated as gentlemen, and the fact that they vanquish their opponents will not rehabilitate their own honor.

The sentence is in line with the remarks made in the Imperial Parliament on March 13 by Lieut.-Gen. Erich Von Falkenhayne, Minister of War, who admitted that duelling was an offence under the laws both of God and man and was an evidence of physical rather than of moral courage.

If the precedent established yesterday is followed, courts of honor hereafter in cases similar to the present one will forbid a duel, on the ground that the offender is not fit to meet an honorable officer on the field. Heretofore a duel has been unavoidable in such cases.

HON. WM. PATERSON BURIED.

Notables From All Over Canada Attend His Funeral.

BRANTFORD, March 23. — Hon. William Paterson, ex-Minister of Customs, was buried here Saturday afternoon at three o'clock.

George Kippax of the Farringdon Church conducted the service, while the pallbearers were C. B. Heyd, Judge Hardy, John Muir, E. L. Goold, Dr. Charles Leeming and T. H. Preston.

W. F. Cockshutt, M.P., represented the Premier and Government, Hon. W. S. Fielding the Liberal party of Canada, and Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King the Liberal party of Ontario.

A wealth of floral tributes were received, including wreaths from the local Reform Association, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, the Cabinet, and the Customs Department at Ottawa, and from the city of Brantford.

Consumption Takes Hundreds of People

every day in the year and the deadly germs claim more victims in cities than in rural districts, due no doubt to the increased number of indoor workers in confining quarters and their lack of sunshine.

Tubercular germs always attack when the system is weakened from colds or sickness, overwork, overstrain, confining duties or any drain which has reduced the resistive forces of the body. But nature always provides a corrector and the best physicians emphasize that during changing climate our blood should be kept rich and pure and active by taking Scott's Emulsion after meals; the cod liver oil in Scott's Emulsion warms the body by enriching the blood—it peculiarly strengthens the lungs and upbuilds the resistive forces of the body to avoid colds and prevent consumption.

If you work indoors, tire easily, feel languid or nervous, Scott's Emulsion is the most strengthening food-medicine known; it builds energy and strength and is totally free from alcohol or any stupefying drug—every druggist has it. 14-16

FACTORY IS BURNED.

Toronto's Fifth Big Fire This Year Causes Loss of $50,000.

TORONTO, March 23.—Fire, probably caused by a defective heating plant, broke out on the top floor of the Allen building at Pearl and Simcoe streets on Saturday afternoon and did damage estimated at $50,000 to three firms occupying the building. This is Toronto's fifth big fire in the present year. The R. D. Fairbairn Whitewear Manufacturing Co., which occupied the two top floors, received damage estimated last night by Mr. Fairbairn at $40,000, principally to stock, of which a large part was water damage.

The east end of the top floor was gutted and will cost probably about $10,000 to rebuild, while the damage to the other firms in the building, the Allen Manufacturing Co. and the Swiss Laundry, will be trifling.

As the Fairbairn Company manufacture whit wear goods, the fumes played havoc with the fire department and several firemen were forced to come to the windows for air.

GORKY IN PERIL OF EXILE.

Russian Novelist May Face Trial on Charge of Blasphemy.

ST. PETERSBURG, March 23.—Court proceedings are to be brought immediately against Maxim Gorky, the Russian novelist, on the charge of blasphemy, according to an order issued Saturday by the public prosecutor of the district court of St. Petersburg. Gorky, who is suffering from tuberculosis, declared by his friends to have been contracted during his incarceration in the fortress of St. Peter and St. Paul, recently returned to Russia from the Island of Capri after an exile lasting eight years.

The charge of blasphemy was preferred against Gorky in 1908 in connection with his novel, entitled "Mother," in which he is alleged to have insulted the national faith. If found guilty the novelist's sentence, according to the Russian law, will be exile to Siberia, which, in his present state of health, his friends believe would be equivalent to a sentence of death.

"Some Invisible Hand."

ST. PETERSBURG, March 23.—The charges brought against the Jew Pashkoff and his assistant, Guthartz in connection with the alleged ritual murder case at Fastoff are evidently crumbling. The men have been released on bail to the amount of $2,500 and $500 respectively.

Notwithstanding the fact that all the evidence adduced hitherto tends to destroy the theory of ritual murder, the black hundred continues to fulminate against the Jews. A Kieff journal says: "To-day it is Yushsky, to-morrow it will be Pashkoff. Some invisible hand is making our children tremble."

"THE MAYOR'S WIFE"

By ANNA KATHARINE GREEN

At this double assurance, she sank back satisfied, but still trembling and very white.

"It is Mr. Packard I meant," she whispered presently. "Stay with me and, when he comes in, tell him what will keep him from looking in or speaking to me. Promise!" She was growing wild again. "Promise, if you would be of any use to me."

"I do promise." At which I felt her hand grasp mine with grateful pressure. "Don't you wish some assistance from me. Your dress—I tried to loosen it, but failed to find the end of the cord. Shall I try again?"

"No, no; that is, I will do it myself."

I did not see how she could, for her waist was laced up the back, but I saw that she was too eager to have me go to remeber this, and recognising the undesirability of irritating her afresh, I simply asked if she wished me to remain within call.

But even this was more than she wanted.

"No, I am better now. I shall be better yet when quite alone." Then suddenly: "Who knows of this—this folly of mine?"

"Only Nixon and myself. The girls have gone to bed."

"Nixon I can trust not to speak of it. Tell him to go. You, I know, will remember only long enough to do for me what I have just asked."

"Mrs. Packard, you may trust me." The earnest, confiding look, which for a moment disturbed the melancholy of her large eyes, touched me closely as I shut the door behind us.

"Now what is the meaning of this mystery?" I asked myself after I had seen Nixon go downstairs, shaking his head and casting every now and then a suspicious glance behind him. "It is not as trivial as it appears. That laugh was tragedy to her, not comedy." And when I paused to recollect its tone I did not wonder at its effect upon her mind, strained as it undoubtedly was by some secret sorrow or perplexity.

And from whose lips had come that laugh sprung? Not from ghostly ones. Such an explanation I could not accept, and how could Mrs. Packard? From whose, then? If I could settle this fact I might perhaps determine to what extent its effect was dependent upon its source. The butler denied having even heard it. Was this to be believed? Did not this very denial that it was he and no other who had thus shocked the proprieties of this orderly household? It certainly seemed so; yet where all was strange this strange and incomprehensible denial of a self evident fact by the vindictive Nixon might have its source in some motive unsuggested by the circumstances. Certainly, Nixon's mistress appeared to have a great deal of confidence in him.

I wished that more had been told me about the handsome secretary. I wised that fate would give me another opportunity for seeing that gentleman and putting the same direct question to him I had put to Nixon.

Scarcely had this thought crossed my mind before a loud ring at the telephone disturbed the quiet below and I heard the secretary's voice in reply. A minute after he appeared at the foot of the stairs. His aspect was one of embarrassment, and he peered aloft in a hesitating way, as if he hardly knew how to proceed.

Taking advantage of this hesitation, I ran softly down to meet him.

"Any message for Mrs. Packard?" I asked.

He looked relieved.

"Yes, from His Honour." The mayor is unavoidably detained and may not be home till morning."

"I will tell her." Then, as he reached for his overcoat, I risked all on one venture, and enlarging a little on the facts, said:

"Excuse me, but was it you we heard laughing downstairs a few minutes ago? Mrs. Packard feared it might be some follower of the girls'."

Pausing in the act of putting on his coat, he met my look with an air of surprise.

"I am not given to laughing," he remarked; "certainly not when alone."

"But you heard this laugh?"

He shook his head. His manner was perfectly courteous; almost cordial.

"If I did, it made no impression on my mind. I am extremely busy just now, working up the mayor's speech." And with a smile and bow in every way suited to his fine appearance, he took his hat from the rack and left the house.

I drew back more mystified than ever. Which of these two men had told me a lie? One, both, or neither? Impossible to determine. As I try never to waste grey matter, I resolved to spend no further energy on this question, but simply to await the next development.

It came unexpectedly and was of an entirely different nature from any I had anticipated.

I had not retired, not knowing at what moment the mayor might return or what I might be called upon to do when he did. It will be remembered that one of my windows looked out upon the next house. I approached it to see if my ever watchful neighbors had retired. Their window was dark, but I observed what was of much more vital interest to me at that moment. It was that I was not the only one awake and stirring in our house. The light from a room diagonally below me poured in a stream on the opposite wall, and it took but a moment's consideration for me to decide that the shadow I saw crossing and recrossing this brilliant square was cast by Mrs. Packard.

My first impulse was to draw back—(that was the lady's impulse not quite crushed out of me by the occupation circumstances had compelled me to take up)—my next, to put out my own light and seat myself at the post of observation thus afforded me. The excuse I gave myself for this was plausible enough. Mrs. Packard had been placed in my charge and, if all was not right with her, it was my business to know it.

Accordingly I sat and watched each movement of my mysterious charge as it was outlined on the tell-tale wall before me, and saw enough in one half-hour to convince me that something very vigorous and purposeful was going on in the room so determinedly closed against every one, even her own husband.

What?

The moving silhouette of her figure, which was all I could see, was not perfect enough in detail for me to determine. She was busy at some occupation which took her from one end of the room to the other; but after watching her shadow for an hour I was no surer than at first what that occupation was. It was a serious one, I saw, and now and then the movements I watched gave evidence of frantic haste, but their character stood unrevealed till suddenly the thought came:

"She is rummaging bureau drawers and emptying boxes,—in other words, packing a bag or trunk."

Should I be witness to a flight? I thought it very likely, especially when I heard the faint sound of a door opening below, followed by the swish of silken skirts. I recalled Mayor Packard's fears and began to suspect that they were not groundless.

This called for action, and I was about to open my door and rush out when I was deterred by the surprising discovery that the steps I heard were coming up rather than going down, and that in another moment she would be in the hall outside, possibly on her way to the nursery, possibly with the intention of coming to my own room.

Greatly taken aback, I stood with my ear to the door, listening intently. Yes, she has reached the top of the stairs and is stopping—no, she passes the nursery door, she is coming my way. What shall I say to her—how account for my comfortable wrapper and the fact that I have not yet been abed? Had I but locked my door! Could I but lock it now, unseen and unheard before the nearing step should pause! But the very attempt was folly; I must stand my ground and—Ah, the step has paused, but not at my door. There is a third one on this hall, communicating, as I knew, with a covered staircase leading to the attic. It was at this she stopped and it was up this staircase she went as warily and softly as its creaking boards would allow; and while I marvelled as to what had taken her aloft so late, I heard her step over my head and knew that she had entered the room directly above mine.

Striking a match, I consulted my watch. It was just ten minutes to three. Hardly knowing what my duty was in the circumstances, I blew out the match and stood listening while the woman who was such a mystery to all her friends moved about overhead in much the same quick and purposeful way as had put life into her shadow while she was in her own room.

"Packing! Nothing less and nothing more," was my now definite decision. "That is a trunk she is dragging forward. What a hurry she is in, and how little she cares whether anybody hears her!"

So little did she care that during the next few minutes of acute attention I distinguished the flinging down of article after article on to the floor, as well as many other movements betraying haste or irritation.

Suddenly I heard her give a bound, then the sound of a heavy lid falling and then, after a minute or two of complete silence, the soft pat-pat of her slippered feet descending the stair.

Half-past three.

Waiting till she was well down the second flight, I pushed my door ajar and, flying down the hall, peered over the balustrade in time to see her entering her room. She had a lighted candle in her hand and by its flame I caught a full glimpse of her figure. To my astonishment and even to my dismay she was still in the gown she had refused to have me unlace—a rich yellow satin in which she must have shone resplendent a few hours before. She had not even removed the jewels from her neck. Whatever had occupied her, whatever had taken her hither and thither through the house, moving furniture out of her way, lifting heavy boxes, opening dust covered trunks, had been of such moment to her as to make her entirely oblivious of the rich and delicate apparel she thus wantonly sacrificed. But it was not this alone which attracted my attention. In her hand she held a paper, and the sight of that paper and the way she clutched it rather disturbed my late conclusions. Had her errand been one of search rather than of arrangement? and what was this crumpled letter the sole result of a half-hour's ransacking in an attic room at the dead of night? I was fain to think so, for in the course of another half-hour the light went out.

Relieved that she had not left the house, I was still anxious as to the cause of her strange conduct.

Mayor Packard did not come in till daybreak. He found me waiting for him in the lower hall.

"Well?" he eagerly inquired.

"Mrs. Packard is asleep, I hope. A shrill laugh, ringing through the house shortly after her return, gave her a nervous shock and she begged that she might be left undisturbed till morning."

He turned from hanging up his overcoat, and gave me a short stare.

"A laugh!" he repeated. "Who could have laughed like that? We are not a very jolly crowd here."

"I don't know, sir. I thought it must have been either Mr. Steele or Nixon, the butler, but each denied it. There was no one else in this part of the house."

The mayor's shoulders rose.

"Mrs. Packard is very sensitive just now," he remarked. Then as he turned away toward the library door: "I will throw myself on a lounge. I have but an hour or two of rest before me, as I have my preparations to make for leaving town on the early morning train. Come to my office at nine o'clock, Miss Saunders. I shall have some final instructions to give you."

CHAPTER VIII.

THE PARAGRAPH

I was up betimes. Would Mrs. Packard appear at breakfast? I hardly thought so. Yet who knows? Such women have great recuperative powers, and from one so mysteriously affected anything might be expected. Ready at eight, I hastened down to the second floor to find the lady concerning whom I had had those doubts, awaiting me on the threshold of her room. She was carefully dressed and looked pale enough to have been up for hours. An envelope was in her hand, and the smile which hailed my approach was cold and constrained.

"Good morning," said she. "Let us go down. Let us go down together. I slept wretchedly and do not feel very strong. When did Mr. Packard come in?"

"Late. He went directly to the library. He said that he had but a short time in which to rest, and would take what sleep he could get on the lounge, when I told him of your very natural nervous attack."

She sighed—a sigh which came from no inconsiderable depths—then with a proud and resolute gesture preceded me down-stairs.

Her husband was already in the breakfast room. I could hear his voice as we turned at the foot of the stairs. Mrs. Packard, hearing it, too, drew herself up still more firmly and was passing bravely forward, when Nixon's grey head protruded from the doorway and I heard him say:

"There's company for breakfast, ma'am. His Honour could not spare Mr. Steele and asked me to set a place for him."

I noted a momentary hesitation on Mrs. Packard's part, then she silently acquiesced and we both passed on. In another instant we were receiving the greetings and apologies of the gentlemen. If Mr. Steele had expected that his employer's wife would offer him her hand, he was disappointed.

"I am happy to welcome one who has proved so useful to my husband," she remarked with cool though careful courtesy as we all sat down at the table, and without waiting for an answer, she proceeded to pour the coffee with a proud grace which gave no hint of the extreme feeling by which I had seen her moved the night before.

Had I known her better I might have found something extremely unnatural in her manner and the very evident restraint she put upon herself through the whole meal; but not having any acquaintance with her ordinary bearing under conditions purely social, I was thrown out of my calculations by the cold ease with which she presided at her end of the table, and the smile with which she greeted all remarks, whether volunteered by her husband or by his respectful but affable secretary. I noticed, however, that she ate little.

Backache Banished.

Thousands of men and women are suffering from weak, lame and aching backs, and many of them unable to do any work for the pain.

The stitches, twitches and twinges are bad enough and give enough misery, but, back of the backache, and the cause of it all are the disordered kidneys crying out in warning through the back.

Backache is kidney ache, and there's serious trouble ahead for you if you neglect it.

Mrs. Jack Mason, Springhill, N.B., writes:—"I have been suffering from backache for a very long time. I tried everything and did everything, but still I would suffer. One day I was looking over your Almanac, and saw your advertisement for Doan's Kidney Pills, so I got 5 boxes, and I am glad to say that they brought me back to life again, and from now on I will never be without them."

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50 cents per box, or 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

If ordering direct specify "Doan's."

WAS A CONFIRMED DYSPEPTIC

How Finds it a Pleasure to Enjoy Meals

Here is a case which seemed as bad and as hopeless as yours can possibly be. This is the experience of Mr. H. J. Brown, 384 Bathurst St., Toronto, in his own words:

"Gentlemen—I have much pleasure in mentioning to you the benefits received from your Na-Dru-Co Dyspepsia Tablets and can cheerfully recommend them. I simply had confirmed dyspepsia with all its wretched symptoms, and tried about all the advertised cures with no success. You have in Na-Dru-Co Dyspepsia Tablets the best curative agent I could find. It is now such a pleasure to enjoy meals with their consequent nourishment that I want to mention this for the benefit of others."

The fact that a lot of prescriptions or so-called "cures" have failed to help you is no sign that you have got to go on suffering. Try Na-Dru-Co Dyspepsia Tablets and see how quickly this sterling remedy will give you relief and start your stomach working properly. If it doesn't help you, you get your money back. 50c a box at your druggist's. Compounded by the National Drug and Chemical Co. of Canada, Limited, Montreal. 141

FOUR WINTERS OF RHEUMATISM

Cured of Sciatica And Muscular Rheumatism By "Fruit-a-tives"

RIDGETOWN, ONT., May 21st, 1913.

"Fruit-a-tives" cured me of Rheumatism. It was the only medicine that made any impression on me. I was a terrible sufferer from Rheumatism. I was laid up for four winters with Sciatica and Muscular Rheumatism, and was completely crippled.

Some neighbor of mine told me that "Fruit-a-tives" helped him, and I started in to take them. I used "Fruit-a-tives" faithfully for two years, taking them every day as I saw they were doing me good, and the results were marvellous.

For over two years, I have been completely free from any Rheumatic Pains whatever, and I give "Fruit-a-tives" the credit." W. H. RACHER.

CHRIST'S COMING WORLD'S END 1914

Not Pastor Russell's View at All ---He Explains His View.

THE BIBLE IS MISUNDERSTOOD

Canadian Minister Quoted—"The Earth Abideth Forever"—Christ Will Not Come Again as a Man, According to the Bible—Pastor Russell Believes 1914 Marks a Great Change of Dispensation—Christ's Parousia Precedes His Epiphania.

[The matter under this heading is supplied by the Pastor Russell Lecture Bureau, who conduct the Brooklyn Tabernacle (unsectarian) Bible Studies, and who have arranged for its insertion.]

March 22.—The widely known Pastor Russell whose great and free PHOTO DRAMA OF CREATION is being set before the people daily in many large cities and everywhere arousing enthusiasm for God, religion and the Bible, chose for his text to-day, "Thus it shall be in the coming (Parousia—presence) of the Son of Man; they shall be eating drinking, planting and marrying, and know not." (Matthew 24:37, 38.) He said in part:

I was prompted in the selection of my text for to-day by reading an extract from the sermon of a Canadian minister delivered recently. In it he declared that 1914 would witness the Second Coming of Christ, etc. His statement allowed the inference that he holds the view common to nearly all the creeds; namely, that the earth is to be burned up and the human race blotted out; and that, incidentally, Christ will come a second time, to see that none of the Church are included in the destruction.

To my understanding, all such expectations are wholly unscriptural, untrue, misleading, and hindrances to a right understanding of the Bible. They belong to the Dark Ages, when public teachers seemed to lose all appreciation of poetic language, figurative language, mental imagery. They belong to the time when Christ's references to Gehenna Fire, which burned outside the wall of Jerusalem, were understood to mean an eternity of torture for all except the saintly few. They belong to the time when Jesus' words respecting the cutting off of the right hand and the plucking out of a right eye were misunderstood, and taken literally.

St. Peter's words are generally urged to be the foundation for the theory that the world will be destroyed by literal fire at the Second Coming of Christ, when the heavens shall be on fire, and the earth also and the things therein shall be burned up (2 Peter 3:10.) A literal interpretation here overlooks the fact that St. Peter, speaking of the very same time, in Acts 3:19-21, declares that Times of Restitution and blessing—not times of world-burning—will follow the Second Coming of Jesus. It also overlooks the fact that St. Peter and the Apostles, as well as the Master, frequently used the word fire in a symbolic sense, to represent tribulation. Thus St. Peter, addressing the Church, says, "Think it not strange concerning the fiery trial that shall try you."

St. Paul says that the fire of that Day shall try the work of every man (the Church), of what sort it is. Those who have built with gold, silver, precious stones (the promises of God's Word), shall be fire-proof in that Day; while those who have built with the wood, hay and stubble of human tradition—Higher Criticism, Human Evolution, etc.—will find their faith structure amenable to the fire; and they will suffer the loss of faith and have tribulations accordingly. Yet, the Apostle explains, such will themselves be saved, but these very fiery trials will destroy their misconceptions. They will be saved because, in spite of their errors, they built their faith upon Christ.—1 Corinthians 3:11-15.

The Apostle, however, urged that all should build with gold, silver and precious stones—characteristics which would enable them to pass through the fire of that Day unscathed—more than conquerors." Similarly, Jesus referred to a testing of faith, by the figure of a flood, telling that those who built upon the sand would suffer loss, but that those who built upon the Rock would be safe. All these Scriptures, however, these references to fiery trials, etc., belong to the end of the Age—not the end of the world.

The Bible teaches that in God's great Plan He has provided various epochs, or ages, each for the accomplishment of its own special work; as for instance, the Jewish Age with its work, and the Gospel Age with its work, to be followed by the Millennial Age and its still different work. The Bible declares that "the earth abideth forever" (Ecclesiastes 1:4); that "God created it not in vain; He formed it to be inhabited." (Isaiah 45:18.) The earth has never yet been inhabited. There are immense tracts of country still unoccupied. The Divine Plan for the earth has not yet reached consummation. It will require the thousand years of Messiah's glorious Kingdom Power to bring the world out of present sin and death conditions, and into the glorious conditions of Millennial blessings and Restitution, of which the Scriptures so frequently speak, and which St. Peter declares God has spoken by the mouth of all His holy Prophets.

So then, the basis for thinking of the end of the world, now or ever, is purely a misunderstanding, due largely to the fact that our English translation uses the world world where it would more properly have used the word Age, Epoch, or order of things. In a word, the present order of things, of which the Scriptures declare Satan is the prince, or ruler, is not to be perpetual; it is to pass away. A new order of things, under the control of Messiah, the Prince of Light, is to take the place of the present reign of the Prince of Darkness. A reign of righteousness and life is to succeed the present reign of sin and death, according to St. Paul.—Romans 5:17, 21.

The Bible everywhere represents that Christ left a Heavenly glory when He came to earth nearly nineteen centuries ago. "The Logos was made flesh and dwelt among us." The Bible explains that the necessity for this humiliation, this leaving the glory and taking a bondsman's form, lay in the fact that God had pronounced a death sentence upon man, which mankind were paying and from which they could not be released unless some one would become their redeemer and meet the penalty for them—a death penalty, not an eternal torment penalty, of which the Scriptures know nothing.

The Bible nowhere tells that Jesus took the human nature to keep it forever, and to return with it to Heaven, where it would be completely out of order and out of place. The Bible teaches, on the contrary, that "flesh and blood cannot inherit the Kingdom of God" (1 Corinthians 15:50); and that Jesus was made flesh merely "that He by the grace of God should taste death for every man" (Hebrews 2:9); and that after doing this work He would "ascend up where He was before" (John 6:62). St. Paul assures us that this, the Divine Program, has been carried out. After telling of our Lord's obedience to the Father's will in humbling Himself to death, even the death of the cross, he adds, "God hath highly exalted Him"—"far above angels, principalities and powers."—Philippians 2:5-11; Ephesians 1:20-23.
